

FASHION

FASHION

THE DEFINITIVE HISTORY OF COSTUME AND STYLE

LONDON, NEW YORK, MELBOURNE, MUNICH, AND DELHI

DORLING KINDERSLEY

Senior Editor Kathryn Hennessy

Senior Art Editor Gadi Farfour

Project Art Editor Amy Orsborne

Editors Anna Fischel, Ann Baggaley, Scarlett O'Hara, Alison Sturgeon, Camilla Gersh, Ashwin Khurana

Designers Paul Drislane, Kirsty Tizzard

Art Worker Philip Fitzgerald

Glossary Illustrator Katie John

Editorial Assistants Alexandra Beeden, Damilare Olugbode

Photographers Gary Ombler, Paul Self

Picture Researchers Liz Moore, Sarah Smithies

DK Picture Library Claire Bowers, Emma Shepherd, Claire Cordier

Database Rob Laidler, David Roberts

Jacket Designer Mark Cavanagh

US Senior Editor Shannon Beatty

US Editor Jane Perlmutter

US Consultant Carol Pelletier Production Editor Ben Marcus

Repro Opus Multimedia Services, Delhi

Producer Sophie Argyris

Managing Editor Esther Ripley

Managing Art Editor Karen Self

Publisher Laura Buller

Art Director Phil Ormerod

Associate Publishing Director Liz Wheeler

Publishing Director Jonathan Metcalf

DK INDIA

Senior Art Editors Anjana Nair, Chhaya Sajwan Art Editors Neha Sharma, Nidhi Mehra, Supriya Mahajan, and Shipra Jain Assistant Art Editors Vidit Vashisht, Namita, Niyati Gosain, and Payal Rosalind Malik

Design Managers Arunesh Talapatra and Sudakshina Basu

Senior Editors Garima Sharma, Sreshtha Bhattacharya

Editor Roma Malik

Assistant Editors Archana Ramachandran

Editorial Manager Pakshalika Jayaprakash

DTP Designers Nand Kishor Acharya, Mohammad Usman, Dheeraj Arora, and Anita Yadav

DTP Manager Balwant Singh

Production Manager Pankaj Sharma

Picture Research Nivisha Sinha and Sakshi Saluja

Smithsonian

Smithsonian Project Coordinator Ellen Nanney

First American Edition, 2012 Published in the United States by DK Publishing 375 Hudson Street New York, New York 10014 12 13 14 15 16 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 181303—October 2012

Copyright © 2012 Dorling Kindersley Limited All rights reserved.

Without limiting the rights under copyright reserved above, no part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in or introduced into a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form, or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocoping, recording, or otherwise), without the prior written permission of both the copyright owner and the above publisher of this book.

Published in Great Britain by Dorling Kindersley Limited.

A catalog record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

ISBN: 978-0-7566-9835-5

DK books are available at special discounts when purchased in bulk for sales promotions, premiums, fund-raising, or educational use. For details, contact: DK Publishing Special Markets, 375 Hudson Street, New York, New York 10014 or SpecialSales@dk.com

Printed and bound in China by Leo Paper Products

Discover more at www.dk.com

CHAPTER 1

PREHISTORY-600CE

THE ANCIENT WORLD

Time line	12–13
From Function to Identity	14–15
Ancient Egypt	16–17
Profile: Queen Nefertiti	18–19
Minoan Culture	20–21
Ladies in Blue	22–23
Classical Greece	24–25
Fluid Drapery	26–27
Prowess and Protection	28–29
Style in the East	30–31
Etruscans	32–33
Roman Empire	34–35
Byzantine Style	36–37
Dyes and Pigments	38–39
In Detail: Short Tunic and Peplos	40-41
Style

CHAPTER 2

600-1449

MEDIEVAL ROMANCE AND TRADE

Time line	44–45
The Age of Migrations	46–47
The Early Middle Ages	48–49
Trends in Tunics	50-51
Courtly Love and Crusades	52-53
Profile: Eleanor of Aquitaine	54–55
Priests and the People	56–57
The East in the West	58-59
Social Statements	60-61
In Detail: Cote-hardie	62–63
Fitting to the Body	64–65
Trailing Elegance	66–67
Knights in Armor	68–69
In Detail: Doublet and Hose	70-71
Regional Flair	72–73
Novelty and Luxury	74–75

CHAPTER 3

1450-1624

RENAISSANCE SPLENDOR

Time line	78–79
The Fashion Split	80–81
Rich Panoply	82–83
Renaissance Men	84–85
From Drape to Shape	86–87
New Men in a New World	88–89
In Detail: Saxony Ensemble	90–91
Custom-made Armor	92–93
Elegant Formality	94–95
Profile: Elizabeth I	96–97
Female Geometry	98–99
A New Suit	100-101
Frivolity at Court	102-103
Male Extravagance	104–105
Trading in Treasures	106–107
Symbolism and Fantasy	108–109
Practical Clothing	110-111
Ottoman Finery	112–113

CHAPTER 4

1625-1789

BAROQUE AND ROCOCO

Time line	116–117
Men in Lace	118–119
Softer Silhouettes	120-121
Doublet and Breeches	122-123
Taffeta and Lace	124–125
Profile: Henrietta Maria	126–127
Puritan Influence	128–129
Opulence Restored	130–131
Boned Bodice to Mantua	132–133
Fashion Restored	134–135
Toward the Suit	136–137
Mantuas and Petticoats	138–139
In Detail: Embroidered Mantua	140-141
Mantuas and Open Robes	142-143
In Detail: Sack Back Dress	144–145
French à la Mode	146–147
Profile: Marie-Antoinette	148–149
Baroque to Neoclassical	150–151
Macaroni to Dandy	152–153
In Detail: Streamlined Court Suit	154–155
Simpler Styling	156–157
Masquerade	158–159
Turkish Delight	160–161
Sports Dress	162–163

CONTENTS

CHAPTER 5

1790-1900

FROM REVOLUTION TO FRIVOLITY

Time line	166–167
Neoclassicism	168–169
Empire Lines	170–171
Regency Society	172–173
Regency Belles	174–175
In Detail: Regency Pelisse	176–177
Delighting in the Detail	178–179
The Evening Hourglass	180–181
Profile: Beau Brummell	182–183
The Rise of the Dandy	184–185
Regency Sportswear	186–187
Prints and Patterns	188–189
Turbans and Tight Lacing	190–191
Demure Day Dresses	192–193
Imperial Opulence	194–195
Crinolines	196–197
Profile: Charles Worth	198–199
Soft Bustles and Fishtails	200–201
In Detail: Bustle Skirt	202–203
The Rise and Fall of the Bustle	204–205
High Ruffs and Wasp Waists	206–207
In Detail: Reception Dress	208–209
Formal Wear for Men	210–211
Cult of Beauty	212–213
Sportswear for the New Woman	214–215
Men of Action	216–217
Themed Costumes	218–219

CHAPTER 6

1901-1928

LA BELLE EPOQUE AND THE JAZZ AGE

Time line	222–223
Suits for City Gentlemen	224–225
Sport and Country	226–227
Simpler Silhouettes	228–229
Women in Action	230–231
Evening and Tea Gowns	232–233
A Life of Leisure	234–235
Antifashion	236–237
Wartime Women	238–239
Toward the New Woman	240-241
Profile: Paul Poiret	242-243
Orientalism	244–245
Robes de Style	246–247
Profile: Coco Chanel	248–249
The New Knitwear	250–251
Rising Hems	252–253
Into the Jazz Age	254–255
Roaring Twenties	256–257
In Detail: Dance Dress	258–259
At the Beach	260–261
Setting Standards	262–263
Suits for All	264–265
Modernism	266–267

CHAPTER 7

1929-1946

FROM GLAMOUR TO UTILITY

Time line	270-271
Austere Times	272-273
Shimmering Gowns	274–275
Classicism	276–277
Living Sculptures	278–279
Pared Down and Sporty	280-281
Relaxing the Rules	282–283
In Detail: Plus Fours Suit	284–285
Profile: Edward VIII	286–287
The Elegant Male	288–289
Berliner Chic	290–291
Romantic Nostalgia	292–293
Dream Dresses	294–295
Profile: Schiaparelli	296–297
Women in Wartime	298–299
In Detail: Women's Legion	300-301
Menswear on Civvy Street	302-303
Fashion on Ration	304–305
Styled by Hollywood	306-307
American Ready-to-Wear	308-309
Competitive Couture	310-311

CHAPTER 8

1947-1963

OPTIMISM AND YOUTH

314–315
316–317
318–319
320–321
322–323
324–325
326–327
328–329
330–331
332–333
334–335
336–337
338–339
340–341
342–343
344–345
346–347

CHAPTER 9

1964-1979

SWINGING SIXTIES TO GLAM ROCK

Time line	350-351
Mini Magic	352-353
Profile: Twiggy	354–355
Mini Coats and Skirts	356–357
Anything Goes	358-359
Into the Space Age	360-361
Evening Selection	362–363
Profile: Biba	364–365
Menswear Goes Pop	366–367
The New Dandies	368–369
Profile: Yves Saint Laurent	370-371
Women Wear the Pants	372–373
Flower Power	374–375
Long Printed Dresses	376–377
In Detail: Jean Muir Classic	378–379
Stylish Casuals	380-381
Stage, Dance, and Party	382-383

CHAPTER 10

1980 ONWARD

THE DESIGNER DECADES

Time line	386–387
Fitness in Fashion	388–389
Profile: Vivienne Westwood	390–391
Must-have Labels	392–393
Profile: Jean Paul Gaultier	394–395
A Powerful Message	396–397
In Detail: Power Suit	398–399
Japanese Style	400-401
Profile: Comme des Garçons	402-403
Street Style	404–405
Dance Culture and Club	406–407
Runway Superstars	408–409
Minimal and Conceptual	410–411
Boho Chic and Vintage	412–413
Global Impact	414–415
Red Carpet Gowns	416–417
Profile: Alexander McQueen	418–419
A New Generation	420-421

REFERENCE

Women's Wear	422-423
Menswear	424–425
Women's Shoes	426–427
Women's Hats	428-429
Bags and Purses	430–431
Shaping the Body	432-433
Illustrated Glossary	434–463
Index and Acknowledgments	464–480

FOREWORD

Like art, music, and literature, fashion has its own rich history. While we associate fashion with an almost relentless newness, it is also in a constant dialogue with its own past: just as Picasso reverently dissected Goya, Balenciaga examined the form of medieval religious vestments; and Mick Jagger channeled Beau Brummel in much the way that Prokofiev re-framed Haydn.

While fashion historians may assert that fashion began with the development of fitted garments, and critics may argue that only a small number of wealthy individuals truly participate in the fashion system, for most of us fashion conjures an essential, perhaps innate, will to adorn and beautify our bodies, faces, and hair. Even our early human representations, the prehistoric, so-called Venus figurines, wear nonfunctional garments, string skirts that offered little protection or coverage. We see and are seen: we voraciously consume images of the human figure, inhabit or reject those images in our own self-presentation, and become ourselves the subject of further image making. The sources of representation are punctuated by personalities—men and women of style, from royalty to rock stars, designers, movie stars, and models, who epitomized "the look" of any given moment in time. Photographer Bill Cunningham's weekly "On the Street" column in The New York Times celebrates the complexity and exuberance of this complex visual reverberation.

"The main thing I love about street photography," he says, "is that you find the answers you don't see at the fashion shows. You find information for readers so they can visualize themselves." ("Bill on Bill," October 27, 2002). Whether an individual act of style takes place in the design studio, behind the camera lens, or at home in front of the mirror, it forms part of one of our culture's oldest and most participatory expressions, one which utterly shapes everyday human experience.

Susan Brown

Smithsonian consultant

Susan Brown is Associate Curator, Cooper-Hewitt, National Design Museum, Smithsonian and most recently collaborated on the exhibition and catalog Color Moves: Art and Fashion by Sonia Delaunay with Matilda McQuaid. She teaches in the Masters Program in the History of Decorative Arts and Design offered by the Museum with Parsons The New School for Design, as well as lecturing regularly for the Institute of Fine Arts at NYU. Prior to joining the Smithsonian, she designed costumes for theater, opera, and television.

CONSULTANT AUTHORS

Beatrice Behlen

La Belle Epoque and the Jazz Age/From Glamour to Utility Beatrice Behlen studied fashion design in Germany and the history of dress at the Courtauld Institute of Art.
Having lectured at art colleges and curated at Historical Royal Palaces, she is now Senior Curator of Fashion and Decorative Arts at the Museum of London.

Alison Carter

From Revolution to Frivolity
Senior Keeper of Art and Design at Hampshire Museums for 25 years (1986–2011), Alison Carter is the author of Underwear: the Fashion History and Chair of the Southern Counties Costume Society.

Hilary Davidson

Medieval Romance and Trade/Renaissance Splendor Hilary Davidson is Curator of Fashion and Decorative Arts at the Museum of London. She teaches, publishes, and lectures on topics ranging from medieval dress to cultural theory.

Rosemary Harden

Baroque and Rococo/Optimism and Youth/Swinging Sixties to Glam Rock/The Designer Decades Rosemary Harden is the curator at the Fashion Museum in Bath, where she has organized many exhibitions, including The Diana Dresses and Sport and Fashion.

Jackie Herald

The Ancient World

Jackie Herald studied at The Courtauld Institute of Art and is a former lecturer in fashion history at art colleges.

Jemima Klenk

In-house Consultant

Jemima Klenk has an MA in the history of dress from the Courtauld Institute of Art, London.

Judith Watt

General Consultant

Judith Watt is course director of the MA in fashion journalism at Kingston University, and teaches fashion history at Central St. Martin's College of Art, London.

WRITERS

Alexandra Black

A contributor to Elle, Marie Claire, and Vogue Living, Alexandra Black is the author of Ski Style, Dusk Till Dawn: a history of the evening dress, and The Party Dress: a history of fashionable occasions.

Oriole Cullen

Oriole Cullen is curator for Fashion and Textiles at the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, specializing in 20th- and 21st-century fashion.

Ann Kay

Designer and fashion icon profiles

Ann Kay has authored or contributed to around 25 books. She has an MA in art history and specializes in art, design, and cultural history.

Sally Regan

Designer and fashion icon profiles

Sally Regan has contributed to a number of Dorling Kindersley titles and is an award-winning documentary filmmaker on a range of history subjects for the BBC, Granada, and Channel Four.

Shelley Tobin

Shelley Tobin is Curator at Killerton House, Devon, and assistant curator (Costume and Textiles) at Royal Albert Memorial Museum and Art Gallery, Exeter.

Heather Vaughan

Heather Vaughan is an author and editor of fashion history publications. She writes the blog Fashion Historia and holds an MA in Visual Culture: Costume Studies from New York University.

Additional writing: Andrea Mills, Lorrie Mack, Marcus Weeks, Katie John (glossary)

ANCIENT WORLD

PREHISTORY-600CE

THE ANCIENT WORLD

he ancient world is a jigsaw of images and objects that historians are trying to piece together. Paintings, sculpture, artifacts, and scraps of clothing and jewelry all provide clues as to how people lived and dressed. Many of the early civilizations reached impressive levels of development. Sophisticated technologies and craft skills coexisted in different corners of the world, as they still do today, and influenced each other as cultures met through war, exploration, and commercial exchange. Clothing and accessories—including protective armor and talismanic jewelry—were often produced to extremely high standards. Fine linen was woven on the banks of the Nile in Egypt; sericulture from China supplied the wider world with exquisite silks; the Greeks and Romans created fantastic wool tapestries; and the Etruscans crafted ornate, tooled metalwork.

Starting points

Many shapes and styles in dress date back thousands of years, having necessity, function, and the materials available as their starting points. For example, connecting two pieces of material to form a garment may once have meant no more than using a simple fastening such as a pin or a few basic stitches, but from such crude beginnings wonderful pieces of embroidery evolved, providing decoration and reinforcement at the same time. Embroidery on traditional dress from, say, eastern Europe or southwest China is often concentrated around the neck, hem, shoulders, and wrist—the areas that are most visible and most subject to wear and tear.

Cycle of fashion

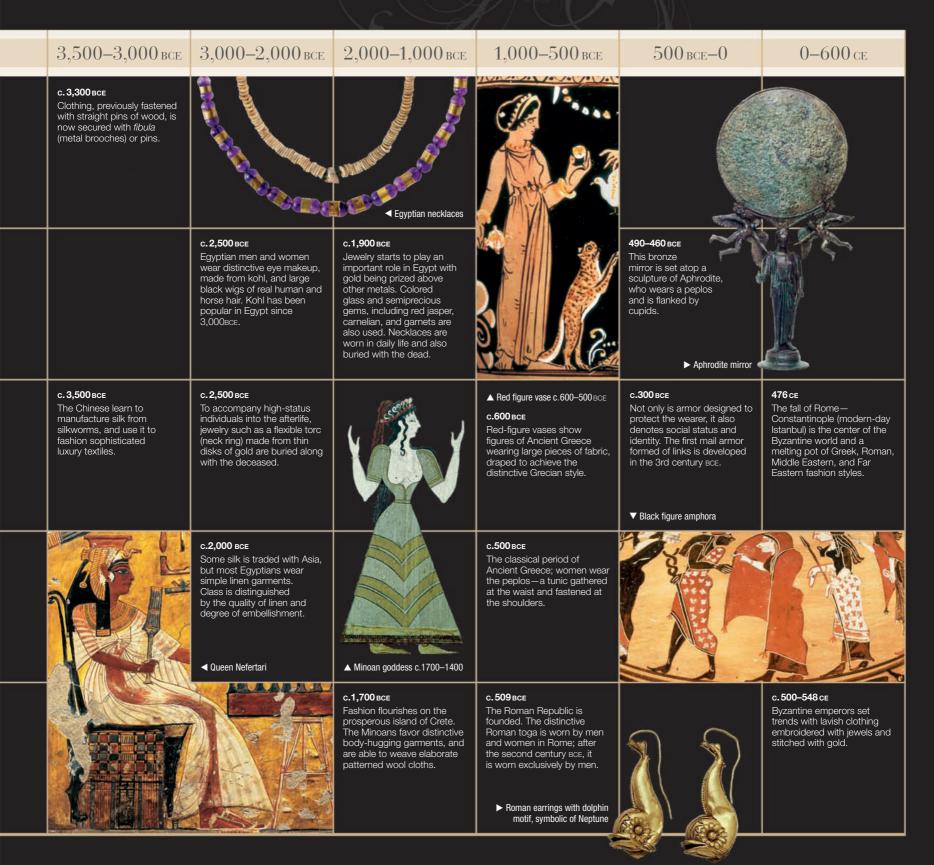

If the clothes people wore in the distant past often look remarkably modern and familiar, this is because of the way styles are continually revived and reinterpreted through cycles of history and waves of fashion. Modern designers have borrowed again and again from the styles—and style icons—of the past. Numerous examples can be listed of fashions that have had their day and gone, only to reappear with a new spin: the elegant draperies of classical Greek and Roman goddesses; Ancient Egypt's massive jewelry and the kohl-eyed, black-bobbed "Cleopatra look"; Chinese and Japanese silks and sashes; exotic Middle Eastern asymmetry and A-line cut garments; colorful, patterned textiles from India and southern Asia; and dynamic geometric, anthropomorphic patterns from pre-Columbian civilizations. From couture house to main-street store, the modern fashion world owes much to the past.

TO 10,000 BCE 10.000-4.000 BCE 4.000-3.500 BCE c. 500,000-100,000 BCE c. 10,000 BCE ▼ Egyptian sandals The first clothing, the hides The earliest surviving shoes are sandals discovered in a of animals, are worn sometimes tied on with cave in Oregon, woven from beltlike strips of hide. tree bark, fashioned at least 10.000 years ago. ▼ Stripped buffalo hide с. 10,000все Wool cloth starts with the domesticated sheep, bred for soft wool as opposed to fur. 7500-5700 BCE Dyed textiles are in use in Çatal Höyük, southern Anatolia (present-day Turkey), as evidenced by traces of red dye, possibly ocher, found at с. 4,000 все These thonged leather sandals, c. 6,000 years old, are part of daily wear in Ancient Egypt 7500-5700 BCE Seals such as this one from the settlement of Catal. Höyük, Turkey, are used during the Neolithic period to stamp decorative designs in dye onto skin or cloth C. 40.000 BCE People punch holes in skins and furs, lacing them together. The earliest bone needle dates to c. 30,000 BCE. ► Neolithic baked clay seal c.30,000 BCE Cave painters use pigments such as ocher, hematite, and charcoal to color their art. and probably to decorate their own bodies too. Prehistoric rock art, Acacus Flax is the predominant fiber used to create clothing in Egypt.

We live not according to reason, but according to fashion.

SENECA, ROMAN PHILOSOPHER, 1ST CENTURY CE

FROM FUNCTION TO IDENTITY

or Scythian nomads in Asia, Sumerians in Mesopotamia (now Iraq), Nubians in Africa, and the earliest Chinese dynasty, the picture of early clothing continues to emerge from archaeological sites. Although little cloth survives, there are impressions of prehistoric textiles in pottery, and bone sewing needles, reindeer horn buttons, amber necklaces, and wooden weaving sticks are found. Where animal and vegetal fibers exist, they suggest that rudimentary clothes, skins, and furs were largely uncut and often unsewn, fixed by a pin or a tie-cord. When warp-weighted looms came into use, possibly as early as the Neolithic period, a semicircle or T-shaped tunic could be woven. Textile technology determined the shape and degree of stretch, durability, and warmth of garments. Stitching was used to strengthen garments, for decoration, and to express identity. Climate and lifestyle also dictated attire—for example, nomadic Steppe men and women wore trousers for riding.

HELMETS

The earliest helmets were leather, followed by metal helmets, fashioned first from bronze and then iron. Ancient helmets could be simple conical or hemispherical shapes, or more elaborate, with additional guards for the nose, cheeks, and neck. Helmets provided protection, but also an opportunity for decoration and display, with detailing on the metalwork, such as animal motifs, or topped with crests. Celtic crests could be extremely tall, and warriors were known to fix figural metal pieces, feathers, or horsehair plumes to their helmets. Some intricately patterned and adorned helmets were created solely for ceremonial purposes.

A Celtic Iron Age horned helmet 150–50BCE, made from riveted sheet bronze pieces. It may originally have been adorned with red glass.

Helmet

Bonds of prisoner

Woven

sash

patterned Elaborate

with tassel

loincloth

border

Sumerian dress The moon god Nannar reigns in a detail from the Sumerian Stele of Ur-Nammu, c.2060BCE. Kaunakes cloth started out as goat or sheep skin with long hair turned outward. Gradually cloth was woven with added tufts to imitate this effect.

barefoot

Chinese warrior A terra cotta warrior from Emperor Oin Shihuangdi's tomb, China, c.210BCE kneels. His armor is of laced plates, made of either bronze or hardened leather. The scarf is one of the earliest examples of men's neckwear. Bone, stone, and shell jewelry survive from prehistoric times, and were probably worn as marks of status or symbolic protection. As metalworking evolved, greater sophistication in design emerged. Gold was prized and items were often buried with the dead, such as the lunulae, collars of beaten gold, or three thousand years almost all clothing worn by the ancient Egyptians was of linen, made from flax grown in the Nile Valley. The fabric suited the hot climate because it was cool and airy. Clothes were very simple in shape, with minimal cutting of cloth. Men wore a schenti cloth wrapped around the hips which hung in folds in front. Women wore a kalasiris (sheathlike dress), often with detachable sleeves. The mss (bag-shirt) was worn in the Middle Kingdom and later became general wear for men, women, and children. The silhouette was influenced by two key factors: the fineness and finish of the linen—either left with a natural crimp after laundering, or (in the New Kingdom) arranged in crisp pleats—and by the wearing of decorative collars and belts. These accessories were rich in color and texture.

3150BCE-30CE

ANCIENT EGYPT

Indigo-

dyed wig

Beaded dress This bead-net dress from about 2400BCE is made of 3,000 cylindrical and disk-shaped colored beads. It is decorated with shells and breast caps. A dancing girl may have worn it for entertaining at banquets.

Queen Nefertari On this fresco in the Valley of the Queens, Thebes, Queen Nefertari wears the finest linen, which is almost transparent. She has an elaborate headdress featuring a gilded figure of a vulture, as well as a gold collar.

Priestly costume This statuette of a priest from the 20th dynasty (c.1187–1064BCE) shows his pleated robe, which may have had fringed ends. There are traces of kohl around his eyes.

sandals

Box of offerings for the gods

Ceremonial dress In this wooden with a beadwork collar. Typically for sculpture from Thebes, c.1900_{BCE}, a female bearer wears a beaded dress

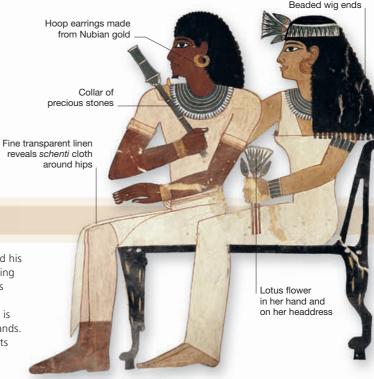

Kohl accentuates eves

ANCIENT EGYPT

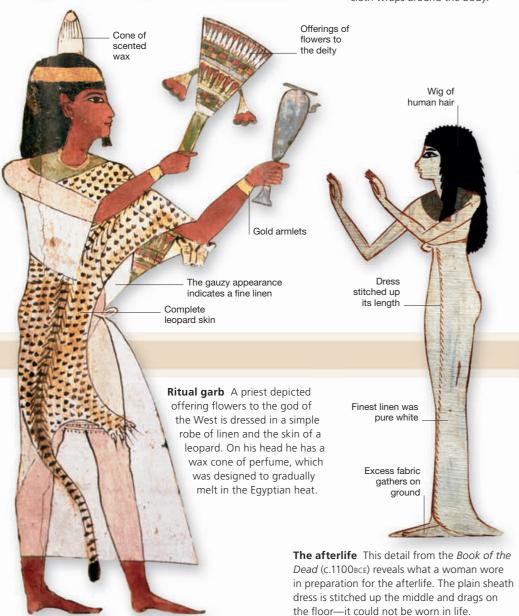

Heavily jeweled pectoral (wide collar)

Finely pleated linen kalasiris

Royal robes Tutankhamun and his wife, Ankhesenamun, are wearing elaborate headdresses and wigs dyed with indigo in this image (c.1330_{BCE}). The pharaoh's robe is tied at the waist with ornate bands. Ankhesenamun's robe has pleats falling in different directions, showing how a long piece of cloth wraps around the body.

Princely robes A mural of a prince and his wife from the Tomb of Senneferi, Thebes, shows the couple wearing wigs. Elaborate wigs were made of human hair attached to a net. Their straight, plain linen robes contrast with the decorative collars, armlets, and earrings they are wearing.

Jewelry was worn from top to bottom by wealthy Egyptian men and women—and even by their sacred animals. Always colorful, the pieces featured motifs from the natural world, including green palm leaves, white lotus flowers, and yellow mandrake fruits. Gold came from Nubia (present-day Ethiopia), and silver was rarer and more expensive than gold. Semiprecious stones included lapis lazuli (imported from Afghanistan), green and red jasper, amethyst, cornelian, turquoise, and quartz. Glass and glazed composite were used to imitate precious stones. Steatite, a soft stone, was carved into small objects, including pendants and scarabs.

JEEN NEFERTITI

One of the world's most famous images

(c.1350 BCE, Egyptian Museum, Berlin), Nefertiti wears a flat-topped crown with a decorative ribbon and the remains of a uraeus—a protective cobra and royal symbol-on the front. Reddened lips and kohl-rimmed eyes typify the Egyptian love of makeup, while a decorative collar circles her neck and shoulders.

SENSUAL DRAPERY ▷

This red sandstone sculpture from the 14th century BCE is thought to be of Nefertiti. The contemporary garment style—finely pleated linen gathered at a point under the bust and extended over one shoulder—showcases a voluptuously hipped body symbolic of fertility

The Egyptian Queen Nefertiti—whose name translates as "a beautiful woman has come"—is famed for possessing both political influence and great beauty. She was the wife of Akhenaten (named after his worship of the sun disk, Aten), who reigned over 18th-dynasty Ancient Egypt in the 14th century BCE, during the New Kingdom era, and created a glittering city at Amarna. Nefertiti's allure is heightened by mystery—she seems to have disappeared without trace and theories abound about her fate.

Dressing a goddess

Contemporary statues and reliefs depict a woman with a striking face, and some show a curvaceous form highlighted by clinging garments. Such images would have been idealized according to the era's spiritual values. Nefertiti (along with her six daughters) would have constituted a living fertility goddess, emphasized by those images that portray her as wide hipped or in tight clothes; surviving evidence suggests that contemporary garments were in fact looser than depicted.

Nefertiti's clothing trademarks include a distinctive tall, straight-sided and flat-topped crown worn exclusively by her (left). Her garments were in the fine, pleated linen worn by New Kingdom royals and often depicted as being so fine that it became transparent—an aid to showing off the divine body. The linen was probably thicker in reality. Images of Nefertiti show how Egyptian linen lent itself to draping, folding, and well-defined pleating. Ancient Egyptian styles remained similar for centuries, but during the 18th dynasty in which Nefertiti lived, a more complex draping of larger pieces of fabric developed (alongside the basic kalasaris sheath).

Nefertiti is depicted wearing long, fine tunics draped in ways typical of New Kingdom times. Frequently the material's gathering appears to center on one point, often close to the bust, creating a distinctive high-waisted shape; she appears with and without sleeves. A famous painted limestone statue of the royal couple, hand in hand, from around 1340 BCE, shows Nefertiti in a long, pleated linen tunic (often called a haik), caught between the waist and bust, gathered to produce undefined sleeves, and clinging especially closely to the lower body. Since dyeing linen is difficult and it was the staple fiber, Egyptian clothing tends to be white. Rich color was added with accessories by most levels of society.

An icon for the modern age

More than 3,500 years have elapsed yet Nefertiti and all things Egyptian continue to inspire today's designers. The seminal blue-crowned bust (far left) was > unearthed in 1912 and made its way to Berlin's Egyptian Museum, where it remains. Upon its Berlin unveiling, in 1923, this arresting image had an immediate impact on the public, cementing a fascination for all things Egyptian that had been fired the year before by the discovery of the tomb of boy-pharaoh Tutankhamun. "Egyptomania" gripped fashion design of the Art Deco era, from scarab jewelry to flowing, draped dresses, exotic embroidery, pyramid and lotus-flower motifs, dramatic deep headbands, and a love of Nile-green and bright blues. There was even a mummy wrap dress in the 1920s, an idea interpreted afresh in the skintight bandage dresses of the 2000s. Flappers' love of dark hair, red lips, and darkly outlined eyes was part of Egyptomania, and would most likely have been encouraged by Nefertiti's famed bust.

1550 BCE Start of 18th dynasty, which brings in more complex, pleated garments

O 1550 BCE

c.1353 BCE King Akhenaten's reign begins, with Nefertiti as his wife c.1350 BCE Nefertiti appears on Theban reliefs

> 1340s BCE ▷ Akhenaten's court moves to Amarna. Nefertiti's image shows her in colorful jewelry similar to this brooch with sacred motifs such as falcons and scarabs

1295 BCE End of 18th dynasty

c.1340 BCE Nefertiti

c.1335 BCE Akhenaten's reign ends

1923 ▷ Unveiling of Nefertiti bust in Berlin bolsters Art Deco-era Egyptomania. Egyptian motifs appear on 1920s dresses, jewelry, and ornaments

1912 cE Nefertiti bust unearthed by Ludwig Borchardt

O 1350 BCE

O 1340 BCE

O 1335 BCE

O 1295 BCE

O 1920 CE

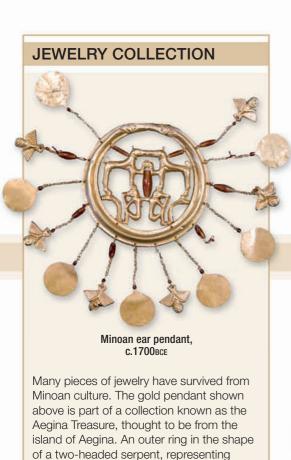

c.3000-1500bce

MINOAN CULTURE

entered on the island of Crete, the Minoan civilization was at its height around 1600BCE; it was advanced and prosperous with widespread trade contacts. Minoan dress from this isolated island society stands out among other ancient European Bronze Age cultures for its cut and stitched body-hugging garments. The small, cinched waist, a key feature of both male and female attire, was emphasized in women by the hats, hairstyles, and embellished sleeves worn above, and the wide, flounced skirts below. Men wore peaked caps, wrapped loincloths around their hips, and showed off their bare torsos—although tunics appeared in the later years of Minoan civilization. The art of weaving complicated, patterned wool cloths flourished on the peaceful, wealthy island and clothing was more elaborate than that of later mainland Greek people. Minoan ideas influenced fashion in Egypt, Mycenae (Ancient Greece), and farther afield.

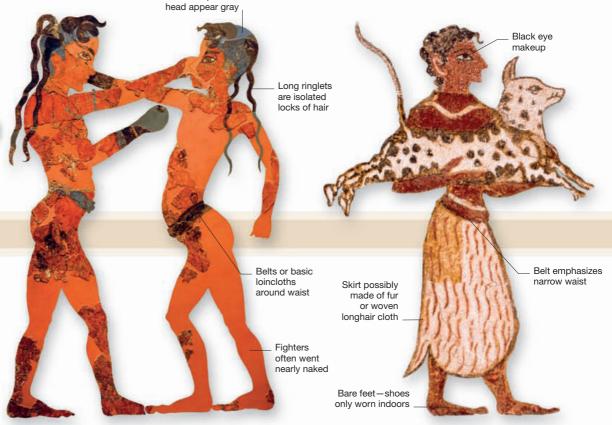

longevity, encircles paired leopards and monkeys. Radiating strings of beads are decorated with sun disks and birds.

Fresco from Thira In a detail from a 16th-century BCE fresco from the island of Thira (also known as Thera or Santorini), two boys fight in the nude, wearing just boxing gloves and a belt. Similarly to women, they use eye makeup and wear their hair in ringlets.

Priest, Hagia Triada sarcophagus Part of a funerary scene painted on a stone coffin found on Crete, c.1400_{BCE}, this priest offers an animal as a gift to the dead. His clothes are probably made of animal hair and skin.

MINOAN CULTURE

IN BLUF

The Minoan civilization was named after the legendary King Minos, whose supposed palace of Knossos on the island of Crete was excavated by British archaeologist Arthur Evans at the turn of the 20th century. Among the discoveries at Knossos were the fragments of dynamic frescoes depicting sports events and also various scenes portraying both men and women taking part in everyday life.

With their oiled, ringleted hair and open-fronted, tightwaisted bodices, the three Minoan ladies display the styles peculiar to their culture. Their hairdressed locks are draped with beads and clipped in with thin metal headbands (fillets). They wear delicate bracelets and hold the bodice tops together with more accessories. The modern restoration highlights the complex woven textiles Crete was famous for.

Little of the original paintings has survived. In the 1920s Evans employed Dutch architect and artist Piet de Jong to assemble the fragments, and reconstitute the rest. At that time illustrators of chic fashion journals were setting models against backdrops of Mediterranean resorts, and stylized folk embroidery was influencing textile patterns. The restoration of the frescoes was criticized—perhaps with some justification—for being overly influenced by current fashion tastes.

It is impossible to disregard the suspicion that their painters have tempered their zeal for accurate reconstruction with a somewhat inappropriate predilection for covers of Vogue.

EVELYN WAUGH, 1920s

SWALL PAINTING, KNOSSOS, C.1600BCE

Output

Description:

□ WALL PAINTING, KNOSSOS, C.1600BCE

□ WALL PAINTING, WNOSSOS, C.1600BCE

□ WALL PAINTING, WNOSSOS, C.1600BCE

□ WALL PAINTING, WNOSSOS, C.1600BCE

□ WALL PAINTING

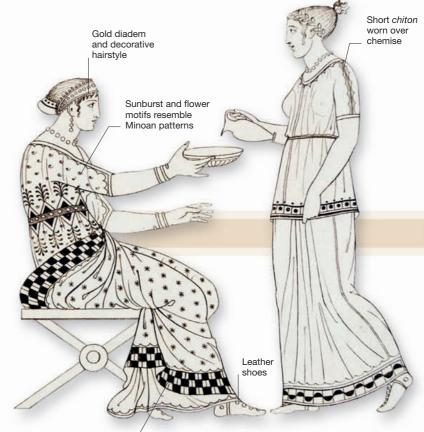

□ WA

These ladies of the Minoan court display their wealth with elaborate necklaces, bracelets, and hair ornaments.

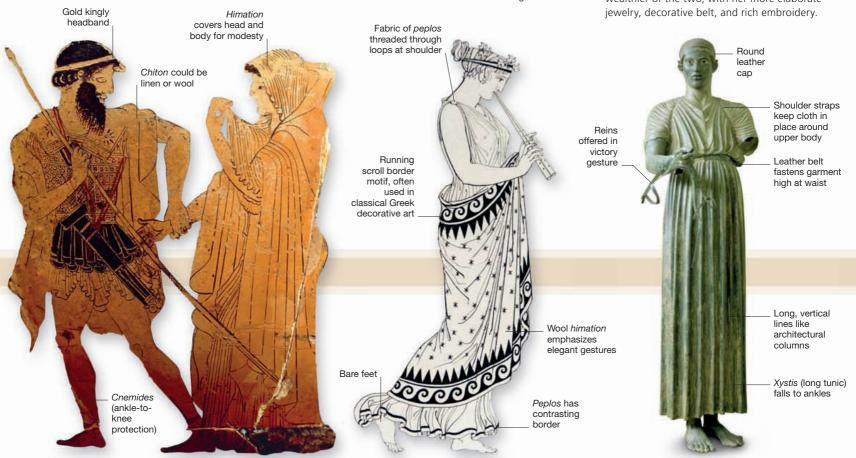

C.500 - 323BCE

CLASSICAL GREECE

lothing worn during the classical period of ancient Greece was made of simple elements draped to sophisticated effect. Loose-fitting and free-flowing, it was adaptable to different seasons. The key garment for both men and women was the chiton, a tunic comprising two rectangles of cloth attached at the shoulders and sides. It could be arranged in many ways, and cut to different lengths. Worn over the chiton was a cloaklike garment, the himation; this was made of heavy material for outdoors, or of lighter cloth for a more fashionable effect indoors or in warmer weather. Women also wore an alternative version of the tunic, called a peplos, which was gathered in at the waist and partially fastened at the top of the shoulders, allowing the free corners to drape. The chlamys, a cape shaped like the clamshell it was named after, was originally worn by soldiers but, like many functional garments, became a fashion item.

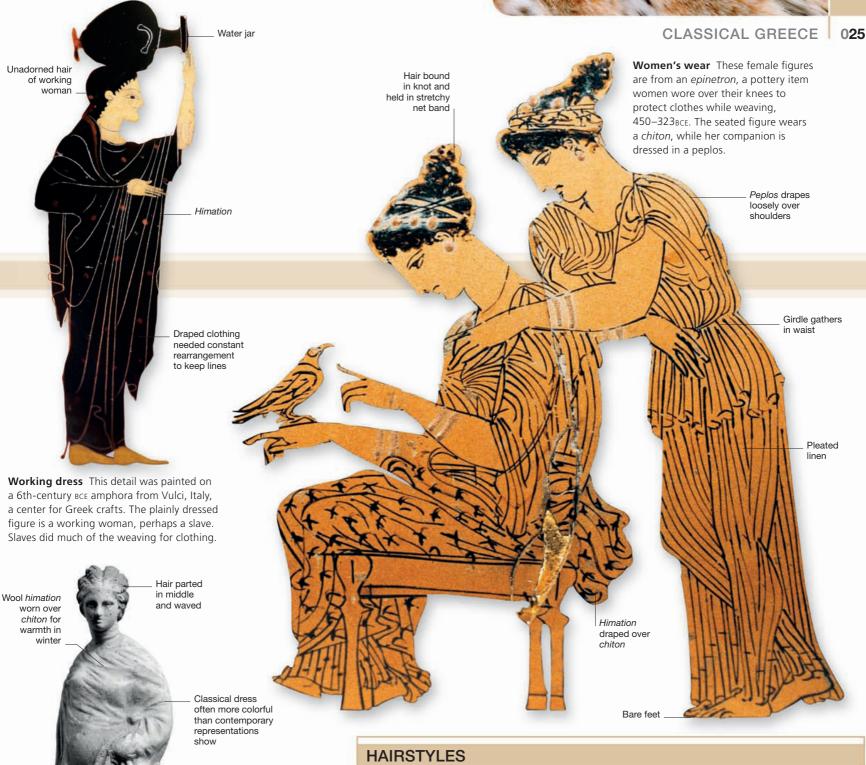

Woven or _ embroidered borders could be transferred to new garments Chiton Both these women from a 19th-century drawing by Thomas Hope wear a chiton. The figure on the left is clearly the wealthier of the two, with her more elaborate jewelry, decorative belt, and rich embroidery.

Royal dress In a scene drawn from Greek legend, King Agamemnon abducts Princess Briseis during the Trojan Wars. The king wears a short chiton, which is covered by protective, armored battle dress, c.480BCE.

Decorative border Wealthy citizens hired musicians to entertain guests at banquets and festivities. A woman plays a flute in this 19th-century drawing. This classical profile is a prototype for figures in later European fashion.

Charioteer's tunic This young driver has just won a race and makes a victory gesture, c.470BcE. He wears a type of long chiton known as a xystis, which was the usual dress for a charioteer at that time.

The Greeks paid as much attention to their hair as to their clothing. In the classical period it was the fashion for young men to crop their hair short. Women teased, frizzed, and curled their hair, using combs made of ivory, tortoiseshell, bone, olive wood, or bronze, depending on personal wealth.

Women never cut their hair (except in mourning, or if they were slaves), letting it hang in long locks, or wearing it twisted with ribbons and piled up in a chignon. Both men and women perfumed their hair with scents or fragrant oils. Children had long hair—little girls tied their hair in ponytails.

Short crop: Charioteer of Delphi c.470BCE

Waves and braids: statue, 480BCE

Himation and chiton Like many of the numerous small figures found at Tanagra in Boeotia, Greece, this one is a naturalistic image of a fashionably dressed woman, c.470_{BCE}. Few traces remain of the statuette's original bright colors.

Himation could be draped in many ways to suit taste and

The elegant language of drapery, and the way in which it both reveals and conceals the human form, was well understood by the stone carvers of ancient Greece. They observed acutely the silhouettes achieved by tucking, folding, and draping combinations or sections of fabric that had been cut in triangles, squares, or circles.

Classical Greek drapery was a widespread and long-lasting style, in both fashion and art. It passed from Greece to Rome when Augustus (63BCE–14CE), the first Roman emperor, aspired to surpassing the achievements of the golden age of Greece. Retrospective styles in drapery flourished accordingly. Romans, of the upper classes at least, wore graceful, draped garments, but the influence of Greece was not confined to clothing. Fountains, sculpture, and monumental vases in the gardens and villas of wealthy Romans were invariably decorated with drapery styles borrowed from Greek sculpture of 500 years before.

In the modern world, from the 18th century onward, a number of neoclassical movements in fashion have drawn on the soft, draped styles of the classical past. Often these have had a particular purpose—for example, helping to liberate women from the constraints of tight clothing and cumbersome layers of petticoats and shaped padding.

66

The rectangle of fabric, when it is well chosen, is better for making the human form emerge. The angles form exterior parts which, in falling, rise up upon themselves in tiers and sinuous falls...

MADELEINE VIONNET, GAZETTE DU BON TON, 1924-25

99

GREEK VOTIVE RELIEF, 410BCE ▷
Draped in flowing folds of stone, Artemis and her nymphs stand before a river god.

PREHISTORY TO 600CE

PROWESS AND PROTECTION

n some parts of the ancient world, men spent much of their lives away from home on active military service. What they wore depended to a large extent on money and rank. Men who dressed in armor were likely to have paid for it themselves—like the hoplites (Greek foot soldiers) in the 5th century BCE, who were drawn from the middle classes and could afford to provide their own body protection. Early armor included metal plates, scales, hardened leather, and padded linen. The invention of mail shirts, made from individually forged interlocking rings, is attributed to the Celts in about 300BCE. Chain was expensive to produce, and was probably restricted to the highest ranking warriors. A mail shirt allowed more limb movement than some other forms of protection, but at 30 lb (15 kg) it weighed the wearer down. Battle-dress styles sometimes depended on attitude—the fearless Spartans marched to war in red capes to disguise bloodstains.

Getting closer to the gods and gaining protection from evil by wearing plumes, or representations of birds, is common in many cultures, from Egypt to Peru. Feathers are inherently powerful, being light, yet flexible and tough. In the pre-Columbian Amazonian and Andean cultures, headdresses and ceremonial garments were adorned with feathers-especially the contour plumes of wing and tail that aided flight. In Ancient Egypt, after death, the spirit's "heart" was weighed on a golden scale against Ma'at, the feather of truth. If the heart was the lighter, the spirit went directly to the heavenly afterlife.

Peruvian feathered

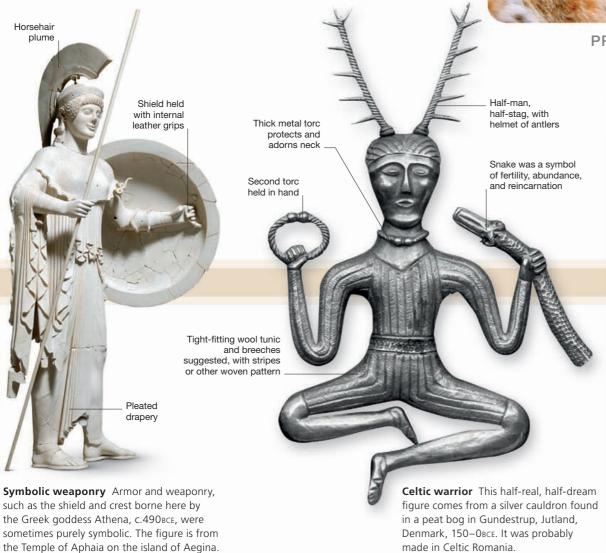

headdress

their shields on the left side, overlapping them when in line to create a wall of defense.

PROWESS AND PROTECTION

Other than the helmet, the cuirass was one of the most protective elements of a suit of armor. It covered the front of the torso, and was usually connected to a back piece for all-around protection. The so-called muscle or heroic cuirass of the classical world was cast to the wearer's body, and was designed to mimic an idealized human physique. Greek and Roman art often depicts generals and emperors wearing the heroic cuirass, but real soldiers would have used much simpler armor in battle.

Etruscan-Corinthian warrior Painted on an alabastron (perfume bottle) probably made in Etruria (now Tuscany) in the 6th century BCE, the soldier has some protective wear but mainly relies on his shield.

Anglo-Saxon ranks This helmet fragment from the 7th-century ce Sutton Hoo burial site in Suffolk, east England, shows different ranks of soldiers. The men wear protective clothing but no helmets over their long, flowing hair.

Scottish soldier This early medieval carving from a grave slab in the West Highlands of Scotland shows a man dressed in a long, padded leather garment known as a cotun, which gave reasonable protection in battle.

200bce-600ce

STYLE IN THE EAST

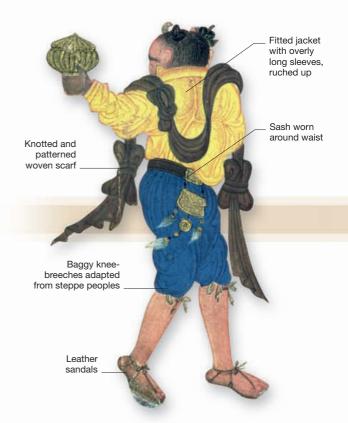

and with shaped skirts, influenced by the hina was known as Ceres (from the word for silk) in the ancient world after its legendary and luxurious silks that were traded to the West along the Silk Road. The rich stashes of garments and accessories found in ancient tombs show how sophisticated the textiles and clothing were. They included highly patterned, light-reflective fabrics, and translucent gauze weaves. By layering garments of different lengths, and adding contrasting linings, waist sashes, and bands around the neck, strikingly colorful combinations were achieved. Elaborate cloth turbans and wide sleeves were to influence fashion in the West. The T-shaped kimono-style garments from China and Japan had wide sleeves that hung from the elbow over the wrist and different proportions than Western-style tunics. In central Asian and Persian areas (modern Iran and Iraq) clothing was more fitted, tight to the wrists nomadic, horse-riding peoples. Bronze Peacock-feather oil lamp neck adornment Large Hair hoop covering earrings Standing collar made by straight Carrying framework edge on robe with silk panels Wide sleeves Embroidered Sleeves folded panels around back to form hem Robe wraps deep cuffs Leather Servant girl The kneeling girl holding a functional oil lamp wears a simple robe that wraps around the body and is tied at the side. It has a distinct collar and cuffs. The lamp is from the Western Han dynasty (C.206BCE to 9th century CE).

Chinese scholar Xuanzang was a renowned Chinese Buddhist and scholar, depicted here returning from his pilgrimage to India. He is shown wearing a Chinese-style, wide-sleeved robe over loose breeches.

Chinese merchant On a piece of painted silk, this trader is portrayed as part of a group of merchants transporting their wares. His clothes are brightly colored but practical: kneebreeches and a fitted jacket.

Yingpan Man This 4th–5th-century BCE masked Caucasoid mummy from the Tarim Basin, China, is dressed in a patterned silk coat and wraparound skirt. Discoveries like this along the Silk Road reveal the sophistication of silk weaving at the time.

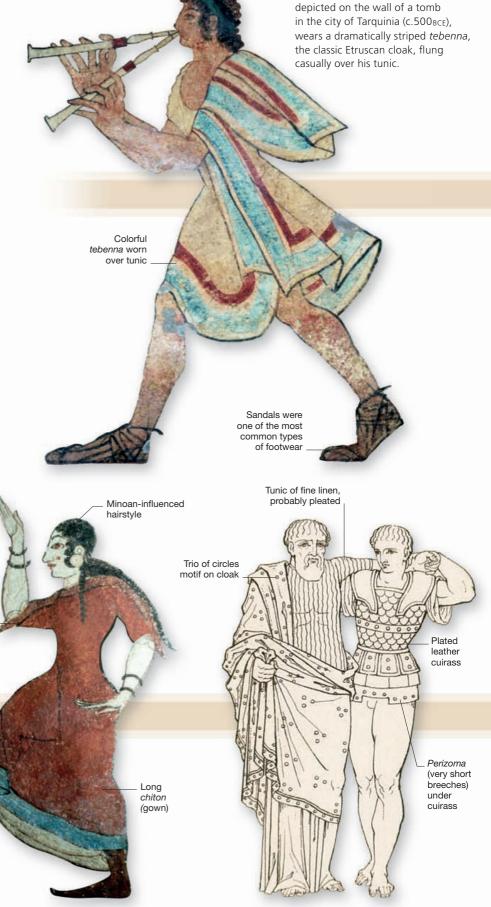

waists—became the norm.

before the Byzantines.

C.900 - 200BCE

ETRUSCANS

efore the rise of Roman civilization a people known as the Etruscans flourished in Etruria, an area of Italy corresponding broadly to modern Tuscany. The origin of the Etruscans is uncertain but they are thought to have come from Asia Minor. By the 7th century BCE these people had established a wide-reaching commercial network and were trading all over Europe. As a result, Etruscans enjoyed a comfortable lifestyle and the means to dress up—as paintings, sculpture, and pottery, mostly recovered from the burial sites of the wealthy, testify. Their clothes combined influences from both Greece and Asia and included garments that later became classic items of Roman wear. For example, the colorful tebenna, a wide, embroidered cape that was worn throughout Etruria, evolved into the Roman toga. The purple robes of later Roman emperors were also worn in Etruria.

Age and youth This Thomas Hope line illustration shows an older man wearing a armor is more imaginative than authentic.

cloak with the trio of circles motif often seen in Etruscan art. However, the younger man's leather

Striped cloak A young musician,

Gold pendant (portraying Achelous, the river god) c.6th century BCE

GOLD PROPERTY BCE

Leech-shaped gold brooch, c.7th century BCE

The highly skilled Etruscan jewelers created marvellous accessories in bronze, silver, and gold. These included pendants, bracelets, necklaces, earrings, bracelets, clasps, and brooches. A gold-working technique known as granulation was developed, whereby tiny grains of gold were soldered on to a smooth background to create a glittering effect. Some of the showiest pieces date from the 7th century BCE. Between the 6th and 4th centuries BCE the work was fine but less extravagant. Around 550BCE engraved gemstones were imported from Greece.

Dancing clothes Paintings in the Tomb of the Jugglers at Tarquinia (c.500BCE) depict various entertainers. This dancer wears pointed boots and a chiton with a contrasting border. Bracelets and large, disk-shaped earrings complete her costume.

Colored

Pointed

boots

Well-dressed women Pictured on an Etruscan vase, the woman on the right wears a Greek-style peplos, a type of sleeveless dress; her companion, left, wears a gown called a chiton. In typical Etruscan style, both flaunt richly colored cloaks.

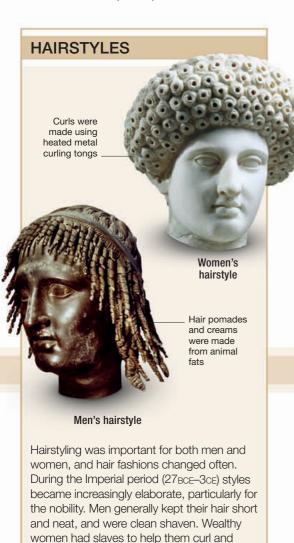

Pointed shoes The man in this painting from the Tomb of the Augurs at Tarquinia (c.500BCE) may be a priest or a relative of the deceased. His shoes, with pointed and curved toes, show Greek, Persian, or Middle Eastern influences.

Embroidery The chiton worn by this bronze votive figure (c.520–470_{BCE}) is embroidered with the popular Etruscan trio of circles motif. A close-fitting conical headdress, known as a tutulus, covers the figure's hair.

509BCE-476CE

ROMAN EMPIRE

ress was carefully prescribed in Roman society, especially for men; rank and status determined whether the toga could be worn (only by Roman citizens) and whether it might be colored. Only the emperor could wear purple, but priests, senators, and equestrians (serving in the army or the administration) might wear a stripe of purple on their robes. A women's basic garment was the stola, a robe which hung in pleats from the shoulders, where it fastened with brooches or clasps called fibulae and was often held in under the bust and around the waist with a belt. Over this, ladies wore a palla (shawl), which might cover the head. Madder (red), saffron (yellow), and indigo (blue) dyes were available, and clothes were sometimes embroidered. Most garments were wool or linen, but silk was imported for the wealthy. Foreign captives and slaves wore a tunica (tunic). Leather sandals or boots protected the feet.

dress their hair using ointments and calamistrum (curling irons). To create styles blonde hair from Germanic peoples.

such as the raised curls above, hair pieces or wigs were used, sometimes made with

Roman soldier Wearing a leather cuirass, this reconstructed legionary has a metal helmet and shinguards to protect him in battle. His wool cloak was also a blanket.

Horsehair plume

Helmet with chinguards

Apron skirt of studded leather strips

Caliga (leather sandals)

Draped figure In this fresco from a household shrine in Pompeii, the master of the house is offering a sacrifice. His priestly function is marked by draping the purplebordered toga praetexta over his head.

Dancing spirit This lar is a mythological figure who protects the household. His tunic is tucked up in a simple rustic style. It is bound at the waist with a girdle.

Hunting gear Wearing a tunic and practical boots, this man, in a mosaic from 4th-century ce Sicily, is returning from a hunting trip. Only Roman citizens could wear the toga—foreigners and slaves wore simple tunics.

Ceremonial toga A house fresco in Pompeii shows Greek king Agamemnon in a toga. By decree, togas were white, called pura. Only emperors, magistrates, and priests could wear the expensive purple edging.

Silky nymph Roman mythology included stories about gods and nymphs. The beautiful nymph lo, the lover of Argos, is shown dressed in a stola (diaphanous silk robe). She was turned into a heifer so her headdress has small horns.

476-600ce

BYZANTINE STYLE

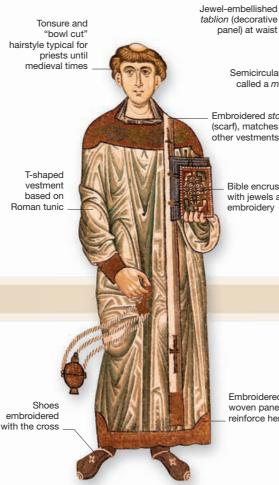

fter the fall of Rome in 476ce, Constantinople (present-day Istanbul) became the center of the Byzantine world. With the rise of the empire came opulence and a fusion of Greek, Roman, Middle Eastern, and Oriental styles. Clothes indicated social status. The richest and grandest figures, exemplified by the Emperor Justinian I and his consort Theodora, had their long, flowing gowns of richly patterned silks encrusted with jewels and gold thread. The veils and silks worn by women, and the T-shaped tunics and cloaks worn by men, were developed from Roman official dress. Some of the garments, notably the pallium (cloak), chasuble (outer garment), and dalmatikon (wide-sleeved tunic), were formalized into vestments of the Orthodox and Catholic churches. Poor working people wore plain wool tunics, knee-length for men, with leggings, boots, and a long cloak on top.

EMPRESS THEODORA

"May I never be without the purple I wear, nor live to see the day when men do not call me 'Your Majesty,'" proclaimed Theodora in 532ce, in defiance of the revolt against her husband Justinian's rule. The empress's lavish dress emphasized her wealth and status. Gold thread decorated her garments, which were colored with expensive Tyrian purple dye and embroidered with jewels.

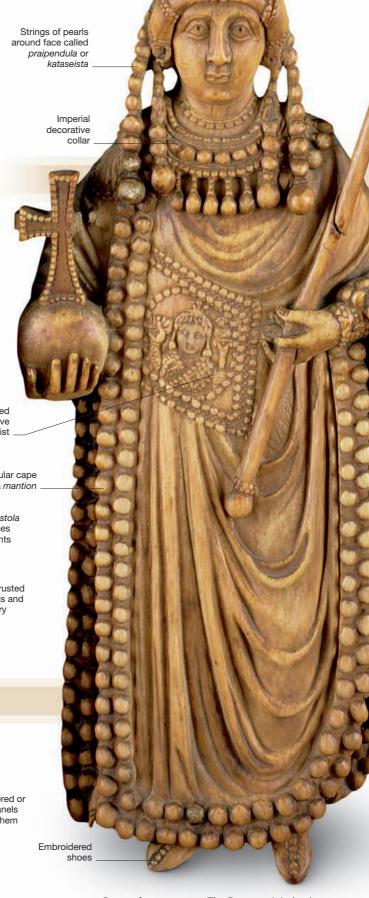

Her fashion influence has traveled down through the centuries—designer Karl Lagerfeld drew on Theodora's embellished style for his Paris-Byzance Spring 2011 collection for Chanel panel) at waist Semicircular cape called a mantion Embroidered stola (scarf), matches other vestments Bible encrusted with jewels and embroidery Embroidered or woven panels reinforce hem

Holy man This mosaic of St. Stephen from Monreale Cathedral, Palermo, Sicily, shows him wearing bands of heavy embroidery, his vestments following the style of Roman tunics. He also wears a stola over his left shoulder.

Padded headdress called propoloma

> Byzantine empress The Empress Ariadne in this 6th-century ce carving wears a loose-fitting robe based on the Roman toga. She carries an orb and scepter as symbols of her imperial power over the state and the Orthodox Church.

Silken virgin This detail from a mosaic in a church in Ravenna, Italy, shows one of the holy virgins. She wears a figured silk overgown. The secrets of silk production were smuggled into Constantinople.

Justinian's clergyman Emperor Justinian's retinue included clergymen in vestments that indicated the transition from formal imperial Roman dress to liturgical wear. The stola has evolved into a symbolic garment without practical function.

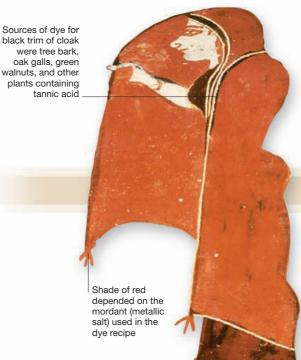

Imperial purple Emperor Justinian wears a long mantle colored from large quantities of enormously expensive Tyrian purple dye. His tunic sleeve is visible underneath.

PREHISTORY TO 600CE

DYES AND PIGMENTS

here was much more color in the ancient world than many faded objects and buildings that remain would suggest. Mixing naturally occurring pigments with water or oil is evident in prehistoric cave paintings, and ancient people found colors to dye cloth, decorate their skin, and create jewelry. The most commonly used dyes and pigments were locally available. Many came from plants; insects were the source of a few rich colors, and rocks, minerals, or soil provided others. The best quality, rarest, and most expensive dyes, such as Tyrian purple from sea snails, were traded across cultures and continents. Color—sometimes in the form of pattern—differentiated class, customs, and geographic origin. It could also be symbolic.

Red Swathed in two tones of red, this female figure is depicted on an Etruscan jar from the 6th century BCE. The word "crimson" comes from kermes, an insect that feeds on holm oaks in the Mediterranean, and the source of the dye.

Ancient Egyptian blue This detail from the back of a mummy mask shows Horus, god of the sky and protector of the ruler of Egypt.

Blue, the color of the sky and so of heaven, was used symbolically in honor of the dead.

THE POPULARITY OF INDIGO

While some cosmetics were ruinous to health and beauty in the long term, indigo had special healing properties. Indigo is a natural antiseptic and was traditionally used in tattooing the skin. A major international trading commodity, indigo is one of the most readily available natural dyes around the world, although the quality and intensity can vary. It is sourced from different plants, depending on the climate. In Europe Isatis tinctoria (woad) was the source. Different species for indigo exist far and wide, from sub-Saharan Africa to Japan and India.

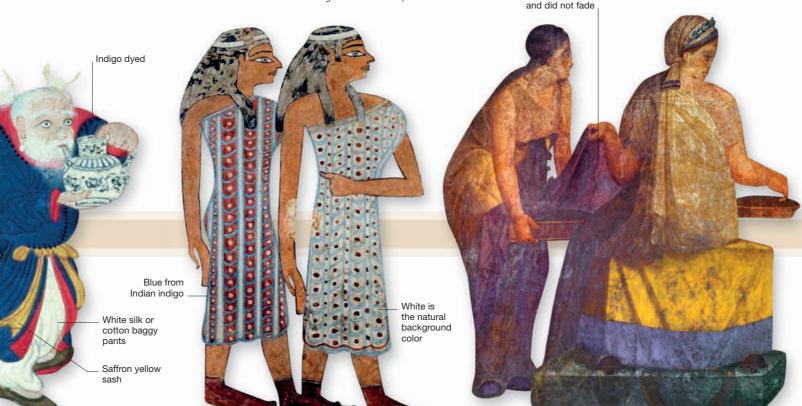

Tyrian purple dyed

cloth a rich red-violet

Orange and ocher The ocher on the woman's robe is an earth color used in paintings—like this 1st-century ce fresco from Pompeii—but not in textiles. The cloth could have been dyed with cheap weld or goldenrod, or rare, expensive saffron from crocus stems.

Madder red from roots of the madder plant

Green and contrasting color This stylized figure is woven into a llama wool cloth for wrapping a mummy in the 3rd-century BCE Paracas culture of Peru. The lively textile patterns of pre-Columbian cultures use contrasting colors and shapes.

Chinese blue Blue from indigo was the most easily available dye, since the plants grew freely. This detail from a painted panel of Chinese silk shows a man both wearing blue and carrying a blue-and-white teapot.

Patterned clothing The patterns distinguish these Semite women of c.1900BCE from Egyptians. Striped or patterned cloth may have been the biblical Joseph's "coat of many colors." The white cotton was block printed with wax to resist the dye, like batik.

Purple Tyrian, also called true, Imperial, or murex (from the sea snail that secreted it) purple was a precious dye farmed in the Mediterranean. It was reserved for imperial and high religious use or for rich diplomatic gifts. The Phoenician city of Tyre was a trade center.

RECONSTRUCTION

SHORT TUNIC

Typically worn in the Saxon era, this short ungored (without panel inserts) tunic has been re-created in gray lozenge-twill wool by reconstruction dressmaker Sarah Thursfield. Short tunics were worn by young men and workers from the 3rd or 4th century ce in northern Germany right through to late Saxon times. Tunics based on rectangles and triangles were the basic unit of clothing across Europe. They were usually worn with braccas (wool pants), often with leg windings, and leather shoes. The final appearance of a tunic was a matter of personal preference and style: the wearer arranged the spare width of the fabric over the tied fabric belt, gently pouched or sometimes in the stylish pleats unshaped rectangles of cloth with added sleeves that taper at the wrist. A fabric belt defines the waist and gathers in the width.

⊲ RURAL WEAR

A peasant tends his sheep in a rural idyll on a late Anglo-Saxon vellum. He wears a simple tunic draped over a fabric belt—a style and shape that endured for centuries.

RECONSTRUCTION

PEPLOS STYLE

ombinations of wrapped dresses and sleeved linen shifts were worn from the Bronze Age (more than 4,000 years ago) and formed the basis of Ancient Greek and Roman women's wardrobes. An example of this dress style survives from a Danish "bog body" of around 500BCE, and the garments only appear to have gone out of fashion with the Northern European move to Christianity. The peplos-style dress is simply a large tube of cloth. The fold at the top controls the length in wear, and two brooches hold it in place at the shoulders.

IN DETAIL

☐ IRON-AGE REPLICAS

Bronze safety-pin brooches made from a single piece of coiled wire are used to hold the peplos together at the the shoulder. The changing style of brooches is revealed through finds in early Saxon graves and often give an indication of the wealth of the individual.

WOVEN BORDERS

The wool fabric would have been woven on an upright loom, either warp weighted or with upper and lower beams. On these looms it was possible to weave the cloth either as a continuous tube or as a single large piece. The border design is part of the weave.

□ DRESSING VENUS

Two attendants dress Venus, drawing her peplos up over a filmy shift in this detail of the birth of Venus from a marble relief on the Ludovisi Throne, c. 470–60BCE.

MEDIEVAL ROMANCE AND TRADE

600-1449

MEDIEVAL ROMANCE AND TRADE

hroughout this period clothes for most people were very simple, based on little more than two draped rectangles sewn into a tunic. Tunics and cloaks were made of wool and linen. though leather and furs were also worn, especially in the colder northern regions of Europe. Silk was an extremely expensive item throughout the medieval era. After the fall of the Roman Empire in 476ce people began to travel across Europe, learning new customs, techniques, and fashions. The Church split into two branches: the Eastern (Byzantine) and the Western (Holy Roman Empire) with different styles of clothing for each. Ecclesiastical clothing was fixed at this time by papal decree and religious vestments today still follow these templates.

New skills and tools

Most people in the Middle Ages wore a variation on a tunic, but, as cutting improved slowly from the 12th to the 14th centuries, clothing became more shaped to the body. Also at this time vertical looms were replaced by horizontal ones, which allowed fabric to be woven more guickly and increased textile production; it became cheaper to buy clothing. Byzantium retained the most advanced and luxurious culture—its clothing styles were much imitated by Western courts and monarchs such as Charlemagne. Europeans traveling to and trading with Middle Eastern areas discovered new styles and fabrics, eventually finding out the secrets of sericulture (silk production). Fine lampas, cloth-of-gold, and brocaded silks were produced in Italy and Spain, no longer relying on expensive imports.

Birth of fashion

By the later Middle Ages fashion and clothing became more complicated. There was a wider choice of garments and accessories and a greater range of fabrics; colors were brighter and closures more varied. With a certain novelty and more choice, fashion can be said to have been born, styles changed more quickly, and the idea of change for change's sake arrived. Improved production of textiles meant wastage, and innovation was possible. Garment shapes began to be curved, and edges could be snipped or dagged.

Place in society

Despite these changes, some things remained rigid. Women were expected to keep their heads covered, and clothes dictated an individual's place in society—they revealed who you were and what you did. It was frowned upon, and there were even laws against, non-nobility attempting to dress as nobility. At the same time differences between social classes increased—the rich looked a lot richer than the poor.

600-800

In England, the Synod of Whitby decides that the Roman tonsure (top of the head shaved) is to be adopted over the Celtic tonsure (front of the ▼ Priest being tonsured

Eric the Red sails from Iceland to Greenland with Norse settlers and establishes a colony. Clothing from burials during the 14th and 15th centuries give an insight into dress at the edge of the European world.

801-1070

Anglo-Saxon England has silk by the late 600s, brought back from Rome by Benedict Biscop and others. It is an essential, and portable, purchase for well-off pilgrims to Rome or the Holy Land.

The conquest of Spain by and Moorish influence to

of Hispano-Moresque

geometric patterns).

the Moors brings an Islamic Iberia and the development style (silk textiles that have

▲ Eric the Red in armor

Beginning of the Norman Conquest in England, when Norman styles from the continent began to have a major influence on Enalish dress.

1070s

The Bayeux Tapestry, made of linen and embroidered with colored wool yarns, is created. It reveals hallmarks of Anglo-Saxon embroidery

1095

The First Crusade begins, opening additional routes and bringing back Eastern fabrics and styles to influence Europe.

▶ Byzantine fabrics

A merchant was there with a forked beard, In mottelee and hye on horse he sat; Upon his head a Flaundrish bever hat...

GEOFFREY CHAUCER, THE MERCHANT'S TALE, C.1380

99

		16
1101–1200	1201–1210	1211-1300	1301–1359	1360–1380	1381–1449
1150 Horizontal looms, around since the 11th century, become mechanized in the 12th century.	1200s Buttons start to appear in European clothing. ▲ 13th-century metal button	The Fourth Council of the Lateran rules that Jews and Muslims must be distinguishable by their dress, beginning the process that transformed the conical Jewish hat from something worn as a voluntary mark of difference, to an enforced one. Clerical dress also becomes mandatory.	1350 A fashion for mi-parti or parti-colored garments made of two contrasting fabrics, one on each side, emerges in the mid-14th century for men.		c.1390 Chaucer's Prologues to The Canterbury Tales includes details of the pilgrims' clothing, showing how medieval people can determine status and position from what someone is wearing.
Damask is first produced in the city of Damascus in the 12th century. Damask fabrics rely on contrasting weave textures rather than color to render patterns.	The capture of Constantinople in the Fourth Crusade diminishes the power of the Byzantine empire, and its hold on dress style.	ASIA Sharp-to Sharp-to Sharp-to Sharp-to Sharp-to Sharp-to Figre-yolin Chestria Dukush HIMALAVAS Chestria SPICE SLAN BAN OF BENGAL		King Richard II of England (reigned 1367–99) is credited with having invented the cloth handkerchief. The item "little pieces [of cloth] for the lord King to wipe and clean his nose," appears in the Household Rolls (accounts),—the first documentation of their use. c.1380 Women's shoulders are revealed for the first time in low-necked fitted dresses. Clerics and critics are predictably outraged. They also accuse women of padding their busts to give them a better appearance.
		▲ Map showing Marco Polo's route and the Silk Road 1271 Venetian Marco Polo sets off on his 24-year-long travels along the Silk Road. His voyage passes through all the centers of silk innovations, manufacture and trading, and he returns to Venice with riches and treasures.	▲ Fitted tunic worn over breeches 1350 The gown for men is abandoned and instead a tight top over the torso, with breeches or pants below, is worn. These become the distinctive feature of European men's fashion for centuries to come.		▲ Woman in conical headdress c.1430 The conical headdress in the shape of a cone or "steeple"—the stereotypical princess hat—makes an appearance.
▲ Damask patterned fabric	c.1205 The word "breeches" first appears in the English language.	1278 Velvet is woven in Spain and Italy in the late 13th century. It is documented in 1278 that the English King Edward I has a velvet bed covering.	1351 Edward III of England establishes an embroidery workshop in the Tower of London.	▲ The Maid of Orleans	1431 Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans claiming divine guidance, leads the French armies to victory against the English. She is burned as a heretic on May 30,1431. One of the main charges against her was that she wore male clothing and cut her hair short—transvestitism was against church doctrine.

THE AGE OF MIGRATIONS

fter the western Roman Empire collapsed, people started migrating to new areas, sometimes by invasion and conquest, sometimes through peaceful settlement. In Northern European areas, Germanic, Frankish, and Norse-speaking peoples needed warm, water-repelling clothes in the cold climate, so wool was the main cloth used. People in warmer Mediterranean regions had lighter clothing in linens, wools, and sometimes silk—if they could afford it. Both men and women wore loose tunics, based on rectangles sewn together in different styles, and caught with belts. Mantles (cloaks) were draped over tunics, sometimes with status-enhancing fur linings. Men wore trews (the forerunner of pants) below the waist, wrapped with wool bands or leather below the knee. Linen shirts were worn as undergarments beneath tunics, and sometimes worn on their own in summer. Surviving clothing from burials reveals a love of finery in embroidery, tablet-woven braids, and intricate jewelry.

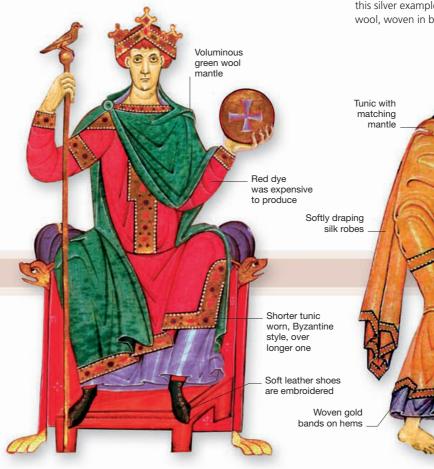

Viking woman Women in Scandinavian countries wore ankle-length tunics held together on the shoulder with large brooches, such as this silver example. Tunics were made mostly of wool, woven in beautiful geometric patterns.

TEXTILE PRODUCTION

Before the horizontal loom's introduction, c.1000, all European weaving was done on vertical looms, held under tension with warp-weights at the bottom. Producing cloth was extremely labor intensive and women did most of it at home. Wool, the most common fiber, had to be shorn, cleaned, and carded (brushed), then spun with a drop-spindle. The loom was set up with vertical warp threads, and finally the weft threads were woven horizontally over and under the warp to make cloth. Clothing was based mostly on straight lines, connecting the selvedges (fabric edges) to minimize waste.

Imperial majesty This illumination, c.990, shows the Holy Roman Emperor Otto III in the finest attire possible. His silk tunic is dyed with costly red and embellished with gems and gold. The crown, orb, and scepter mark his authority.

Byzantine silk A 10th-century woman wears sumptuous textiles. Byzantine silk was light and clung to the shape of the body. The under-tunic, painted to look blue, was probably made of white linen.

Long

under-tunic revealed by shorter outer garments

Pointed crown in Byzantine style

Elegant draping,

even with simple

Embroidered leg garment and leather leg wrappings

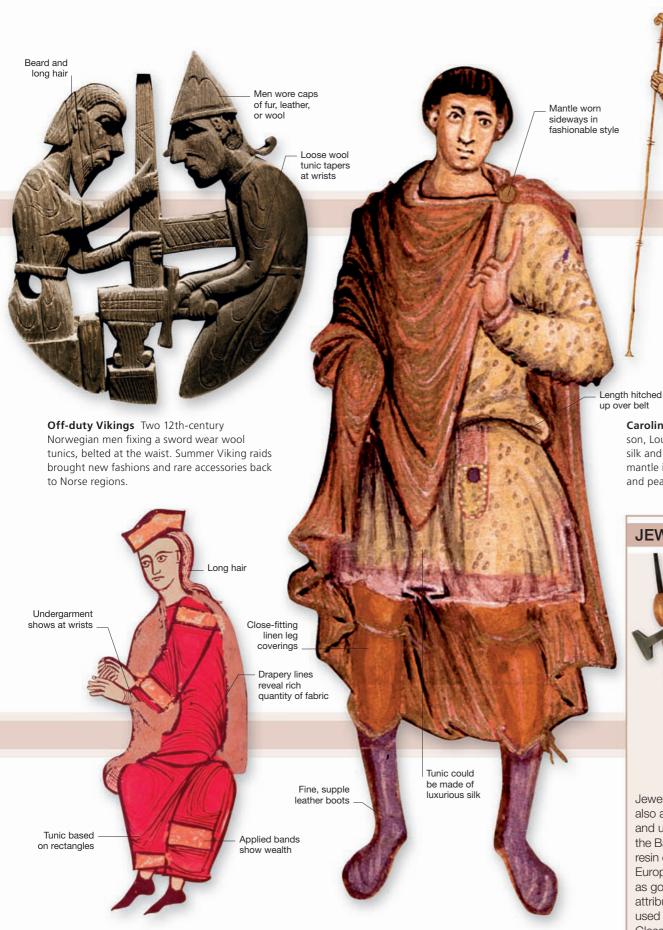

construction

THE AGE OF MIGRATIONS

Underarm

sleeves fullness

gusset gives

Catalan noble Men's and women's dress could be so similar that it was hard to tell the sexes apart. This Iberian noble from the 7th century could be a lord or a lady, since both wore long clothes, soft shoes, and long hair.

Royal splendor As befits a ruler, Frankish King Charles II wears fine-quality clothing, c.870. His long mantle covers a tunic and leg coverings, although classical writers thought that pants were barbaric.

Carolingian style Emperor Charlemagne's son, Louis the Pious, d.840, wears sumptuous silk and gem-encrusted clothing. The damask mantle is particularly extravagant in its color and pearl motifs.

JEWELRY

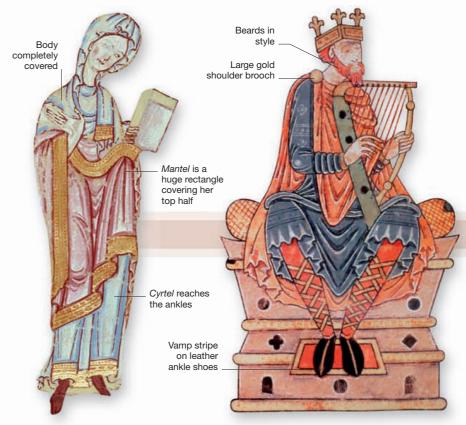

Replica Viking amulets

Jewelry was a means of adornment and also a form of portable wealth, easily carried and used as payment. People living around the Baltic Sea collected amber, the fossilized resin of prehistoric trees, and traded it across Europe and beyond. Precious metals, such as gold, and jewels had a nearly sacred attribution due to their rarity. Other metals used included bronze, iron, copper, and tin. Glass beads appear in many Norse graves. Men and women held clothing together with ornate round pins and brooches, and wore shapely belt buckles, rings, and earrings.

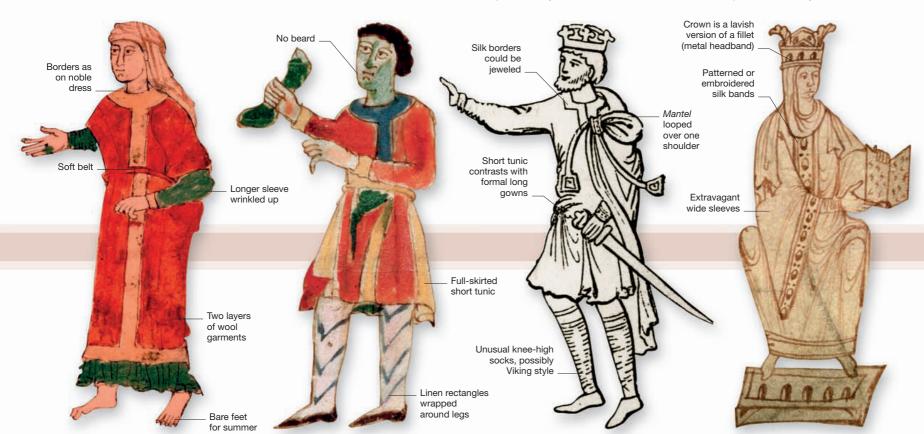

THE EARLY MIDDLE AGES

s people began to settle into stable societies, different styles of dress evolved. Charlemagne's Holy Roman Empire and the monasteries of Anglo-Saxon England recorded clothing details in illuminated manuscripts. The modern words "kirtle" (under-tunic) and "mantle" (cloak) originated from the Anglo-Saxon cyrtel and mantel. Women wore a kirtle over a linen undergarment, and often an outer gown as well. There was still little difference between clerical and secular dress, all continuing to be based on Ancient Roman principles of draped rectangles. Southern areas around modern Spain and Italy particularly wanted to show links with the former empire in Romanesque style. Women covered their heads with veils according to Christian ideas of pious modesty. As textile technology improved, people used more fabric in their clothing. Eastern silk from as far as China outstripped local products in complexity and beauty, making it highly prized.

Anglo-Saxon cyrtel, mantel, and veil In the 1060s Judith, Countess of Flanders, is shown draped with cloth. Her long, semicircular linen veil wraps over her head and shoulders. The mantel is draped sideways.

Fit for a king Biblical King David, in a manuscript of 1050, wears a long, dignified gown in quality fabric—the signs of a ruler—with a woven pattern and frilled hem. The gartering holding his braccas (pants) is carefully interlaced.

Everyday wear A linen veil is wrapped around this 11th-century woman's head. Her outer gown has short sleeves, and it covers a much fuller, longer tunic.

Simple dress In the 1020s this man has the keyhole neckline seen in noble dress, but in a plain fabric. His tunic is short and easy to move in, with tight cuffs.

Anglo-Saxon king More modest than continental rulers, Cnut of Wessex wears a silk-bordered tunic. A later Anglo-Saxon king's clothing was "interwoven with gold and sumptuously embellished."

Anglo-Saxon queen Noblewomen like Aelfgyfu-Emma, King Cnut's wife, enjoyed wearing sumptuous dress. Her clothing, c.1040, was probably dyed with costly colors.

Norman warrior The embroidered wool stitches of the Bayeux Tapestry, made in the 1070s, show the natural vegetable dyes used to color textiles. Cropped hair was a practical choice beneath helmets.

MARKERS OF LUXURY

Jewelry shows the distinct medieval styles. Gold and enamel jewelry had symmetrical Celtic patterns or the stylized animals favored by Anglo-Saxons. Other markers of a settled, richer society were women's fine embroidery, applied to hangings, copes (capes), and clothing, imports such as silk, as well as furs, kermes (red dye), and fine wools.

INTUNICS

The Bayeux Tapestry (actually an embroidery) documenting the Norman invasion of England in 1066 illustrates the fashion of the time: the tunic, shaped like a "T" with insertions for fullness. It was the basic clothing for Saxons and Normans, but the trend for wearing short tunics was relatively new—one of many continental fashions that King Edward the Confessor introduced when he came to the English throne in 1042 after exile at the Court of Normandy.

Most men wore two tunics: a linen undergarment covered by an over-tunic. The under-tunic was sometimes longer, so that the bottom of it peeped out below the hem of the over-tunic. Pulled on over the head, tunics had a slit at the front of the neck, bordered by a band or collar, often in a contrasting color. A belt was worn, sitting at the waist or low on the hips, and could be used to tuck up extra length.

Although tunics were ubiquitous, the quality of the cloth reflected the wealth of the wearer. The aristocracy, often shown in the tapestry as pointing and giving orders, wore sumptuous silk tunics with gold embroidery imported from the East. The bright colors showed off expensive dyes. Much simpler, coarse-cloth tunics with close-fitting leggings were worn by laborers. The colors available to the ordinary people were shades of natural gray and brown, and greens and blues from plants.

The English did Frenchify themselves...and make themselves ridiculous by their fantastic fashions...

WILLIAM OF MALMESBURY, 1095-1143

The Bayeux Tapestry, probably embroidered during the 1070s, provides a picture of the clothes worn by both nobles and serfs in the 11th century. Here, tunic-clad laborers build a fortified Norman base.

since they were light and unbreakable during long-distance travel.

COURTLY LOVE AND CRUSADES

ashion became increasingly flamboyant in the 12th century— a time of Crusaders, romances, and chivalry. Vivacious, sophisticated fashions cultivated in the south spread north from Mediterranean shores. Clothing became more seductively fitted, showing the body's shape for the first time. Tales of courtly love celebrated this effect, conjuring visions of figure-hugging silk gowns revealing embroidered chemises beneath laced sides. Garments were still based mainly on rectangular and triangular fabric cuts, but with lacing to crush straight shapes against the curved figure. Even ordinary women wore their tunics more closely over waist, arms, and hips. Men's clothing also lengthened and tightened. Noble people of both sexes wore the bliaut or brial, a tunic made of fine, expensive silk with trailing hems and long sleeves. Accessories were long, pointed shoes, long hair, and elaborate cloaks and mantles. Religious and secular clothing styles began to differ.

had to be tied up, were fashionable from c.1150. Thinner fabrics clung to the body, outlining the shape.

bliauts of the finest Asian silks; fine pleating contributed to the vertical illusion.

Loose hanging sleeves show wrinkled undersleeves

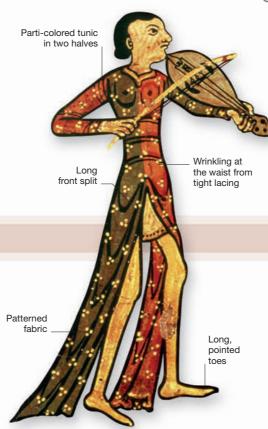

COURTLY LOVE AND CRUSADES

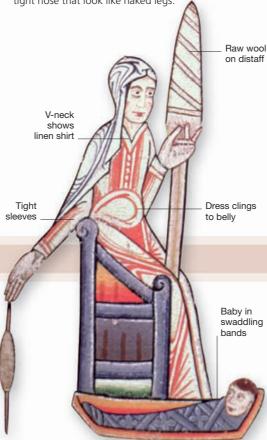

Southern dress This Provençal viscount's tunic, c.1110, follows the body, but is not fashionably skintight, though its tight sleeves had to be sewn shut at each wearing. Aquitanian fashion was more sensuous than that of northern France.

Body-revealing dress This young Veronan girl's tunic is skintight—probably through lacing—and reveals all her feminine curves. The contrast with the full flaring skirt shows the new seductive fit appearing in clothing.

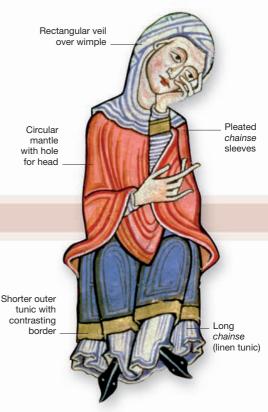

Split tunic This is what French Abbot Bernard of Clairvaux meant when he complained that split clothing "revealed intimate parts." A young 12th-century Frenchman's shirt hangs over tight hose that look like naked legs.

Noble Englishwoman This image from around 1170 shows a women in the modest dress of married women, spinning yarn with a distaff and spindle. The veil is still long and covers all her hair. The tunic may have buttons at the front, and fits closely.

Elegant draping This musician has used his hip belt to hitch up his tunic and create flowing lines. Sideways wrinkles show the closeness over the ribs. The wider sleeves of the outer tunic do not interfere with his playing.

Veiled mature woman Nuns, widows, and older women left fashion behind and veiled their heads throughout the Middle Ages and Renaissance period. Wimples, which concealed the neck and chin, were pinned at the top of the head and covered with a veil.

FASHION ICON

ELEANOR OF AQUITAINE

leanor of Aquitaine (c.1124–1204) is one of the most important and well-known figures of the Middle Ages, due to her huge influence on the cultural life of the time. Born into the ruling family of the Duchy of Aquitaine, a large province that covered most of southwest France, this cultured, sophisticated, and most eligible heiress in Europe had an extraordinary zest for life. At 15 she married the future King Louis VII of France and moved to Paris. Used to luxury and splendor, Eleanor found the city bleak and gray. She immediately set about transforming Paris into a center of art and beauty. With her strong sense of style, she introduced new fashions, fabrics, and etiquette from the more sophisticated south. Nobles from Aquitaine had a reputation for being fashion conscious, and the new queen shocked Louis' courtiers with her jewels, kohl, and rouge. Chronicler Bernard of Clairvaux remarked that her gowns were "not so much adorned as loaded down with gold, silver, and precious stones." She was said to be tall and extremely beautiful and continued to enchant men across the known world into her old age.

Setting the trend

Under her influence, women's clothing became increasingly elaborate. The bliaut, a long overgown, was a new trend. In Eleanor's reign it grew tighter around the bodice, fitting snugly down to the hips, and was worn with a decorative belt or girdle. The bodice was split down either side from underarm to hip and attached with ribbons, which could be tied to tighten the fabric across the body.

The skirt was cut wide, falling in light folds and pleats down to the feet. This emphasized the conspicuous use of rich fabrics. Silk from the Middle East was readily available throughout Europe and used extensively by the royal court.

In a palette of blues, grays, burgundies, and earth tones, the silk was highly embellished and heavily embroidered in costly metallic threads. The garments' sumptuous flow outraged church fathers: Bernard of Clairvaux complained about the ladies at court who "drag after them trains of precious material that makes a cloud of dust."

Bliaut sleeves also drew attention; they were tight from shoulder to elbow, then flared out into enormous cuffs long enough to drag on the ground. Sleeves were knotted to shorten them and to make them more manageable.

Impact abroad

A formidable woman, Eleanor accompanied her husband in 1147 on the Second Crusade (1145–1149), traveling to > Constantinople (modern Istanbul) and Jerusalem. She took chests of the finest clothing with her so she might appear as a sophisticated Provençal queen instead of a Frankish rustic. She cut a dashing figure. The Greek chronicler Niketas Choniates noted Eleanor's ride into Byzantium:

"...even women traveled in the ranks of the crusaders, boldly sitting astride in their saddles as men do...At the head of these was one in particular, richly dressed, who because of the gold embroidery on the hem of her dress, was nicknamed Chrysopous [Golden Foot]."

Eleanor was granted an annulment of her marriage to Louis in 1152 and went on to marry Henry of Anjou as a love match. In 1154 he became King of England. As in Paris, Eleanor began to turn primitive England into an illustrious court, introducing art, makeup, romance, and poetry under the influence of her glamorous personality. Wherever she went, Eleanor challenged tradition, developing the style and sophistication, romance, and chivalry for which the medieval period became famous.

△ INTERNATIONAL INFLUENCES In this effigy from Fontevraud Abbey, the queen's dress was originally covered with diagonal bars of gold, representing an expensive Eastern silk. She wears the barbette and is reading a book—a literate woman in illiterate times.

⊲ NOBLE COLORS

Wealthy noblewomen wear the bliaut with extravagant sleeves in this 12thcentury stained-glass window in the Abbey of Saint-Denis, France. Courtly romances describe how the gowns could be open at the side to reveal delicate underwear.

1137 Marries Louis and becomes Oueen of France, bringing sophistication to the Paris court

1140s ⊳ Popularizes the bliaut and other long overgowns with trailing sleeves and hems

1140s Patronizes the troubadour poets of her native court. In turn, they praise her "lovely eyes and noble countenance

1147 Takes part in the Second Crusade. Her cloaks are sumptuous and heavily embroidered

Oueen of England. and introduces new style and standards of living to the English court—drinking wine instead of beer, and bringing in costly silks and love poets

1154 Becomes

 □ 1167 Popularizes long braided hair. Returns to France, after being estranged from Henry II, and cultivates a court in Poitiers unmatched by any in Europe for its cultural influence

> 1173 Is imprisoned for 16 years after taking part in a revolt against Henry II

O 1130

0 1140

O 1150 O 1160 O 1170

O 1180

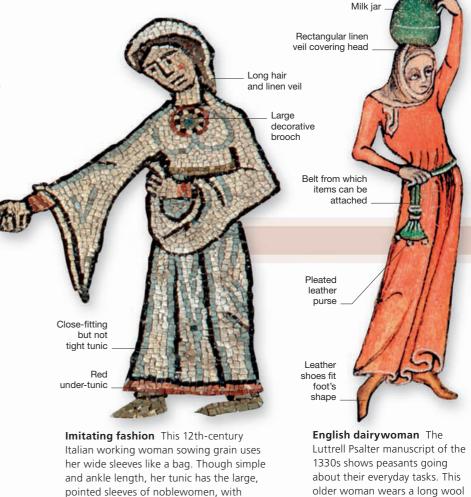

PRIESTS AND THE PEOPLE

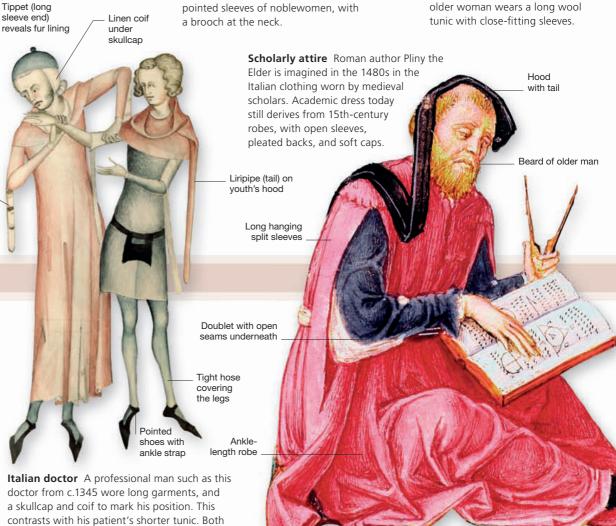

In the Middle Ages fashionable, luxurious dress was only possible for the wealthy minority, including nobility, merchants, and clergy. Ordinary people—peasants and freeholders, artisans and trade workers, or professionals—wore simpler versions that allowed them to do their work. Their clothes were shorter or plainer, in coarser, often home-produced, fabrics. Garments such as aprons could double as tools, to carry items or as protection. Laborers stripped to cool linen underclothes for heavy field work. Learned and professional men wore long robes that marked their education. Although religious clothing kept to older tunic styles, the Church used the best-quality fabrics with the finest embroidery and weaving to dress cardinals and bishops, as well as to adorn altars.

DYEING CLOTH

Ordinary people did wear colored clothes in the Middle Ages, but linen was hard to dye and was used in its natural pale gray or bleached white. Dark sheep gave dark wool, while paler fleeces could be dyed. Common plant dyes made browns, yellows (weld, goldenrod), and blues (woad, indigo). Dyestuffs were fixed with mordants, minerals that "bit" color into cloth. Reds and purples were difficult and costly to produce, left to professionals like the 15th-century dyers above.

wear fashionable hoods and tippet sleeves.

PRIESTS AND THE PEOPLE | 057

THE EAST IN THE WEST

In medieval times the Mediterranean basin was the most advanced center in the world for learning, technology, and trade. The importing of luxury goods into the Mediterranean regions and Northern Europe had a long history, both before and after the age of the Crusades (1095–1291). Expensive textiles came from China along the ancient Silk Road, the great trade route running through Central Asia. Eastern weaving techniques made their way to Byzantium and Persia, to Islamic areas in North Africa, and to Al-Andalus, the Moorish kingdom in southern Spain. Venice made its fortune through controlling the trade in luxuries with the Middle East. Throughout the Middle Ages the cultures of East and West constantly exchanged and merged styles.

Greek doctor This doctor wears the long robe popular in Orthodox countries, with the fashionable 14th-century fitted torso. The material's pattern of roundels containing animals is typical of high-quality Byzantine silk weaving.

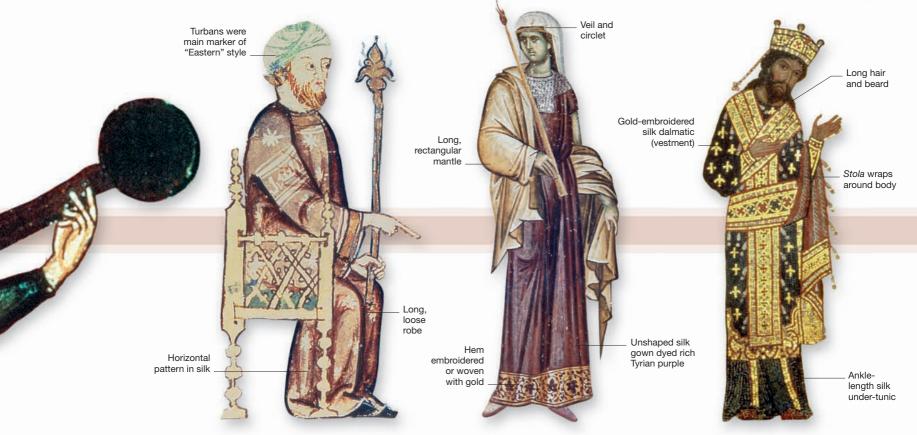

Moorish musician A detail from a mid-13th century illumination, this lutenist combines the Moorish tunic, turban, and beard of Islamic southern Spain with the pellote (sleeveless surcoat) then fashionable in northern Europe.

Crossover style In 13th-century Spain Christians, Muslims, and Jews lived together and influenced each other's clothing. Details, such as the side lacing on this musician's tunic, show how they blended into an "Iberian" style.

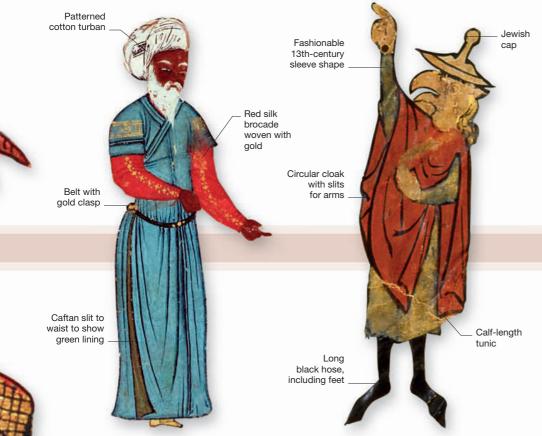

THE EAST IN THE WEST

Turbaned king Alfonso X, king of Castile and León 1252–84, sits in a Moorish turban and robe to rule his northern Spanish Christian kingdoms. At that time, half of the Iberian peninsula was a Muslim kingdom.

Serbian matron The Eastern Orthodox women's dress of the 14th century shows a continuation of classical styles, not the fitted clothing of Western Europe. This reflects the kingdom's link with Byzantine traditions.

Byzantine splendor Norman King Roger II of Sicily wears Byzantine imperial clothing for his 1133 coronation. The magnificent wide gold band encrusted with pearls and precious stones is a long stola (scarf) wrapped around his body.

Persian caftan An older African man wears a caftan with a diagonal wrap front, a style never seen in European dress. This was worn all across Asia as far as China. Islamic men and women's clothing often had the same feature.

Jewish dress This figure from a Jewish text known as the Bird's Head Haggadah (c.1300) shows the cap sometimes worn by Jewish men. Christian countries often made people of other faiths identify themselves with specific clothing.

Crusading travelers who visited the Middle Eastern Latin kingdoms were astonished at the quantities of silk worn there. One renowned center for silk weaving was Sicily. When King Roger II of Sicily was crowned, his clothing included a semicircular silk coronation mantle made in Palermo's royal workshops. This valuable treasure is embroidered in gold with symmetrical patterns of lions attacking camels—symbolizing Normans versus Saracens. Each animal is outlined with hundreds of seed pearls. The inscription around the edge is in Arabic calligraphy.

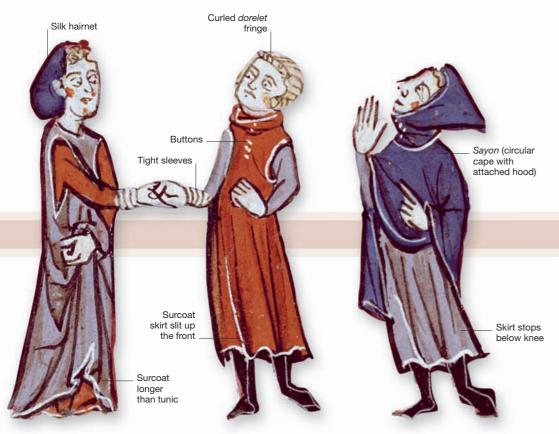

SOCIAL STATEMENTS

Barbette fillet

with wimple under chin

Holding

Bride and groom The bride's hair is gathered into a net, and she wears a sleeveless surcoat over her long dress. The groom's red wool surcoat has a hood and a fur lining.

elegant hips-forward posture for her. Isolde's mantle is lined with vair (fur from a squirrel's winter coat).

Groom's friend The groom's companion has a larger cape, also lined with fur. Both men achieve a closer fit with buttons, which were beginning to emerge as popular closures.

SURVIVING MEDIEVAL CLOTHING

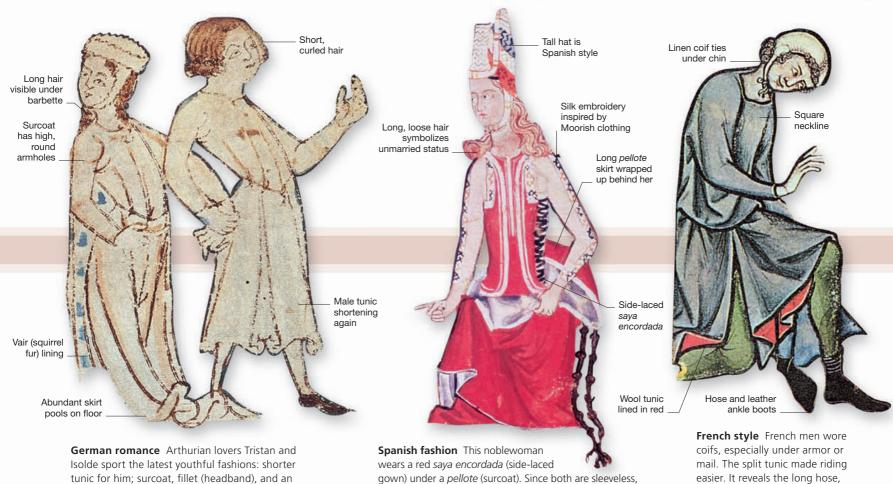

Very little complete medieval clothing has survived. Some of the best examples date from the 13th century; one such find was of members of the Castilian royal family buried in tombs in the Monasterio de las Huelgas in Burgos, Spain, dressed in royal garb. One young prince's grave from 1275 revealed a laced aljuba (tunic), sideless surcoat (right), and a mantle. The set of matching clothes, called a "robe," is of the finest Moorish silk and gold samite woven with the royal coats of arms of the kingdoms of Castile and León. The finds confirm the accuracy of contemporary illuminations and their usefulness as historical records. The images also bring written descriptions of noble finery to life.

Pellote (surcoat) belonging to Don Fernando de la Cerda which could be footless or include feet with leather soles.

the embroidered sleeves of her camisa (linen undergarment) show. Spanish-style clothes were especially formfitting.

STATE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE

The buttons shown here are those used in the 14th century. Rather than being sewn, they are secured on to the dress with a single length of cord, a technique that was employed on similar dresses at the time.

SOLUTION HOLES

Buttonholes are hand sewn using silk thread, and all unlined wool edgings of the dress are finished with silk facings. The dress buttons left-over-right, the same as men's clothes. The convention that women's clothing buttons right-over-left came much later.

SINGLE LACE

The neckline is opened here to reveal the gray wool kirtle beneath, front-laced down the center to hip level with a single lace, as was the practice in medieval times.

⊲ EYELETS

Hand-stitched eyelets are set close together and tight to the garment's edge so the lacing is discreet and functional.

SELF-COVERED BUTTONS

The sleeves of the kirtle narrow to long cuffs fastened with up to 50 self-cloth buttons, each one made from a circle of fabric sewn tightly to form a firm ball. These long cuffs would have been impractical for anyone who had to do manual work.

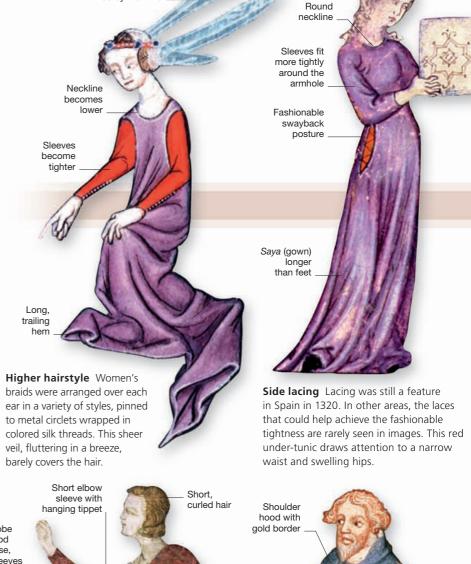

○ OPENED CUFF

An unbuttoned cuff reveals a simple linen shift worn next to the skin. Wealth was reflected in the quality and number of shifts the wearer owned and how frequently they were changed and laundered.

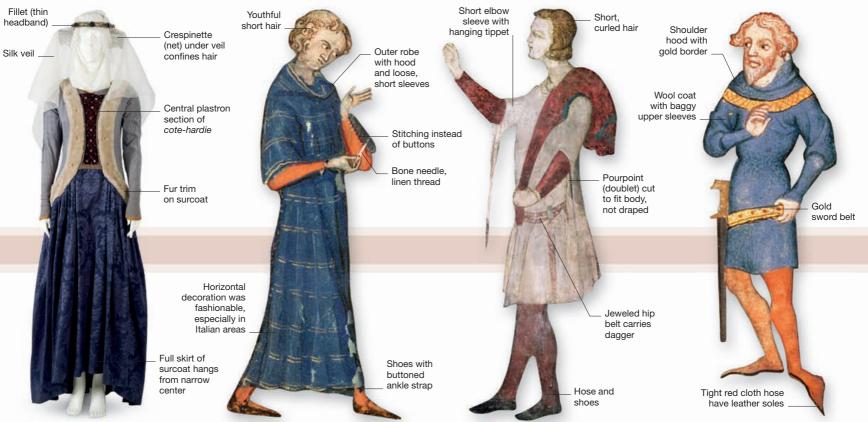

FITTING TO THE BODY

The biggest development of the 14th century was the move from flat, draped garments belted for shape to the cutting of curved pieces with more complex construction to fit the body—the beginning of tailoring. Closures, especially buttons, became more important, used on new front openings and along very tight long sleeves. Close fitting revealed men's and women's figures to great effect: sideless surcoats drew attention to slim waists and new waist seams, and low belts emphasized the hips. Chests looked larger—both sexes made use of padding. Colors began to contrast instead of match, and parti-coloring became popular. Many believe that changes in "fashion" began increasing in speed from this time. Clothing had tended to reflect one's place in society. However, a greater variety of fabrics and accessories, such as hoods, belts, veils, gloves, and shoes, made it possible to blur social distinctions.

Sheer silk or linen veil, shown lifted by the wind Long, loose hair for unmarried girls

Reproduction sideless surcoat The surcoat armholes are enlarged to display the sides of the body clad in a clinging cote-hardie beneath. The central plastron section could be richly jeweled or embroidered, or have elaborate buttons.

Sewing a sleeve For the fashionable man, getting dressed might involve sewing sleeve and other seams together for a smooth, perfect fit. This man's long robe prefigures the houppelande, a wide-sleeved, flared outer garment.

A southern French hunter A hunting companion in 1343 has slung his hood with a long cornette (tail) over one shoulder. Separate hoods ended in shoulder capes and offered another site for elegant arrangement.

French knight This 1378 image shows the classic 14th-century male shape: hair at ear-length; nipped-in waist; round chest; tight lower sleeves over the hand; slim, fitted hips with no fullness below, set off with a belt; and pointed toes.

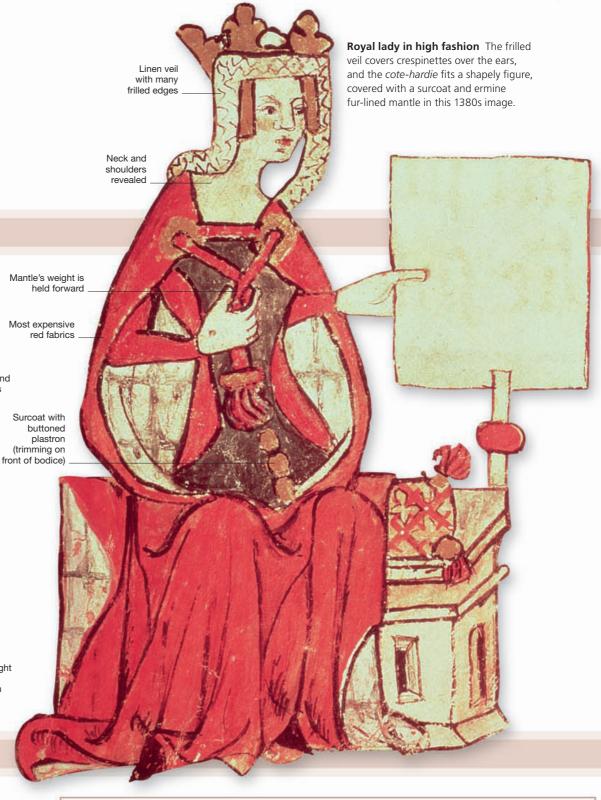

FITTING TO THE BODY

Perfect fit This lady's 1370 cote-hardie (outer tunic) cleaves exactly to her upper body. The high, round chest was also favored in men's fashion. The wide, boat neckline shows off her shoulders, and her braided-back hair is brought forward in loops over her ears.

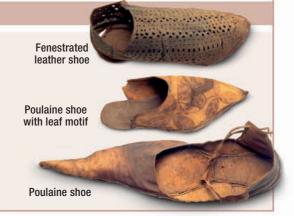

Getting slimmer A 1350s Neapolitan illumination shows how the amount of fabric used in tunics was reduced as fit improved. This man still has a fuller skirt, slit over each thigh. His hose are made of wool fabric cut on the bias (diagonally) to stretch around the leg.

LEATHER SHOES

Medieval leather shoes survive in much greater numbers than fragile textiles. These London examples show some of the styles. Piercing or incising with decorative patterns was popular and showed off colored hose underneath. The long "poulaine" toe was stuffed with whalebone, wool, or moss to keep the shape. Noblemen's shoes were embroidered with silks. It was hard to keep feet dry, so people wore pattens—overshoes with raised wooden soles that kept feet above the mud and filth as they walked.

TRAILING ELEGANCE

At the turn of the 15th century fashion for the nobility became more extravagant. Improved technology allowed weavers to run riot with patterns of twining symmetrical fruit and flowers, or geometric motifs. Italians invented velvet, with its sumptuous pile. Better looms meant the aristocracy could buy more of their favorite taffetas and damask, and indulge in more complex patterns. Long gowns trailed on the ground, implying that the wearer was rich enough to afford copious amounts of material. Both sexes wore a voluminous outer garment called a houppelande. It fit on the shoulders, was full and often belted, and draped in folds. The sleeves could be long and wide, sometimes adorned with tinkling bells.

For women, the silhouette was long, with a high waist and small bosom. It was the fashion to walk with the belly slightly protruding and the hips thrust forward. This helped to carry the weight of the fabric and balance the headgear, as well as to suggest fertility. In this painting, the young couple celebrate their betrothal. The red turban of the young man is decorated with dagged (snipped) material. His fur-lined houppelande trails on the ground. Fur and feathers decorate his fiancée's turban, and her dress, derived from the houppelande, has a bodice that fits tightly to the hips. The trailing finery and elaborate headgear of the nobility raised moral indignation among the clergy, who reminded the rich that such ostentation was not good for the soul.

66

So much pouncing of chisel to make holes, so much dagging of shears, with the superfluity in length of the aforesaid gowns, trailing in the dung and mire, on horse and... foot, as well of man as of woman...

GEOFFREY CHAUCER, THE PARSON'S TALE, 1386-1395

99

LES TRES RICHES HEURES DU DUC DE BERRY >

Known simply as The Book of Hours, this richly decorated prayer book was commissioned by John, Duke of Berry, between 1412 and 1416. The page here represents April, and shows a young couple exchanging engagement rings.

KNIGHTS IN ARMOR

The arms and armor used by medieval warriors changed over time with new developments in weapons and improved technical skills in shaping metal. A knight needed to be proficient in handling many different kinds of weapon and had to be able to defend himself against similar weapons wielded by his opponents. In the early middle ages men fought with axes, spears, swords, and bows and arrows, either on foot or on horseback, and protected their bodies with short-sleeved shirts of chain mail made of interlocking metal rings. Plate armor began to be developed in the 13th century as a defense against more efficient crossbows, which fired bolts that could pierce soft mail. Armor was also sometimes made from leather hardened by boiling. By the mid-15th century knights were completely encased in suits of shining armor, draped with their heraldic coats of arms.

Cylindrical great

helm with decorations

METALWORKING 10th-century helmet Single sheet of metal foraed into a cone Nose piece is sole face protection Advances in the technology of metalworking played a large part in determining what knights wore. In the 10th and 11th centuries soldiers carried a shield as a first line of defense. They wore a coat of chain mail with a hood covered by a helmet that protected the head. Only a nasal guard covered the face. Sections of plate supplemented the While armor provided practical protection, chivalrous and romantic ideals inspired the knight in battle. His lady would give him a piece of her clothing-a sleeve, veil, or belt-to tie to his armor as a token of her favor.

chain mail over the centuries. By the 15th century soldiers and horsemen wore full plate armor, made from multiple sheets of metal, and no longer needed a shield.

Pointed helmet with nose piece

KNIGHTS IN ARMOR

Quilted clothing In the 14th century thick, quilted or stuffed clothing, as in this reconstruction, was worn under chain mail and plate armor to buffer the body against the metal, distribute weight, and cushion blows.

English or German soldier This soldier wears a hauberk (a calf-length mail tunic). Underneath, he is dressed in a fashionable long tunic and pointed shoes. The shield covers most of the body and has a metal boss to deflect blows.

Norman "nasal"

Sword

Top fits to body helmet with chin strap

Central

metal

Lace

fastenings

Padded trousers

> Medieval tournament A man fighting on horseback needed different armor than a foot soldier. Full plate armor had to protect the whole body but be light and flexible enough to allow the rider to mount his horse unaided.

French chain mail and plate armor All the individual pieces of armor making up a suit of mid-15th-century plate were tied to a fitted and padded arming doublet, using laces attached to the doublet. Knights dressed from the legs upward.

Horse trappings in gules (red) and argent (white or silver)

DOUBLET

Close-fitting collar

⊲ TAILORING

A close view of the back curve of the armhole shows the gussets that create the grande assiette the large plate shape that defines the armhole. Each sleeve has nine pattern pieces. The many pieces economically use up every scrap of the highly expensive fabric.

□ FLATTENED BUTTONS

The doublet's 50 sleeve buttons and 30 buttons at the front opening are made from a circle of silk stuffed with cotton fiber and sewn into a tight, firm ball. Toward the waist, flatter buttons with a wooden or bone interior allow a belt to be worn comfortably.

SLASHED VENTS

Slashes at each side seam at the same level as the points (where the hose are attached) help the wearer to move freely.

□ LINING AND CUFFS

The lining of the doublet is fine blue linen, which is overlaid with a thin layer of cotton fiber and then a layer of silk. The garment is then quilted through all the layers. Buttonholes are stitched with silk thread.

SUSPENDED HOSE

The hose are suspended from the doublet by five pairs of laces with metal aglets or chapes. These are sewn into the doublet and threaded through eyelets on the hose. Later garments had eyelets on the doublet too.

REGIONAL

FLAIR Tight foundation for loose outer clothes Braies could reach to the knee The 15th century saw an eclectic mix of regional styles and the -these are short beginnings of pants. For men, the fitted cote (tunic) became even shorter. It was worn on its own or underneath long outer garments called houppelandes, using vast amounts of fabric and bringing back wide sleeves. Clothing became more vivid as dyeing and weaving improved. At the same time black grew more fashionable, especially for the middle classes, who spent more and more on clothes. Better wools led to the craze for cutting raw edges as decoration and fur use reached its peak. Individual hose legs were stitched together to create full-bottomed hose—a key development and the origin of today's pants. Headgear offered variety—high felt cones, draped cloth chaperons and hoods, wide-brimmed straw hats, and Hood has heavily Linen underwear A man undressing dagged tail large silk and fur bonnets. Sleeve shows 1420s underclothes. The loose shirt hangs over a pair of short braies (fitted shapes also grew more inventive. underpants). Doublets had many front Waist neatly buttons and a waist seam for a close fit. Doublet Leather pouch collar shows hangs from belt underneath robe neck Hiah colla Center Gathered front closing sleeve heads Clothes lined Paternoster Leather purse in contrasting (rosary) with metalheads edged top flap In France cut Sleeves edges were Fur lining draped over considered a shows German style at hem Lattice cutwork Split tunic boots show seams show hose underneath off dagging Contrasting panels of Parti-colored dagged cloth shoes and hose Hose in openbacked slippers Portable accessories Men and women hung all the items they needed during the day off their belts, a handy way of carrying before pockets. This English man's hat has a liripipe (long tail) draped over his shoulder.

Dagged edges This Italian man from around 1400 wears fashionable wool clothes in different bright colors. with decorative cuts, called dagging, around the edges. The cloth was so tightly woven that edges did not fray. The tight sleeves of a green doublet cover his hands.

Shorter French robe This haincelin (shorter robe) has dagged (decoratively cut) edges. The earlier hood became a hat by putting the face hole on top of the head and elegantly arranging the extra material.

High collar

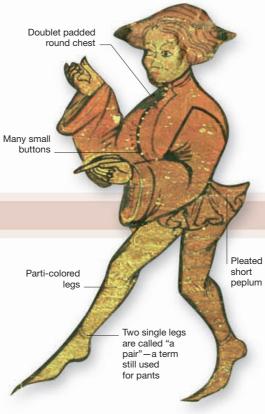

Open at

Hose laced to doublet Young men practicing sword fighting would strip to their basic garments. Laces tie the individual legs of the thigh-high hose to the bottom of the doublet to hold them up. Linen drawers show underneath.

English style Shorter doublets with long sleeves were an English fashion. The cut of this reproduction exploits the silk's symmetrical formal pomegranate pattern. To economize, doublets could have plain bodies with silk used only for the sleeves.

Spaniard in short doublet The dramatic shortening of men's top garments exposed the gaps in their hose. For modesty, hose were soon stitched together at the back, with a triangular piece of fabric over the crotch. Breeches were born.

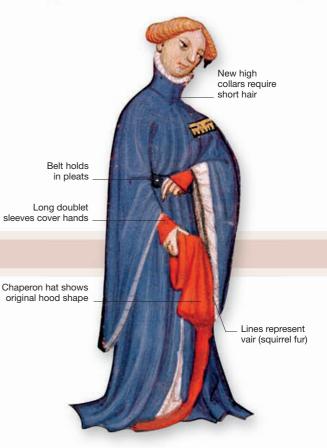

Italian merchant in Flemish dress In van Eyck's 1434 portrait the sleeveless burgundy velvet heuque (cloak) is lined in marten fur. It has open sides, leaving the arms free. The ensemble is somber, respectable, and of high quality.

The Little Ice Age made temperatures in Europe dip in the 14th century. Demand for fur clothing was huge; sometimes up to 2,000 animals were used in one garment. Most luxury furs came from Russia: ermine, a stoat's winter coat; sable, a brown or black weasel fur; and brown marten skins. Cheaper local furs were budge (lambs' wool), coney (rabbit or hare), fox, and wolf.

The 14th-century Italian merchants above inspecting vair (winter squirrel fur) have the same fur lining their hoods. Furs had heraldic meanings and painters too represented them with stylized patterns.

Houppelande with vair lining Fashion took advantage of the wider and cheaper textiles produced on better looms. Large houppelande robes reached the ground at the hem and sometimes the sleeves, and replaced mantles.

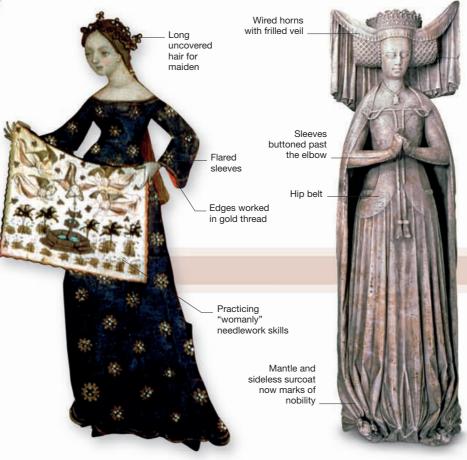

NOVELTY AND LUXURY

any hallmarks of fashion were in place by the late 1400s: novelty, innovation, an element of impracticality, luxury, and commentators insisted—excessive vanity and social presumption. Sumptuary laws still tried ineffectually to regulate who wore what. English and French head wear was fantastical, large, and varied. Italians were more natural; the Flemish preferred modest linen veils. Like men, women adopted the houppelande and other long, full pleated gowns cut from large, circular shapes, belted over a tight underdress that was buttoned or, increasingly, laced down the front. Their long, separate sleeves emerged from under the huge, open outer sleeves. Straight, scooped, or square necklines were low and shaped fashionably high round bosoms, sharply contrasting with the new high collars of outer clothing.

Long hem of

gown shows

sheen of top-quality wool

Italo-Spanish dress Critics complained that necklines were so wide the breasts wanted to leave them. This dress from the 1390s has no belt, Italian style. The pearl-embroidered silk might have been woven locally in northern Italy.

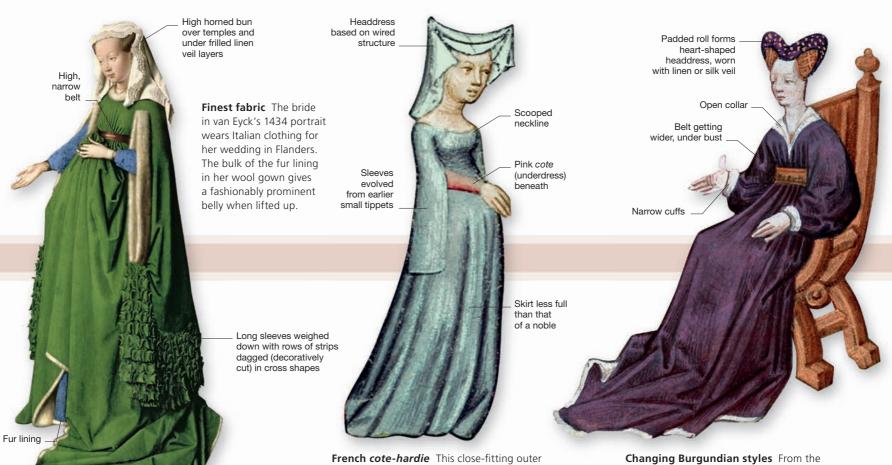

English headpiece In 1417 a chronicler wrote of hats with "horns marvelously tall and broad, with long ears either side." The Countess of Arundel's effigy made in 1415 records this startling fashion.

1430s the robe with narrow cuffs replaced the houppelande. The high collar, opened in the front and folded down, was the start of the V-neck popular later in the century.

gown has hanging but not excessive sleeves.

modified French court fashion around 1410.

modest wired horns shows how normal women and the fabric is plain. The linen veil over in gown skirt

RENAISSANCE SPLENDOR

1450-1624

RENAISSANCE SPLENDOR

This was the period when fashion finally moved from draped clothing to fitted garments and the art of tailoring came into its own. Clothes gained structure and became stiffer and more supportive. The first templates for garments that remained modern items of clothing were created: hose with a fitted doublet and outer coat for men, a bodice with a separate skirt for women.

Differentiation in clothing

Clothing now consisted of a greater number of parts including detachable sleeves, under- and overskirts, sleeveless jerkins, and breeches of different lengths. This emphasis on separate parts of the body reflected the new interest in human anatomy that had gripped the natural sciences. The masculine form was enhanced by the latest clothing, with its wide shoulders, prominent codpieces, strong legs, and bellies. Women's clothes emphasized their narrow waists, combining wide shoulders and skirts with a deeply pointed bodice. The garments of different nations or regions showed greater differentiation, and the religious schism between the Catholic church and the reform or Protestant faiths led to the creation of new visual identities for members of the different faiths.

Age of exploration

The Ottoman Empire rose in the near East and southeast Europe, after conquering Constantinople (modern-day Istanbul) in 1453, bringing Islamic might to the region. Through the 16th century the Spanish empire was the richest and most powerful; it began to wane in the early 17th century as the French became more dominant. This was an age of conquests, exploration, and expansion into the Americas, following Columbus's arrival in 1492. Other explorers ventured around the world opening up sea trading routes around Africa and Asia, crossing the Pacific and discovering new goods to bring back to Europe.

Dominant personalities

New realism and naturalism in painting meant that portraits were much more realistic and could accurately represent individuals and their clothes. Dominant personalities in Europe—Henry VIII and Elizabeth I in England, Philip II in Spain, François I and Henry IV in France, the de'Medici dynasty in Florence, and Suleiman the Magnificent in the Ottoman empire—reinforced their position with strong visuals in paintings that portrayed them in fashionable clothes. Ruffs, in particular, became popular. The starching process stiffened cloth and allowed the development of very wide ruffs, and lace became the most luxurious textile to own. In the late 16th century heeled shoes were invented.

1450-69 1470-99 1500-19

1470s

Early versions of the farthingale appear in Spain as the verdugada or verdugado, a bell-shaped skirt stiffened with hoops of cane, or later. willow. Originally hoops are worn on the outer surface of the dress, later they go underneath the overskirt.

1500-1560s

Men begin layering clothes to give bulk and width especially at the shoulders, creating a square outline. They start wearing hose to show off their shapely legs, suggesting athleticism

▲ Young man wearing fur

Sable, lynx, and other exotic furs become fashionable. replacing squirrel furs such as miniver and vair. Ermine remains the perogative

The new fashion is for slashing garments to reveal the lining or undergarments. Perhaps from the actions of Swiss soldiers following Battle of Grandson in 1476, when they patched tattered clothes with fabrics plundered from dead nobles

Women's hair is pulled back from forehead and covered by a caul (small bag worn over a bun at the back of the head) or a crespine (mesh net). their hair spread out on Fashionable women shave their foreheads and eyebrows. In warmer Italy married women also used to bleach it. wear their hair long, braided,

Men start to wear their hair longer. Blonde hair becomes the vogue in Italy for women. Women sit in the sun with circular disk-shaped hats to lighten it. Chemicals are ▲ Wide, square

Brocade becomes a luxury fabric as weaving techniques improve. The best fabric comes from Italy with Chinese, Indian, and Persian motifs reflecting increased trade with these countries in loose knots, and uncovered

Marriage of Catherine of Aragon to Henry VIII of England starts a trend for geometric black-work embroidery on linen clothing. Designs are inspired by patterns popular in Spain from Moorish culture

■ Black-work embroidery

Italian brocade dress

Metal pins cost a penny each in Henry VIII's time so fish bones and thorns are often used for sewing.

Charles V of Spain unites the Hapsburg territories with Aragon and Castile. Spain becomes the dominant power in Europe. Black clothes with rich decoration are favored.

And I will make thee beds of roses, With a thousand fragrant posies, A cap of flowers and a kirtle, Embroidered all with leaves of myrtle.

THE PASSIONATE SHEPHERD TO HIS LOVE, CHRISTOPHER MARLOW C.1589

		\c\\\
1520-39	1540-59	1560-64	1565–99	1600-20	1621–24
Spanish Conquistadors defeat the Aztecs in Mexico. Cochineal used as a red dye is brought back to Europe. ▼ Collecting cochineal beetles		1560-1600 Men's clothes get narrower on shoulders and longer.		1605 Hemlines go up to show feet, following the introduction of heeled shoes for the rich, hence the expression "well heeled."	1620s Colored stockings, especially red ones, become popular. The newer style of latchet-closing shoe shows off the hose underneath, and embroidery at the ankle.
	STR.	1562 English legislate against the wearing of "monstrous and outrageous greatness of hose" after fashion for padding tops of legs reaches ridiculous proportions.		In lady's wear, the short jacket is introduced. These are initially closed with ribbons, later with metal hooks and eyes. They are worn by all stations of society but the materials depend on rank. Boned bodices cinch in waist and lift the barely covered breasts.	1620s Surface ornamentation of fabrics is replaced by bright, solid-color satins decorated with rosettes, wide bows, and looped trims. For women, the virago sleeve —full slashed sleeve divided into two puffs at the elbow by a ribbon or trim—comes in.
	1540 The codpiece reaches its peak in terms of size and decoration. Designed to cover the gap between the two legs of men's hose, it is padded and shaped to emphasize rather than disguise the genital area.		▲ Pope Pius V wearing his white habit 1566 Pope Pius V is credited with changing the color of the papal robes from red to white, as he would not give up his Dominican habit.
▲ Intricate lacework 1527 Mateo Pagano in Italy and Pierre de Quinty in Cologne publish the first pattern books for embroidery and lace making.	1550s The chopine, an early platform overshoe, has been popular since the late 15th century. At this time they reach the peak of their height (20 in/50 cm).		1570s Introduction of the French, or "wheel," farthingale, with a stuffed roll around the hips and a hoop with horizontal stiffeners tied around the waist that makes the skirt stick out from the body.	1600–1650 Ruffs are replaced by broad collars of lace. Hats become taller and broader with brims, sleeves get puffier. ▶ The Laughing Cavalier
			farthingale underskirt	by Franz Hals (1624)
		1564 Starching is introduced from the Low Countries and allows for the development of large, stiff ruffs. Starch can be colored yellow or blue to tint the ruff.		English Puritans establish a colony in Plymouth, Massachusetts. Somber colors and tall, black capotain hats are worn; lacings and jewelry are forbidden by Puritans.	1625 Fashionable married women abandon the wearing of a cap and wear their hair elaborately styled, uncovered, or with a hat.
	▲ Punched, kid leather and pine chopine from Venice, Italy

THE FASHION SPLIT

y the middle of the 15th century there were marked regional differences in women's dress. The medieval standard one-piece tunic moved toward a broad spectrum of fashions in cut and construction. As garments began to separate into pieces, dressmaking played with the cut of skirts and sleeves newly liberated from bodices, and incorporated folded collars and laced closures. Head wear continued trends from earlier in the century but was becoming spectacularly complex. As the elongated Gothic look disappeared, clothing became softer and wider. Improved weaving technologies continued to increase textile production and make fabrics more affordable, especially for the growing, prosperous merchant classes. In Northern Europe fur remained a vital addition for warmth.

of pleating gave a neat fullness to the skirt.

Wulsthaube (German headgear) made

HATS AND VEILS

Sleeves

getting tighter

Streamer connects her to fellow dance

Long trailing hem

Cylindrical hat

Headdresses often emphasized a woman's high, smooth forehead. Many women bleached their hair to a fashionable blonde, or plucked their hairline to create a higher forehead. Cylindrical hats of different lengths were stylish in France, Burgundy, England, and the Low Countries. They were supported by a small cap or wire structure. Wiring and pins were used to attach fine veils of silk or linen over the headdress.

> Double cornet headdress The padded roll on this French lady's headdress creates a split effect like a clamshell. Her ballgown shows the shift from a high houppelande neckline to the lower V-line one, with less pleating. She could wear another gown over this one.

Split overgown The trend for visible linen undergarments began in Spain. In this portrait from 1482 Isabel of Castile's long, white shift sleeves are pulled from a slit in her outer sleeve. Reinforced horizontal bands help the skirt to stand out—this is the farthingale's origin.

PANOPLY

The spectrum of Venetian society—and clothing—at the end of the 15th century is displayed here in a rich panorama. The crowds around the Rialto Bridge in 1494 wear an array of styles that reveal something about their position in society. The gondoliers and young men are at the height of fashion, with long curled hair and fantastic displays of ziponi (doublets), jerkins, and camisas (shirts) bursting from the seams. The calce (hose) patterns are particularly varied. Their passengers' dress shows restrained and better-quality versions of these fashions, sometimes covered with looser open robes. On land and crossing the bridge are the patrician professional men, members of guilds and government. They wear baretas (small round caps) and vestas (long, sober, official gowns) in red or black with a wide-sleeve style called a dogale.

Visitors from Islamic lands, who traded with Venice, can be distinguished by their turbans. Two Jewish men are clothed in black hats and Oriental silks. On the balcony are Dominican monks in white and clerical men in red robes under white albs. Few women are out in public, although they can be glimpsed in windows and beating an expensive "Turkey" carpet on the roof. Linen shirts and other items normally hidden from view can be seen drying on roof poles.

The sea not only brought the city her prosperity, but...Venetian painters were inspired to record the dazzling effects of light on the buildings and bridges that line the canals...the bustle of canal traffic, the gondolas... and merchant vessels.

WILL DURANT, THE RENAISSANCE, 1953

CLOTHES PARADE BY THE RIALTO BRIDGE

This detail from Vittore Carpaccio's painting The Miracle of the Relic of the True Cross (1494) shows a cross section of 15th-century Venetian society dressed in the fashions of the day

RENAISSANCE MEN

Trom the 1480s new broad shapes began to replace the last traces of the medieval in men's clothing. Instead of an emphasis on a long, vertical male figure, the Renaissance man, with his earthier, artistic, and scientific pursuits and a new interest in classical ideas, favored blunt and square forms that expanded sideways. Soldiers' and statesmen's cropped hair grew into the long, natural locks of poets and scholars. Men began to wear collections of clothing as an ensemble and used surfaces, fabrics, and edges as decorative spaces. Places where clothes connected—in seams, the tops of sleeves, and under lacing—revealed layers underneath. Though pleating continued, natural > Wide and square All the elements of a new style were in place by 1490 in France—broad shoulders, flat-toed shoes, copious draping, and a wide neckline. The loose outer gown hides the close-fitting doublet and hose.

folds reappeared using the elegant drape of circular pieces to great effect.

Short robe, long toes Serving the king at the table was an honor for English lords. This man's sword shows his knightly position. The exaggerated long toes of poulaine shoes were very fashionable at court.

Round cap

Visible lacing

Pantofle slippers with open backs

Belt with decorated purse

> Open sleeves caught with Intricate silk brocade

clasps

Wide-toed shoes

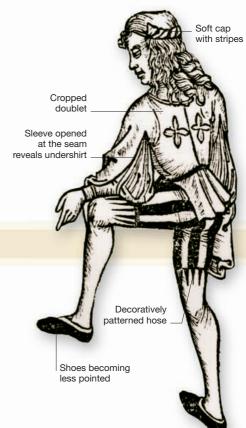

Sword, dagger,

and hunting purse

Mi-parti

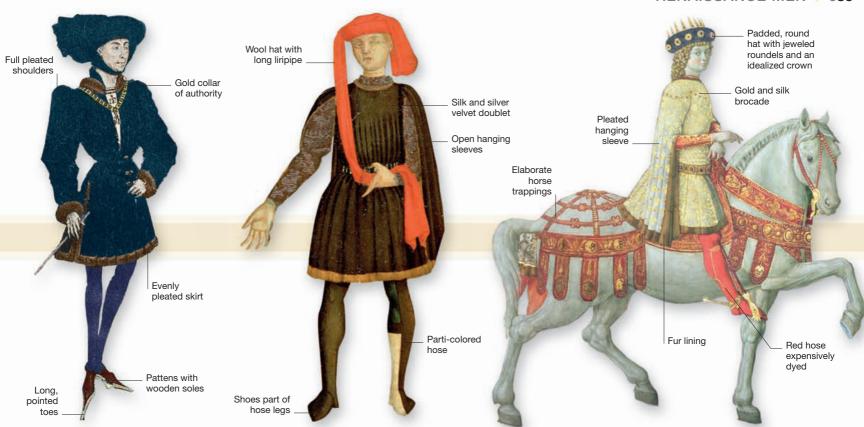

(two-part) colored robe

> Mid-length robe

Decorative elements Northern European youths flaunted fashion knowledge by blending new Italian influences such as long, curling hair and a slashed doublet sleeve with local styles. The short doublet was a sign of youth.

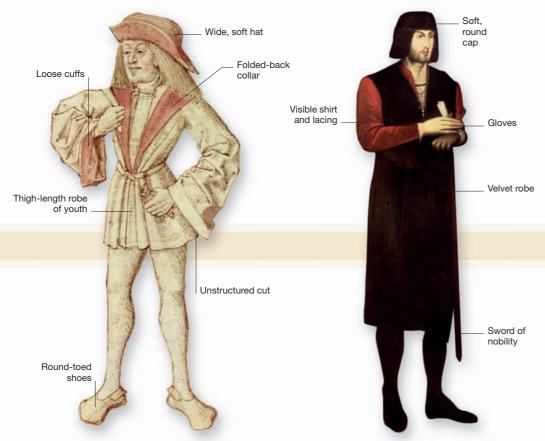

RENAISSANCE MEN

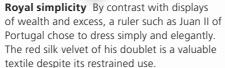

Black velvet robe Charles the Bold's outfit picked up on the popularity of black through the century. Rich, true blacks were difficult to dye and displayed a subtle expensive quality. His large chaperon (hat) was stuffed for shape.

Knee-length robe Sumptuary laws in many cities regulated what people in each social level could wear. This noble Florentine man used his outer gown's open sleeves to flaunt the costly Italian velvet underneath.

The power of gold Lorenzo de' Medici, the Magnificent, reflected the power of his Florentine banking family c.1460 in clothing woven with gold. Even his riding accessories were elaborately wrought and made from gold to reveal his social position.

New naturalism English clothing also became less structured and more naturalistic. This man, with his youthful clothing and cheerful expression, embodies the sanguine, optimistic character described in medieval science and medicine.

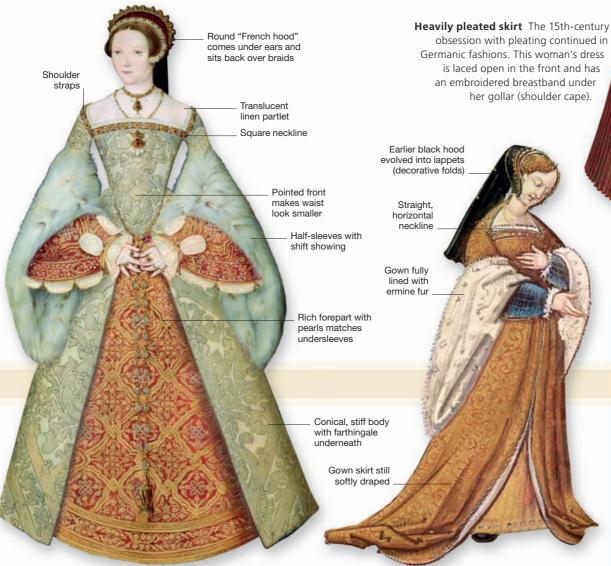

LIFE CHANGES

As a man moved through each stage of life, his clothing changed to reveal his place in society. Active young men wore short, fitted doublets and robes revealing shapely thighs. In adult maturity, around 25, the hemline started creeping farther down the thigh. By middle and old age hemlines reached the floor. Longer and darker robes enhanced dignity for professional and political men, and for those who did not do manual labor, such as scholars and doctors. The floorlength robes also kept them warm.

FROM DRAPE TO SHAPE

 \nearrow oft, draped lines began to disappear as the century went on. Women's dress had two main parts: bodice and skirt, and sleeves were often separate too. The gradual move from clothing that draped over the body to clothing that shaped it was complete. Only outer robes and coats were now waistless. Full skirts widened with gathered and pleated waistlines. Outer skirts were opened up in front to reveal a petticoat or forepart underneath. The Spanish farthingale (a hooped petticoat) created a bell shape and defined the century's silhouette. Bodices became smooth and fitted by adding stiff materials inside. While the torso straightened, sleeves grew larger and more elaborate.

Triangular shapes Catherine Parr, last wife of Henry VIII, shows off the smooth, triangular shapes achieved by reinforced support beneath outer clothing. The silver-gilt fabric of this gown from 1545 is woven with a large pomegranate pattern.

Fur-lined silk gown The huge sleeves of the Duchesse d'Etampes' 1540 French gown are turned back to reveal an expensive ermine fur lining. While her gown trails on the floor, the kirtle skirt is ankle length.

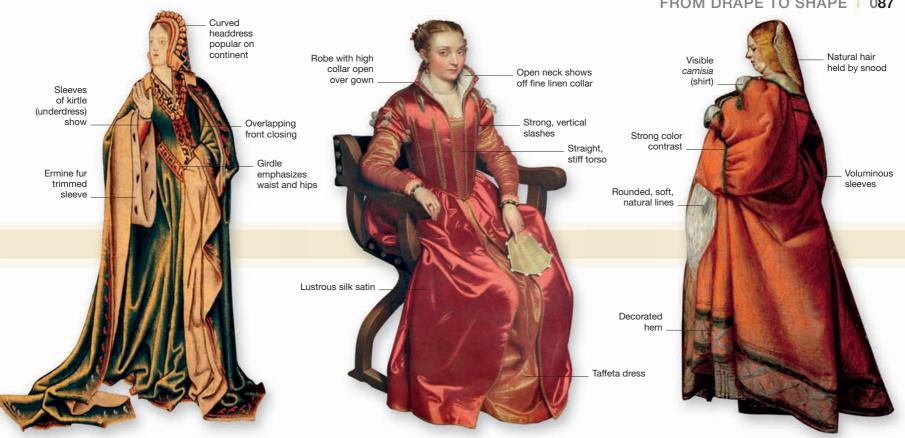

Gable headdress

Fashion became architectural as the century progressed. Strong, new shapes distinct from body lines were built over supports that kept the garments taut and straight. The English gable headdress used wire underneath to turn the 15th-century hood into a sharp peak. Spanish women began to wear horizontal willow hoops called vertugado (farthingale) under their skirts to make them stand out. Stiffened bodices flattened the bosom, creating an inflexible torso like an inverted triangle.

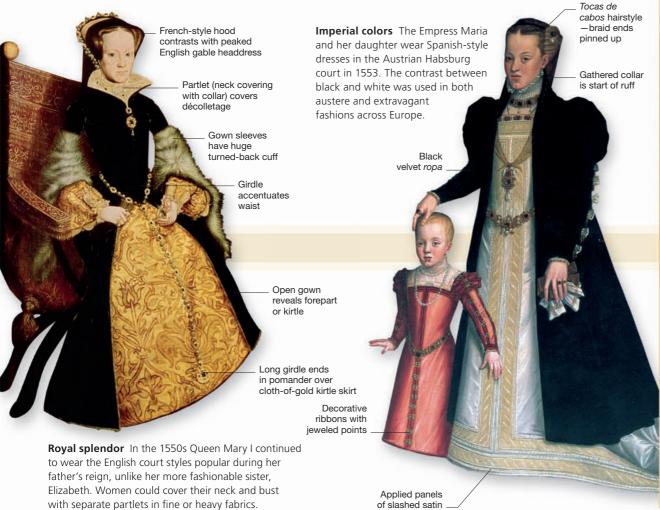

FROM DRAPE TO SHAPE

Softly draped dress This Flemish dress from c.1500 shows the soft, early version of a style that became rigid in form as the century progressed. The torso is natural in shape, and the sleeve cuffs are large. The woman's long mantle (cloak) covers her trailing skirts.

Satin and taffeta The smooth, tight bodice contrasts with the sumptuous, light-catching folds of this Italian dress from c.1555. The red overgown's short sleeves have fine silk puffs between the panes of fabric.

Gown with large sleeves Even without extra reinforcement, tightly woven silks had a stiffness and body that gave an angular bulk, here painted by Venetian artist Titian.

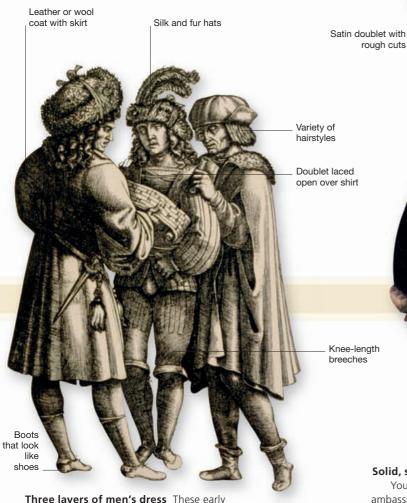

LINEN SHIRTS

Beneath every elaborate gown a linen undergarment was worn next to the skin. It was known by many names: English smock, shift, or shirt; French chemise; Italian camisia; Spanish camisa; and German hemd. This was an essential layer because linen could be washed and it protected outer garments (which were never washed) from the body. When clothing started to reveal this layer, emphasis on the linen quality and delicate embroidery around the neck and cuffs increased. Sleeves became bigger to create abundant billows emerging from gowns.

NEW MEN IN A NEW WORLD

s conquest, exploration, and wars expanded the known world, men's fashion broadened too. Clothing expressed an assertive, confident masculinity through bulky layers that increased a man's physical presence. Huge shoulders, broad chests, prominent codpieces, and an emphasis on the thighs all enhanced a sense of the active body. The legs usually peeped out below knee-length skirted robes and jerkins and the newly separate breeches and hose. Clothing complexity increased as linings and shirts burst through deliberately cut and slashed outer garments. Embroidery and lines of braid also helped enrich the surfaces of clothing, largely replacing patterned textiles.

Three layers of men's dress These early 16th-century Italian musicians wear a big-sleeved doublet and hose (center), a bulky coat with a separate skirt cut on the circle (left), and, over the whole, an armhole cloak with fur collar (right).

Solid, square silhouette Holbein the Younger's 1533 portrait of a French ambassador epitomizes the fashionable solid, rectangular shape. Round puffed sleeves create massive shoulders, while the lines of his cap, skirt, shoes, and spread-out pose all emphasize the horizontal.

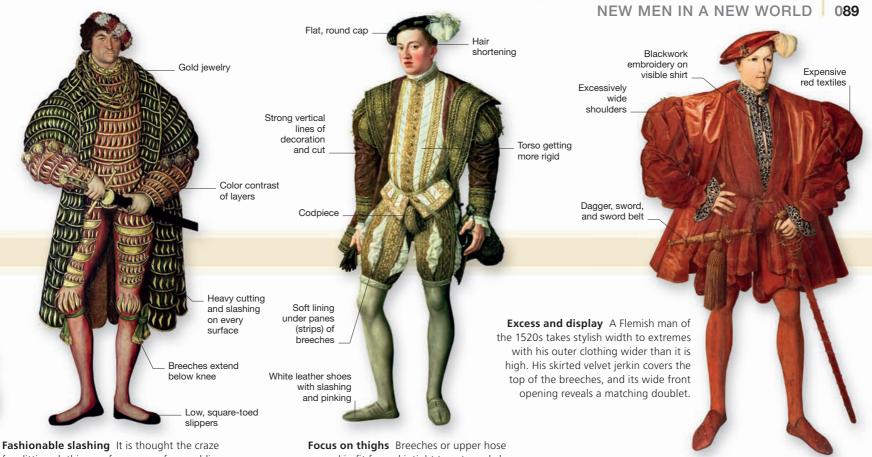

rough cuts

Shovel-shaped

Knit cap

White fur used as contrasting trim

Fashionable slashing It is thought the craze for slitting clothing surfaces came from soldiers cutting plundered garments to make them fit. In this 1514 portrait, Henry IV, Duke of Saxony, wears a whole suit slashed to reveal the inner lining.

Focus on thighs Breeches or upper hose ranged in fit from skintight to extremely loose and baggy. By 1548 the jerkin skirts on Archduke Ferdinand of Tirol had shrunk into small panes, flaunting the codpiece and thighs.

Paned decoration In this reconstruction, the deep U-shaped jerkin front goes over a doublet made of fabric panes (strips) joined by buttons. The sleeves are also made of panes.

Monochrome monarch Henri II of France, one of the age's dominant personalities, exploited the stark drama of black and white, with severe gold decoration, in a mid-16th-century portrait of sovereign power.

THE CODPIECE

The origins of the codpiece lie in the triangle of fabric used to join the two separate hose legs in the late 15th century when doublets shortened. Soon padding was added and ended up as the codpiece—a prominent, suggestive shape filling the gap between the legs of the breeches. It soon became a normal part of male clothing, in style across many countries and social levels until the end of the 1500s. Tailors became as creative with codpiece shapes as with other clothing details. The codpiece could hide a pocket or even be used as a pincushion.

COAT, DOUBLET, AND HOSE

SAXONY ENSEMBLE

This unique and extraordinary set of mid-16th-century clothes belonged to Maurice, Elector of Saxony from 1547 to 1553. It is the most complete—and oldest surviving—example of real fashion from the period. The princely ensemble comprises a short, round, pleated coat with puffed and hanging sleeves, a satin doublet, puffed and slashed trunk hose, and chamois or suede hose. Yellow silks accented with black velvet are an extravagant reflection of the heraldic colors of the Saxon state. Using bands of fabric in this way to decorate clothing was fashionable throughout the 16th century. The almost square, imposing silhouette matches exactly with the aristocratic masculine fashions seen in many paintings of the time.

> Doublet sleeves have horizontal bands of silk and large diagonal cuts

> > SIDE VIEW

△ TRUNK HOSE

The trunk hose are made of panes of silk velvet on the bias, slashed diagonally so the cuts appear straight. Each strip is bound in satin. Inside, pieces of satin are crumpled down to give the fashionable puffed effect.

Wide, straight lapels

IN DETAIL

The buttons closing the front of the doublet are made by wrapping a wood core with a herringbone pattern of silk thread. The shank is very long to raise the decorative part above the strain of the buttonholes, which are stitched in silk thread.

SILK DAMASK

The stunning yellow silk is damask woven: this means the massive, rounded pomegranate pattern is made by contrasting the matte and sheen of two directions of weaving that catch the light differently. It was more expensive than a plain weave.

□ PUFFED SHOULDERS

By alternating straight strips of black velvet with the damask to form puffs, the shoulders are made bigger. Increasing the volume across the torso was popular in the early 16th century. It added bulk and an imposing presence. Laces on the inside hold up the puffs.

PASSEMENTERIE KNOTS

On the end of the hanging sleeves are cross shapes of Italian passementerie—cord, knot, and tassel work made from silk. The vegetable-dyed colors have faded from the original violet. The pale parts of the knots are entwined with silver-gilt thread to catch the light.

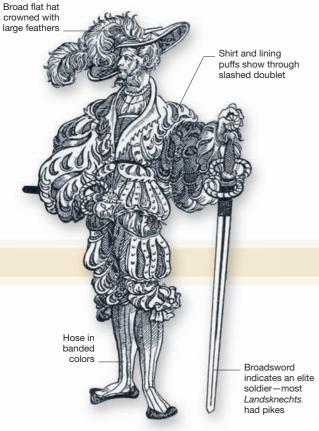

⊲ EVEN FOLDS

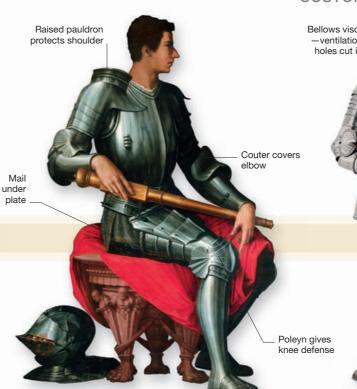

The elegant hang of the coat is created by deep pleats. In German regions at this time, both men's and women's clothing used huge quantities of round, even pleats. The contrasting color bands form an arresting horizontal against the strong vertical lines.

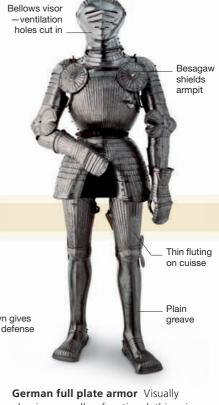

CUSTOM-MADE ARMOR

Landsknecht German "land servants," c.1500, probably based their costume on their rival Swiss mercenaries. Their flamboyant dress typified the Renaissance. They wore multicolored hose and slashed their doublets open to reveal their shirts and linings.

Italian armor The rigidity of plate armor provided better defense against swords than medieval mail. In 1534 Alessandro de' Medici wears a suit of armor with articulated steel plates that allow him to move his arms and legs.

German full plate armor Visually pleasing as well as functional, this cuirass (breastplate) of 1520 is sharply pulled in at the waist like men's clothing, and fluting imitates pleated material. Mitten-type gauntlets protect the hands.

Philip II of Spain By the late 16th century full plate armor was less common. Philip confined himself to a gold-embellished cuirass, worn more for ceremony than practical protection.

White knight Robert Radcliffe, Earl of Sussex, wears English armor designed for tournaments in this painting detail c.1593. The earl has unprotected legs since fighting often took place over a barrier.

HELMET TYPES

Sallets were typical of northern Europe from the mid-15th century. They fit the head except for a point to protect the back of the neck. Close helmets enclosed the head but were light enough to allow movement. They had full visors, neck, and chin guards and became more ornate as their battlefield function lessened. Jousting helmets had sloping sides to deflect lance blows.

094

1560-1590

ELEGANT FORMALITY

s the century progressed so the gradual stiffening of women's dress continued. The increasingly rigid garments needed extra support, and separate boned "pairs of bodies" (stiff undergarments) worn under gowns started to appear—the beginning of stays and corsetry. Linear bands and braids followed the clothing's sharp lines and emphasized its control of body shape. The body's natural lines rarely appeared. The rise and power of the Spanish empire made their severe formality and clever tailoring fashionable, although in many Italian areas a more relaxed soft look held sway. Ruffs slowly widened and became separate from shirt collars. Labor-intensive lace made its first appearance and became a mark of luxury—similar to velvets or jewels. Necklines were either at bust level or up to the chin. The silhouette stayed triangular with narrow waists ending in sharp points and full skirts. The tops of sleeves of women's dresses started to be styled into puffs, tabs, and rolls. Male and female fashions followed similar trends of adornments, cut, and color.

Spanish saya In the 1570s Anna of Austria, Queen of Spain, wore an elegant black saya (gown) with white accents and lavish embroidery. The gown's long, pointed sleeves and subtle fit earned Spanish tailors

Silver and gold embroidery

international repute.

ACCESSORIES

The 16th century saw an increase in the variety and adornment of accessories for both men and women. Gloves, made of the finest leather, could be embroidered, and were given as tokens of respect and affection. Fans were popular in hot countries. Linen handkerchiefs were a splendid way to show off the new techniques of needle and bobbin lace. When shoes became visible, their heels and rosettes became equally decorative. Silk and gold ribbons, used in abundance if possible, were also a form of accessory because of their high price.

Embroidered gloves

Feathered

Softer lines This Venetian bride's bodice is rigid and pointed, but her skirt, sleeves, and posture are softer and more relaxed than northern European fashions. Venetian women wore chopines (platform shoes with cork soles) for extra height.

Jeweled aiglets (ribbon tips) with silk ribbons edged with needle lace

High collar

with small ruff

Doublet worn underneath

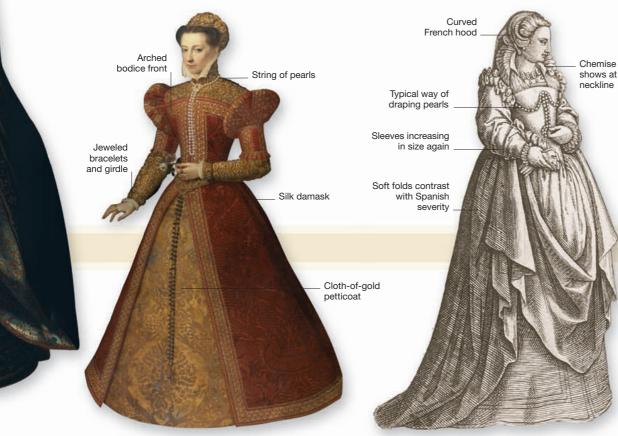

ELEGANT FORMALITY

Masculine style This Flemish ensemble shows how the cut and tailoring of female dress borrowed from male clothing. The doublet has horizontal braid, front buttoning, and shoulder tabs just like a man's.

Saxon Anne, Electress of Saxony, in this painting from c.1565, wears a short-sleeved fitted robe over a low-necked gown. Her heavy gold jewelry, pleated skirt, and hairnet with cap are typically Saxon.

German woman Other than her head wear, this noblewoman's dress keeps up with fashion in Europe. She wears petticoats without the rigidity of a farthingale. Women below her class or in rural areas dressed in more regional style.

Red and gold This sumptuous gown of c.1575 has an open front over a Spanish farthingale. The short oversleeves could be supported with boning, wire, or wood to create their shape. The sleeves and shoulders are encrusted with embroidery.

Married French noblewoman Mature women covered more of their heads, and widows were totally veiled. This gown's soft, full skirts are lifted above a narrower petticoat. The partlet's open collar is the predecessor of a standing ruff.

HAIRSTYLES

New clothes were costly and time consuming but hair could be changed every day. Another example of the inventive Renaissance love of finery, women's hair during the 16th century was parted in the center, swept over the temples, curled, crimped, arranged over pads to keep the shape, frizzled, bewigged, piled into high peaks, or hidden. In Italy, bleaching hair blonde was particularly popular, as in the drawing of the Venetian woman below. Hair on the back of the head was curled up in braids and became a support for hats and headdresses, attached with pins. Women added jewels, ribbons, and feathers, like the ribbons perched on Anne of Denmark's fluffy mounds of hair.

FASHION ICON

ELIZABETHI

aughter of Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII, Elizabeth I ruled England between 1558 and 1603. She inherited many of her father's characteristics, including clever use of image and clothing to cement power and excite the adoration of her people. Her wardrobe was legendary, recorded in portraits that publicized the Protestant queen's self-made mythology. Some of her gowns even went on display in the Tower of London during her lifetime to impress foreign visitors. Her shrewdness, intelligence, and ruthlessness made her a political force, just as the magnificence of huge ruffs trimmed with devastatingly expensive handmade lace, enormous embroidered sleeves, and large, structured, bejeweled stomachers turned her into a glittering fashion icon who loved to be admired.

The language of dress

Elizabeth emphasized her tall, slender frame—and her status—with regal headdresses. French hoods and jeweled caps were the perfect foil to set off her flaming red hair. An iconic hairstyle saw her curls twisted over supports to frame her face like a heart with two large puffs on either side. Haloes of pearls and gold outlined the edges of the hairstyle.

Symbolism made Elizabeth's dress and accessories even more compelling. Pearls—worn as long ropes, seed pearls, and pendant drops—were a favorite. As a symbol of purity and chastity they were most appropriate for this Virgin Queen who put her nation before personal happiness. She wears them in almost every portrait from the age of 13, when she was painted wearing sumptuous red silk damask and furs. Her love of fashion, ornament, luxury velvets, damasks, and brocades as well as her use of striking colors finally found expression when she became queen at 25. Elizabeth favored red, gold, and silver to complement her pure white complexion and ruddy hair color. She adopted black and white as her personal colors—a dramatic background for her jewelry and long, elegant fingers. A poet described her as coming in "like starlight, thick with jewels." Other symbolic items included a phoenix pendant—the fabled bird that rose from the ashes and spoke of the Queen's uniqueness, power, and chastity.

If her dress sometimes appeared overwhelmingly magnificent to foreign tastes, from the 1560s Elizabeth's dominant personality, expressed through clothing, breathed new life into fashion—it was much more staid and darker before her reign. She encouraged her courtiers to dress splendidly—especially the men, who could win her favors with an elegant leg, beautiful clothes, and flattering gifts of gloves, gauzy scarves, and rare jewels.

With such a monarch, 16th-century English people embraced lavish fashions. Although none of Elizabeth's clothing survives, account books unfold luscious descriptions of the queen of fashion's staggering wardrobe.

A royal legacy

Elizabeth's self-fashioning was so successful that she remains an icon in modern times. Her image has been developed in movies and television series and inspired designers. The tight bodices, bold shapes, huge ruffs, and regal aura have fed into the work of fashion designers as diverse as Jean Paul Gaultier, Martin Margiela, and Vivienne Westwood. Westwood, for example, has showcased slashed fabric, large, regal gowns, ruffs, and enormous collars, while many generally "futurist" fashions feature arrestingly angular shapes reminiscent of Elizabethan style.

△ THE RAINBOW PORTRAIT c.1600
In this late portrait in mask costume, Elizabeth wears a fantastic headdress inspired by an engraving of Greek women's dress. The eyes and ears painted on her mantle and the jeweled serpent on her sleeve may symbolize fame and wisdom respectively. She holds a rainbow, seen in many of her clothes, perhaps suggesting heavenly ideals.

☐ DRESS BY ALEXANDER McQUEEN

The enduring influence of Elizabeth I is clear in this McQueen dress. It features a high neck ruff and sleeves with the built-up shoulder and narrow, trimmed cuff reminiscent of Elizabethan gowns.

ME, LINE

1533 Born at Greenwich, near London

1536 Her mother, Anne Boleyn, is executed. Elizabeth is declared illegitimate. A later Act of Parliament restores her right to succeed to the throne

O 1530

O 1550

1558 ▽ Becomes queen. Her coronation robes of 1559 were of cloth-of-gold (fabric woven with gold-wrapped thread) trimmed with ermine, with a tight, pointed bodice

1559 Becomes head of the Church of England, replacing her sister Mary's Catholicism with the Protestant faith

> 1560s Taking a lead from Elizabeth's delight in clothes, English fashions become more decorated and full of novelty

1580s Inspires English trends for extravagant, exaggerated dress

1581 Knights Francis Drake on his return from a world voyage.
Trade links foster the fashion for exotic fabrics and ornament

c.1595 ∇
Embraces all the new fashions, like larger ruffs seen in this gold pound coin

1603 Dies at Richmond, near London

O 1570

O 1590

O 1610

098

1590-1625

FEMALE GEOMETRY

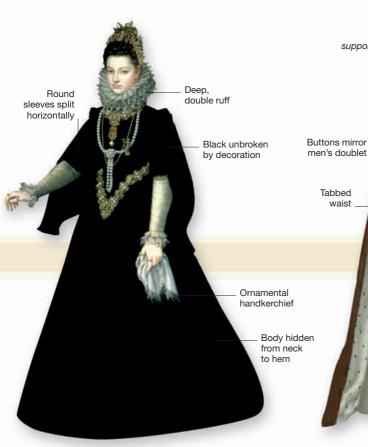

ith the onset of the 17th century every aspect of women's clothes became highly exaggerated—and borrowed heavily from masculine styles. Fashion history's most geometric period created unnatural silhouettes made from straight lines, triangles, and circles. Huge ruffs isolated head from body, or open collars revealed décolletages cut immodestly low. The French farthingale (a wheelshaped support worn over the hips) made women the widest and squarest they had ever been. It also shortened hems to make feet—in new, heeled shoes—visible for the first time. These skirts marked France's ascent as Europe's fashion leader. Around 1620 a new naturalism appeared and styles relaxed again. By 1625 the long, pointed "bodies" (bodice) had been virtually replaced by a natural waistline, and petticoats took over from farthingales.

Cartwheel ruff Flemish artist Rubens painted his wife, Isabella Brandt, wearing this huge ruff edged with lace. Ruffs achieved their greatest width in the Low Countries, where starching techniques originated. The low, curved bodice front also became a regional style.

FEMALE GEOMETRY

The triangle's apex In the 1590s Spanish hairstyles rose to a point, completing the triangular effect of the costume. Infanta Isabella Clara Eugenia's high neckline and bell-shaped skirt were a contrast to revealing squarer fashions in neighboring countries.

Yellow-starched.

flat, lace collar

Embroidered

linen waistcoat

Mix of straight lines and circles

> Petticoats replace farthingale

on petticoat

Large ribbon and lace

rosettes on shoes

Velvet mantle with brocade lining, worn like a man's

Pinned into shape At the time of this painting in 1605 women's clothing was held together with pins. The Countess of Southampton's ladies would have pinned her gown up over the farthingale, her stomacher to her stays, and her collar open.

Diadem with white feathers Ruff, cuffs, show off lace Waistline nearly at Small-scale Floor-length, pointed sleeves Italian silk skirt embroidered with gold opens to reveal embroidered petticoat Embroidered

leather shoes

Smooth lines for a masque The Countess of Hertford has composed an allegorical ensemble from the less formal petticoat and a linen waistcoat, worn over stays to create a smooth torso. Both are elaborately embroidered with stylized forms.

Softening shape This English portrait shows how, around 1620, fashion's inflexibility started to yield. The exquisitely embroidered gown is still linear with pattern on every surface, but is more softly draped, with gathers and curves.

SLASHING

Deliberately cutting into textiles was one of the defining features of Renaissance fashion. The slashes could be long and careless, or neatly cut lines that gaped to reveal underclothing. Isabel de Valois's spectacular red wedding dress has slashed sleeves with bound edges. Pinking-cutting zigzag or rippled lines, or making small, neat regular holes—was particularly popular on leather.

Surfaces and angles Spanish dress was slower to change than other nation's fashions. The planes of clothing became even more rigid and angular. Surfaces became smoother and inflexible, showing off the colors, textures, and decoration.

A NEW SUIT

Travel wear Water-resistant longer cloaks covered valuable clothing and unprotected legs. Hats kept in warmth and brims deflected rain. This Low Countries gentleman from around 1580 wears a skirted jerkin that nearly covers his breeches.

Spanish style The horizontal lines decorating the doublet of Don Carlos of Spain in 1564 are typical of the Spanish style. Lines of stitching and heavy braid reinforce the shape. His satin cloak has bands of slashed black velvet as subtle decoration.

Elegant posing This Venetian man's counterpoint pose suggests classical grace. Wearing clothes well was as important as the clothes themselves. His entirely black ensemble accentuates his pale legs just as the white collar highlights his face.

puffed at

Outrageous hose In France breeches were nearly spherical. A 1562 English statute legislated against "monstrous and outrageous greatness of hose" and fined those who wore them too large.

Cutting on every surface This drawing of a German man from the 1570s combines most types of decoratively cut cloth in his ensemble. Slashing was an effective way of adding surface detail and was cheaper than embroidery or braid.

Statesman in red In this 1560 painting, Italian Gian Gerolamo Grumelli wears red from head to foot, though each element is subtly different. A variety of textiles satin, velvet, leather—and clever surface embellishment give a distinct look to each part of his body.

FRIVOLTY AT COURT

Henri III, who reigned as King of Poland-Lithuania from 1573-75, and of France from 1574-89, was an elegant, cultured young man who adored clothes and dressing up. He demanded the highest standards of dress from his courtiers, especially the effeminate, frivolous young men in his entourage called Les Mignons (Darlings). They plucked their eyebrows, powdered their faces, and adopted feminine accessories such as small dogs and muffs. His mistresses wore the kind of exuberant dress seen in this ball painting. The flat French farthingale, would-be lovers complained, kept men at a distance, as did huge stuffed sleeves. The turned-back fronts of gowns revealed white bosoms above sharply pointed bodices supported by whalebone. Both sexes indulged in luxuries, such as exquisite lace, perfume, and jewelry— Henri was noted for his pearl earrings.

Henri lightened the austere Spanish influence at the French court. Men and women wore such vast starched ruffs that people told courtiers they looked like John the Baptist's head on the platter. From his time as Polish king Henri brought back fuller breeches called Venetians or Polacks, as well as small Polish caps decorated with gems and aigrettes. Once he galloped through Paris's streets with 30 young men all dressed alike in Italian-inspired pantaloons. Banquets where men dressed as women and vice versa, or spectacular balls where male clothing outshone female, show Henri III's appetite for fun, novelty, pleasure, and flair—the essence of fashion.

...exceedingly odious, as much by their foolish and haughty demeanour, as by their effeminate and immodest dress...

CONTEMPORARY CHRONICLER PIERRE DE L'ESTOILE DESCRIBING THE KING'S FAVORITES, 1576

Henri III is third from the left, wearing black, next to his mother Catherine de' Medici. The rare full-length and back views convey all the vivacity of court fashion during his reign.

MALE EXTRAVAGANCE

s the tailor's art improved, the male body took on perfectly straight, rigid lines like those of armor, but created with cloth. Even soft ruffs were straighter, or disappeared in favor of straight collars. The new clothing changed the way people moved. Rigid torso garments with padded areas and exaggerated lines made it difficult to slouch or bend, though clever cutting left the limbs free to help men stride and indulge in manly pursuits such as fighting and riding. Fashionable men and women were equally matched in their ostentatious display of decoration. Both sexes coveted silk stockings, rosettes, ribbons, sashes, jewels, perfumed buttons, and, particularly, lace. Rich men could—and did—pour fortunes into their dress, or seek a fortune at court through the beauty of their appearance and grace in "making a leg." Fashion moved from purely geometric lines to a new relaxed style by the 1620s, as breeches and hair lengthened again.

with rosettes

Large lace

standing band with supportasse

Hat brim

Falling

hand collar

Straight doublet front

Padded

Tailored geometry James I wears a suit with straight lines achieved by Draped cloak has stiff lining covered with silk stiffened, tailored clothing. The doublet's buttons emphasize its precise lines, echoed by the cloak and the paned breeches. His square collar replaces the round ruff, and his shoes have the new latchet closing.

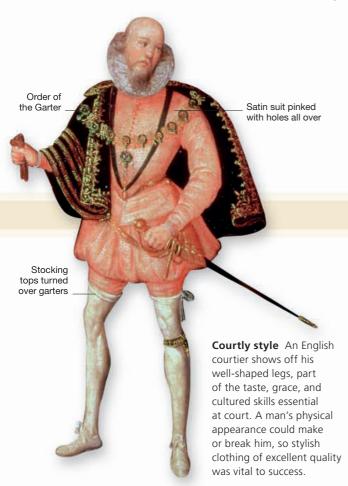

MALE EXTRAVAGANCE

Dark majesty King Henri III of France wears the garb of the Order of the Holy Spirit, which he started in 1578. The blue ribbons used to hold the Order's medallion may be the origin of the phrase "cordon bleu" for excellence.

Eastern influences This Frenchman wears longer upper breeches, called Venetians, in patterned fabric. The frogging closures on his robe follow Eastern fashions, sometimes referred to as Polish style in western Europe.

Youthful beauty A fashionable young Englishman displays his elegant legs under very short paned breeches. The artful draping of his sleeved cloak over one shoulder and his careful posture suggest a studied poetic melancholy.

TAILORING

In this period, cut, as much as fabric and decoration, became a mark of taste. Skillful tailoring did much to improve the wearer's appearance through fit. Stiffening and padding—a harder shell around a soft core—made the clothed body very different from the natural one. Different materials helped to create rigidity: linen, buckram (stiffened linen cloth), cardboard, and parchment, and various weaves of wool. Stuffing with bran, horsehair, or unspun fleece created large, unnatural shapes.

Pattern books from the 1580s onward reveal the tricks of subtle cutting and economical fabric use. Basic tailors' tools from the period are still used today: measuring stick, chalk, pins, and shears (right).

Spanish

pattern from . 1580s

Juan de Alcega's pattern book

Late 1560s Italian portrait of a tailor

TRADING IN TREASURES

he Renaissance period was an age of expansion. Explorers setting out from Europe discovered "New" worlds in the Americas and improved sea trading routes into Asia. Now fashion became global as luxurious new commodities flooded into the West, and better transportation made them available to wealthy people. Silver, gold, and cochineal beetles for dyeing made the fortune of the Spanish empire. Precious rare materials, such as aloeswood and civet glands for perfumes, and ebony wood, ivory, and ostrich feathers, became more accessible. The explosion in printing also spread knowledge to new audiences, including once-secret apothecary recipes and images of the unfamiliar, exotic inhabitants and fauna of foreign lands.

Tapestry dyes This woman, from a late 15th-century tapestry, links flowers to create a perfumed chaplet. Her clothes are woven using the finest red dyes from Europe and the Americas to make stable reds. Under her gown she wears a shimmering cloth-of-gold lampas skirt.

Rich red and royal diamonds The world's only known diamond source during the Renaissance was Golkonda in India, and the gems were exceedingly valuable. Queen Elizabeth I, shown here, accentuated her status with copious jewelry, including two large diamonds with black backing.

Coral beads Wealthy families prized coral, from the Mediterranean around Italy and the African coast, as a charm to protect children from illness and the evil eye. The fine quality of this girl's clothing, like that of a miniature adult, shows great expense—especially her silver and ivory rattle.

Many ostrich feathers

Hairnet and cap

Gold neck chains chokers and Sleeve slit at show off fine

Large, tabletwoven silk and Lapdog for warmth, status, and company gold girdle

elbow and paned to linen shirt

embroidery

For the aristocracy, pearls were the most favored jewel during this period. Women wore long strands as necklaces, worked them into their hair, and embroidered them into clothing. Men also wore earrings, brooches, hatpins, and other pearl adornments. Religious vestments incorporated the splendid luster of pearls. They were even crushed in cosmetic recipes to beautify the skin.

Pearls were sourced laboriously from salt-water oysters around India and Arabia. Their mysterious appearance made them highly valuable, with irregular shapes set into great pendants.

SYMBOLISM AND FANTASY

The Renaissance world revolved around emblems, iconography, and allegories, and people delighted in using these symbolic representations in dress. Almost any animal, plant, god, object, color, or foreign fashion could be used metaphorically to say something more than itself. At a time when most people could not read, visual meanings were especially important. Medieval heraldry had established symbols as distinctive badges of houses and families. Personal iconography became a poetic, decorative language using emblems such as knots, phoenixes, carnations, and lilies to show a person's virtues along with other abstract ideas. These could be embroidered or painted on to clothing, or worked into jewelry or armor. Characters from religion and classical mythology were popular allegorical themes, often used to convey hidden moral or political messages. At masques (theatrical court entertainments) and costume balls, costumes were an opportunity to draw on different cultures.

Pose like a Pictish warrior woman This naked woman is a fanciful take on classical Greek mythology and Celtic folklore. Tales of the Picts' Loose painted skins inspired the "uncivilized" hai floral tattooing in the contemporary Elizabethan style. Prints spread a mix of accurate and imaginary ideas about foreign or past cultures across Europe.

> Spear reflects Flizabethan idea of Amazon tribeswoman

> > Fantasy headdress

Puffed sleeves

in normal dress

did not exist

Skin looks like embroidery floral

tattoos

Color itself was a symbol with complex meanings. The most prized shades were true black and crimson or scarlet. Red denoted power and was used by royalty, nobility, and religious authorities, such as the pope and his cardinals above.

Following 16th-century religious divisions, members of both the Catholic and Protestant churches used black to show their piety, humility, and restraint. But dyeing cloth a deep, rich black was expensive in terms of time and ingredients, so the color was also a fashionable way to show off wealth alongside spiritual values.

Orientalist Small mask as token disguise Sculpted leather mask Courtesan showing off beautiful Harlequin costume with fleur-de-lys and templar crosses Exotic tunic and tassels Bright colors and symbols. probably printed Overskirt made of fine linen panes held toaether with buttons Sword signifies > Venetian carnival Masquerade balls were a chance to throw off social convention and change roles through disguises. The Italian comedy theater Commedia dell'Arte introduced stock characters like Harlequin and Pantalone as popular costumes.

Holy fantasy dress Artists used inventive imaginary dress in their pictures of female saints. like this c.1500 Flemish depiction of Saint Catherine. Oriental elements such as drapery and tassels helped conjure an out-of-this world biblical setting

Catherine's martyrdom

Long, loose hair

Soft, flat

slippers

Iconographic suit English courtiers like Richard Sackville, 3rd Earl of Dorset, delighted in playing with symbols on their clothing to send messages about their family, virtues, and political allegiances. Celestial motifs denoting the heavens were popular, like those on Sackville's hose.

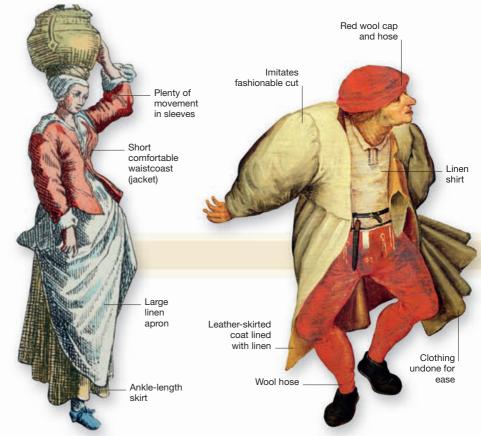

Silk rosettes

After the idea came to England local needlewomen built on the technique. By the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods, complex twining patterns of naturalistic plants and animals covered outer clothing in a tangle of multicolor designs accented with gold. The exuberance contrasted with the geometric formalism of garments.

PRACTICAL CLOTHING

enaissance fashion, for the rich, was a riot of silks, velvets, and jewels. However, for the vast Lmajority—peasants working the land, traders, or part of the growing class of the "middling sort" including merchants and landed gentry—garments tended to be less fitted and exaggerated, and better suited to daily life. Linen and wool were staple fabrics—wool could be spun and woven at home. Silk was a rare luxury. As in any era people wore the best they could afford. Subtle hierarchies of cloth qualities were used to distinguish between coarse, sturdy everyday wear and finer, best garments. Producing fabric was labor intensive, so cutting out the expense and time of dyeing made sense. Clothing styles for the ordinary people changed over time, but slowly, since garments were replaced less often.

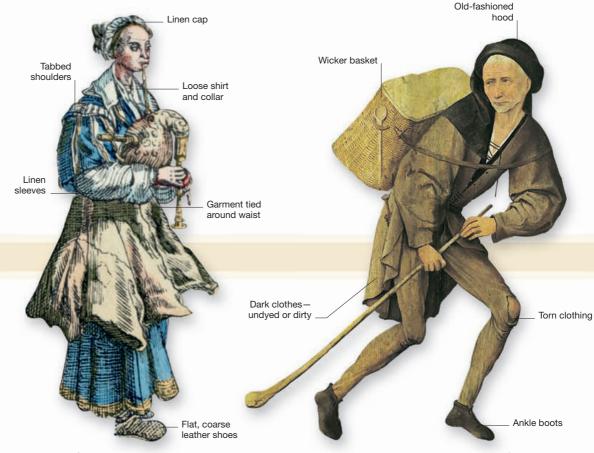

Waistcoat and petticoat This French peasant from the early 17th century wears a comfortable, practical outfit. She uses linen garments like her shirt and apron to protect her skirt. The thick linen scarf or cap helps stabilize the jar.

Occasion wear Brueghel's cheerful dancing man wears his best red cap and hose for a special occasion. He is dressed in fewer pieces of clothing than nobility, but the cut is not radically different.

Leather was a practical choice because it was tough, protective, and needed little stitching. Aside from shoes, leather was used for aprons, purses, doublets, coats, and jerkins, like this late 16th-century example for a young man. This jerkin has been pinked and cut with star shapes for embellishment and to make it more flexible. Strong wool fabrics were also popular, often left in their natural color.

Following fashion Musicians wore more fashionable costume than peasants. The tabbed shoulders and paned sleeves of this musician's gown reflect early 17th-century French fashion.

Poor clothing The aging "Everyman" from a painting by Bosch of 1515 wears a drab coat and wrinkled torn hose, with a black doublet and hood, and a traveling basket. His shoes are typical ankle boots fitting the foot's shape.

1570s wears the respectable black mantle that was used in Spain by many social levels. Her skirt reveals her stockings and chapines (high platform shoes).

streets in the early 17th century wears a long coat with wider sleeves. His collar has a stylish shape with decorative edging. The outfit is a less elaborate version of contemporary fashions. close observation of a young woman's ensemble suggests quality, not extravagance. Her gown uses plenty of fabric yet is carefully held up for walking. Her cap is plain but has elaborate veiling.

DENAICCANOF CDI ENDOR

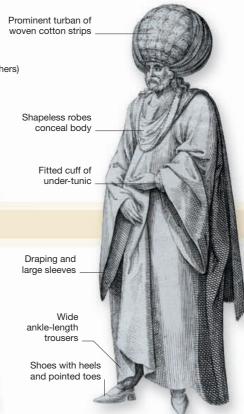

1450-1624

OTTOMAN FINERY

The Ottomans conquered Constantinople (now Istanbul) in 1453 and made it the center of a vast empire. Their territory covered most of southeast Europe, stretching to the edges of Austria and Poland-Lithuania, and included Hungary and the Balkans. Clothing in all these areas showed a strong oriental influence in long robes, horizontal fastenings, and turbans. Venetian fashion also drew on Eastern ideas through trade with Byzantium. Muslim Ottomans continued to wear the flowing garments of earlier centuries—a contrast with the growing Western passion for fitted, separate, rigid clothing. Ottoman dress used fewer, simpler garments and depended more on nuances of fine-quality textiles and embroidery than novelties of fashion. The most obviously foreign difference was that women in Eastern areas often wore trousers, while in the West, European split-leg garments were exclusively male.

Intricate silks A miniature of Selim II shows off the lavish colors and sinuous patterns of his clothing. Caftans' large surfaces were ideal for showcasing quality textiles, which expressed prestige and power rather than fashionable cut.

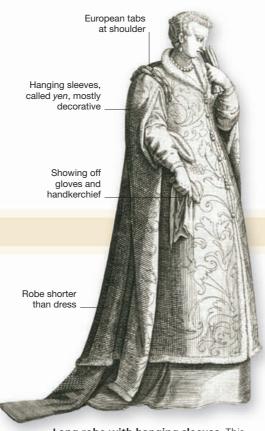

Turbans and loose tunics Turbans were the most significant point of difference between Western and Eastern dress. This Armenian nobleman's draped clothing is in sharp contrast to contemporary tailored fashion.

TEXTILES

Constantinople had long been a trading center for textiles to Europe. Likewise, Ottoman merchants imported costly silk velvets from Genoa, Venice, and France. Local textile weaving used the stylized, two-dimensional motifs of Islamic art in harmonious repetition and striking color combinations. Venetian Gentile Bellini's painting of a Turkish scribe, made when he visited the Ottoman court around 1480, shows a pomegranate motif and richly contrasting fabrics.

Long robe with hanging sleeves This courtesan from Padua wears a fur-lined brocade robe with central button closure. Elements of Eastern or caftan styles had become usual in European clothing by the late 16th century.

Royal caftan This late 15th-century silk and gold damask caftan belonged to Sultan Beyazid II. Caftans were the main garment worn by Ottoman men and women and eastward into Persia (now Iran) and central Asia. Cut, length, and width varied.

OTTOMAN FINERY

BAROQUE AND ROCOCO

1625-1789

BAROQUE AND ROCOCO

pulence, grandeur, heavy ornamentation, and rich colors were the defining characteristics of fashion throughout Europe in the 17th century. No one demonstrated this baroque style to greater effect than King Carl Gustav of Sweden, who wore such a richly decorated doublet at his coronation in 1654 that the fabric beneath the embroidery was completely invisible. The baroque style was set at the royal court in France, where the stiff-bodiced, heavy-skirted court dress known as the grand habit was established in the splendor of Louis XIV's Versailles. The fabrics for these stately clothes were produced across Europe, but the French silk industry, centered in Lyon, dominated. Farther afield, the influx of goods from Asia via trading organizations such as the Dutch East India Company, founded in 1602, meant that printed cottons and painted silks from India and China flooded the European fashion market.

Rococo lightness

By the 18th century there was a move in the decorative arts toward a lighter, more flowing aesthetic known as the rococo, which was reflected in fashion. This could be seen in the curving lines of the silk designs produced by such craftspeople as Anna Maria Garthwaite and the Spitalfields silk weavers in London, many of them Protestant Huguenots who had fled religious persecution in France. Gone was the boned bodice and skirt, to be replaced first by a loose, full-skirted gown known as a mantua, and then by an open robe and petticoat.

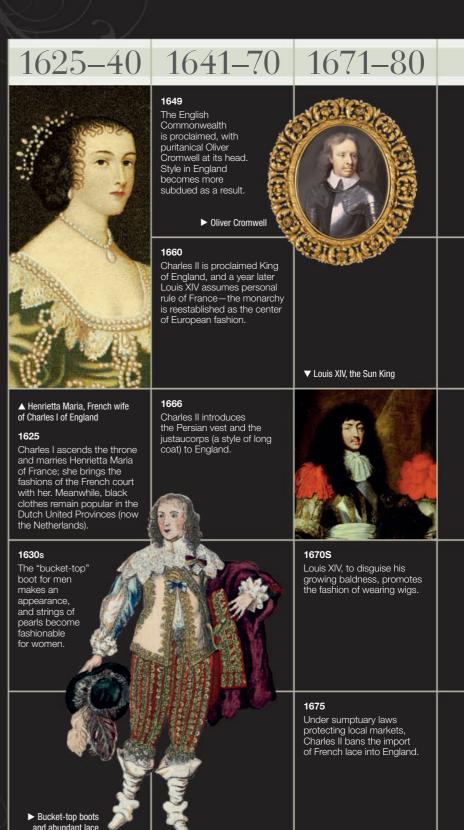

Men's doublet and hose had disappeared too, giving way to coat and breeches.

Revolutionary spirit

By about the 1770s England was setting the principal style in men's dress with the coat called the frock, worn by men for countryside pursuits. This more informal look was taken up in revolutionary America and even in France, the center of fashion, where the revolutionary leaders opted for styles that set them apart from the aristocratic and increasingly isolated Ancien Régime. It was around this time, too, that cottons and muslins traded from the East became the new wonder fabrics, and women's dress took on a softer silhouette.

FASHION EXTREMES

Young fops of the 1770s, nicknamed "macaronis," took fashion to absurd heights, wearing extravagant clothes and towering wigs.

It is fancy rather than taste which produces so many new fashions.

VOLTAIRE, FRENCH WRITER AND PHILOSOPHER, 1694-1778

1681-90 1691-20 1721-45 1746-65 1766-74 1775-89 1775 Following the Battle of Silk designer Anna Maria A craze for costume dress Grand Tours to Italy are Steenkerque between the Garthwaite starts work and "masquerade" emerges popular with wealthy —in 1748 society hostesses Elizabeth and Maria Gunning attend a ball at Dublin Castle French and the allied forces in London. European men, who go under William of Orange, a there to study classical antiquity and to experience new, military-style cravat, the "Steinkirk," becomes popular. wearing theater costumes. polite society. ▼ Flower-patterned silk designed by Anna Maria Garthwaite King George III of England The sack back dress featuring Watteau pleats, introduces the Windsor uniform; this starts the lasting named after a style often depicted in the work of trend for royalty to wear liveries, conveying the idea of French rococo painter Jean-Antoine Watteau, military discipline and duty. is popularized. ► Figure at a ■ Robe à la française (also known as sack back dress) with Watteau pleats masquerade, dressed as ▼ From the 1770s onward George III preferred to be painted wearing military dress Pulcinella from the Italian Commedia dell'Arte c.1718-1719 The "Spinning Jenny," Louis XIV revokes the Edict The Spanish fashion for Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, Marie Antoinette becomes the pannier (hoop petticoat) spreads to France. of Nantes, forcing large numbers of Huguenots a machine using multiple Madame de Pompadour, Queen of France and spindles for spinning yarn, becomes Louis XV's mistress introduces a series of to seek refuge in London. and exerts tremendous is invented. new fashions. Importing their silk-weaving influence on court fashions. expertise, these escapees helped found the Spitalfields ▼ New technology speeds up the production of cloth silk industry. ▼ Madame de Pompadour, ▼ Stiffened hoops held out the upper skirt at the hips dressed sumptuously in white silk 1774 Georgiana Cavendish marries the Duke of Devonshire; she will become a trendsetter in English fashion 1765 The importation of chintz The Gallerie des Modes, The caraco is banned in France (and an early fashion magazine, emerges as 40 years later in England) is founded showing details a women's to promote the interests jacket style in of the styles of the day. of French and English the 1760s. wool mills ► Painted and dyed

MEN IN LACE

By the mid 1620s, with a new king, Charles I, on the English throne, the heavily padded doublets of King James I's reign (also widely worn in courts across continental Europe) were passing out of fashion. New, longer doublets in plain or subtly patterned silks replaced the tabbed styles made of the heavy woven and embroidered fabrics that were popular earlier in the 17th century. Breeches, too, changed in shape. They became much longer, reaching to mid-calf level, and were worn with soft leather boots rather than decorated shoes. Neckwear such as circular ruffs (held out behind the head by a wire support called a supportasse or a pickadil) began to fall out of fashion and give way to extravagant lace collars. The plainer fabrics of the new-style doublet were a perfect foil for such accessories, and this became a boom time for lace makers. Lavish quantities of elaborately patterned lace were used for every accessory, from cuffs and collars to handkerchiefs and boot hose. Flemish bobbin lace was widely available, but the new fashions benefited every lace-making center in Europe.

The padded jacket that men wore in the first part of the 17th century was known as the doublet. This garment had several variations in shape and style. The one illustrated here has deep stiffened tabs and is made of figured, paned silk. Doublets were attached to trunk hose (the short, puffed breeches that were fashionable in this period) with points or ties, which held the two parts of the outfit together. The fastenings were called "points" because of the pointed metal ends of the laces. They were often made of silver and gold thread, and added decorative trimming to the doublet.

Wide collar Deep, scallop-edged lace collars covering the shoulders were fashionable for both men and women in the mid-1630s. Often made of, or decorated with, Flemish bobbin lace, the collars were worked by hand in the finest linen threads.

Bigger breeches In the mid-1630s men's breeches were becoming much fuller, with the fabric drawn in just below the knee with a series of points. The lower sleeves of a doublet were sometimes fully open to show the shirt beneath.

Widebrimmed hat

Layered ruff

Cape worn shoulder

Lace-edged

1625 cuffs

Short cloak Decorative rather than functional, the short cloak was often richly patterned. This fashionable gentlemen also wears funnel-topped boots and a wide-brimmed, plumed hat, both typical of French styles of the time.

BUCKLES AND STRAPS

Cast metal buckles

In the 17th century male accessories included numerous buckled straps worn on various parts of the body. Straps attached spurs to boots; belts and shoulder hangers carried swords; and bandoliers, slung diagonally across the body, held ammunition for firearms. Military paraphernalia such as gorgets (protective collars) and metal breastplates were also attached with straps and buckles. The only place belts were not worn was around the waist, because this destroyed the smooth lines of a doublet attached to breeches with points.

SOFTER SILHOUETTES

ashions changed relatively slowly in the 17th century; but with the demise of the rigid farthingale petticoat, the trend in the mid-1620s to mid-1630s was toward a more bulky, soft silhouette, and dresses with higher waists and fuller sleeves. During this period dresses could be made up of three separate parts: a bodice, a petticoat, and a gown over the top (which might be gathered up to reveal the petticoat below). Another style was to wear the gown hanging from the shoulders. As with men's fashion, the ruff gave way to the broad falling collar edged with elegant handmade lace. Only in the Dutch United Provinces (now the Netherlands) was the ruff retained as the neckwear of choice. The fabric used in European fashionable dress in the 17th century was produced in many countries, with silk satins and velvets designed and woven in France and Italy, and linen for shirts and smocks made in the Netherlands and Germany.

central wooden busk.

Separate skirt

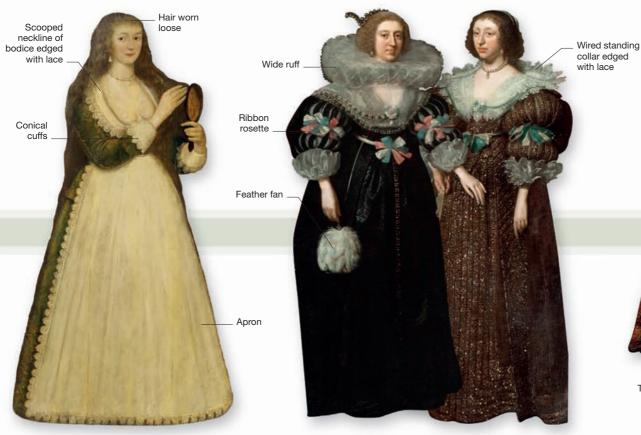

Cartwheel The ruff was a fashion that persisted in the Netherlands in the mid-17th century, while in the rest of Europe it was dying out. It grew ever larger, becoming a cartwheel shape of finely goffered (frilled pleats) linen.

SOFTER SILHOUETTES

Contrasting tone draws attention to ruff

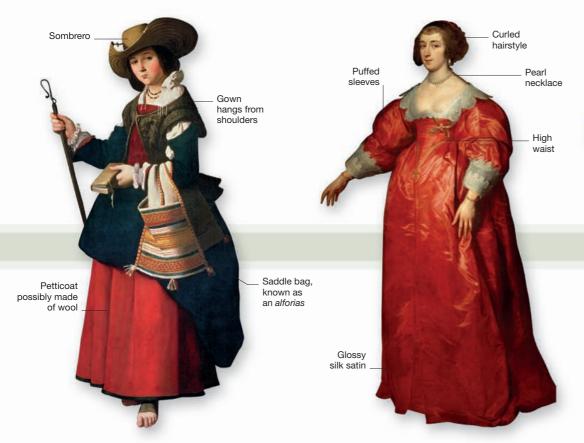

Trailing

Low décolletage Queen Anne, wife of King James I of England, was sometimes portrayed wearing low-necked dresses. For modesty, a revealing neckline could be covered by a linen garment called a partlet, which was stitched to the shift.

Full sleeves A much fuller, elbow-length style was the fashion for sleeves in the later 1620s. They were often paned—made of worked and finished strips of silk fabric—with the puffs separated by ribbon ties and rosettes.

Voluminous silhouette The fullness of the skirt and the puffed sleeves, plus the trailing hems, gave a round shape to women's dress in the 1630s. In the Dutch United Provinces dark colors were popular, worn here with a large pleated ruff.

Sombrero The Spanish artist Zurbaran painted this portrait of the 4th-century, and possibly fictitious, Saint Margaret of Antioch. She wears the Iberian sombrero, which inspired the fashion for soft plumed hats in the rest of Europe.

Lustrous silk In the 1630s dresses were made of light-colored silk satins that shimmered in the candlelight. The high-waisted styles often had a low-cut bodice edged with costly lace, which matched the lace on the separate cuffs.

DOUBLET AND BREECHES

uring this period France remained the center of fashion. The doublet and breeches were still the main style of dress, often made from matching fabric. Gradually the waistline on the doublet became higher and the fabric tabs below the waist lengthened to create a jacketlike garment, which finished at hip level. The slashed effect remained popular with vertical openings down the front, back, and sleeves of the doublet.

Breeches retained a fullness around the seat but were now worn longer on the leg, tapering below the knee and held in around the calf with a band, often decorated with bows. In the mid-1640s doublets and breeches became much shorter, with breeches gradually getting fuller, finishing in a straight line at the knee.

Referred to as petticoat breeches, they resembled a skirt and were worn with underdrawers with decorative edging "canions" that hung beneath the hem.

Lace continued to be a popular accessory for men and women. Originally developed as a scalloped trim on the edging of linen

Lace continued to be a popular accessory for men and women. Originally developed as a scalloped trim on the edging of linen garments, gradually whole cuffs and large collars made of lace became fashionable. Patterns for lace were drawn up on paper and lace makers, often families who handed down the skills, would work with fine linen threads to copy the designs. Lace was a highly valued personal possession—it was extremely costly since it took a long time to make even the smallest piece. The finest lace was produced in Italy, France, and the Flanders area of Belgium, and there was a strong international market for it since it was easy to transport and high in value.

Band collar Made from fine linen and often trimmed with costly lace edging, collars were an important accessory. The earlier ruff style was replaced with the flatter band, which draped softly from a high neckline, and cut straight across the back.

Feather in cap Hats were often decorated with trailing feathers such as ostrich plumes. These were placed on the left side of the hat leaving the right sword arm free to move. Worn indoors, hats were removed before royalty and elders.

Boot fashion By the 1630s spurs developed into a leather butterfly shape at the front of the foot, becoming very large and dramatic in size. The top of boots began to widen and were known as cup shapes. By the 1640s these slouched down the leg.

DOUBLET AND BREECHES

TAFFETA AND LACE

There was a relative simplicity about women's dress in the late 1630s and 1640s, with everyday styles consisting of a boned bodice and a separate skirt, usually made in soft, draping silks such as taffetas and satins. The look was completed with broad lace and linen collars, or folded kerchiefs worn across the shoulders or as edging to a bodice. Lace cuffs were attached to the sleeve ends of a linen smock that was worn as an undergarment. Hair was worn with the bangs set in thin curls across the forehead, with longer frizzed locks at the side. Henrietta Maria, the queen consort of King Charles I, both set the trends in fashions for women and attracted criticism for her extravagance from Puritan moralists.

in the Dutch United Provinces (the Netherlands). Large ruffs made of layers of linen, expertly laundered and pressed, remained in vogue here long after they died out in the rest of Europe.

dress throughout Europe was high waisted. Here, the green silk separate boned bodice has deep tabs, the middle one a curved pointed shape, and is worn over a ruby-red silk skirt.

Silk skirt

Full skirts held up in gloved hand

Hair swept back into flat-topped style

Fine white linen, deep lace collars, and pleated ruffs meant that skilled laundresses had an important role to play in mid-17thcentury fashion, when cleanliness was a luxury. Gerard's Herbal, a popular almanac of the time, maintained that the purest and whitest starch was from the roots of the cuckoo pint plant but that it could chap and blister laundresses' hands.

Lace collar New, softer fashions and glossy silks led to a spectacular rise in the production and consumption of lace. Excellent design skills and sharp business acumen meant that Flemish laces were popular across Europe.

Engravings The engraver Wenceslas Hollar was born in Bohemia and worked in London, copying portraits of aristocratic sitters so that the images could be widely sold as prints. This print shows a lady in a boned bodice, worn over a silk skirt.

FASHION ICON

HENRIETTA MARIA

 \triangle TREND FOR PEARLS

Henrietta introduced fresh new styles into the English court, among them a renewed love of pearls. She proudly wore these symbols of wealth in her hair, around her neck, and as double drop earrings.

SHIMMERING SATIN ▷

Henrietta's high-waisted gown has tabbed skirts and open three-quarter sleeves over full chemise sleeves. Her wide collar is made of lace and pearls. and she wears a ribbon sash.

The daughter of Henry IV of France and Marie de' Medici, Henrietta Maria (1609-69) married Charles I of England in 1625. She had grown up in the French court and imported grace, style, and imperial grandeur, along with a vast trousseau of clothes and jewelry. Immediately, her youth, French background, and vivacious personality introduced a new sophistication to court culture, as well as the shock of the new.

Freer fashions

The queen made her mark through her dress sense, which was greatly admired and copied throughout Europe. Severe styles went out. Stiff brocades gave way to shiny, smooth silks, and strong, heavy colors softened. Courtiers often wore the queen's favorite colors, which were orange, blue, gray, peach, yellow, and olive-green. Henrietta abandoned the farthingale, even for formal occasions, and also the fashion for long stomachers that had pressed the farthingale flat in front to fan out behind. Full skirts were instead supported by ornamental petticoats that were visible, since the fashion was to hold up the long overskirts when walking Styles were relaxing. Henrietta influenced the move away from the rigid style, ruffles, and flounces of the Elizabethan era. Even ruffs were discarded in favor of wide, low collars, which gradually lowered to reveal a square-cut décolletage. Shoulders grew soft and rounded as the waistline rose, sitting just beneath breast level in the 1630s. Henrietta adopted the Virago sleeve, a paned sleeve that was drawn into the arm creating puffs. She replaced stiff hairstyles with a softer coiffure, wearing her hair flat on top but curled in soft ringlets at the side.

Henrietta's fame as a leader of fashion was mainly due to Sir Anthony van Dyck (1599–1641), a Flemish Baroque artist who became the leading court painter in England. Despite flattering his subject, van Dyck captured her regal character, whatever costume she chose to wear. The queen's niece, who knew her aunt only from van Dyck's portraits, was astonished to discover that Henrietta Maria was a very small woman, with crooked shoulders, long, skinny arms, and protruding teeth.

The Queen's passion for dancing, music, and theater heavily influenced her style. Elaborate masques staged by Inigo Jones and Ben Jonson dramatized the ideals of the Stuart monarchy. Sumptuous costumes combined dazzling colors and languid elegance. Her attire when performing on stage outraged Puritans, who considered her choice of clothing to be extremely provocative. One famous outfit had such a low décolletage that her nipples were barely hidden.

Toning down

Henrietta took less interest in fashion as her children and the political situation occupied more of her time and thoughts. The civil war in England in the 1640s brought women's fashion to a grinding halt and women's wear became more subdued in both England and France. High waists were lowered almost to natural level.

Supporters of the monarchy (Royalists) wore detailed and lavish fashions in rich resplendent satins, but the shock of the new was over. Henrietta's husband struggled—and failed to hang on to the throne. He was beheaded in 1649. Henrietta was a fierce campaigner, raising funds and marshaling royal support, diverting her sartorial brilliance into political and intellectual channels.

1609 Born in Paris, France 1625 The chic young Catholic bride arrives in England. In her first year of married life she wears flounced farthingale skirts and stiff upright collars, before ditching both O 1610 O 1620 O 1630 fabrics give way to lighter silks. Colors brighten with oranges and olive-greens. The Virago sleeve, gathered in with a ribbon or fabric to create two large puffs, becomes all the rage

 □ Late 1630s High collars and ruffs give way to lower necklines

> Early 1640s As civil war approaches, fashions get simpler with natural waistlines

O 1640

O 1650

1669 Dies near Paris

at the age of 60

O 1670

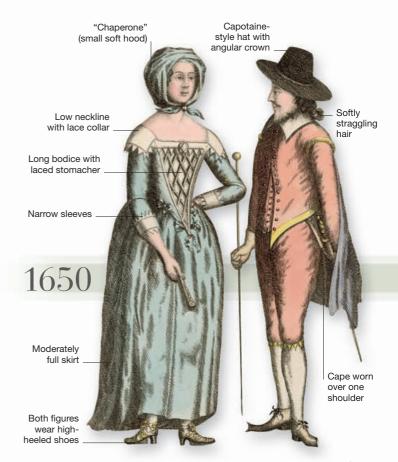

128

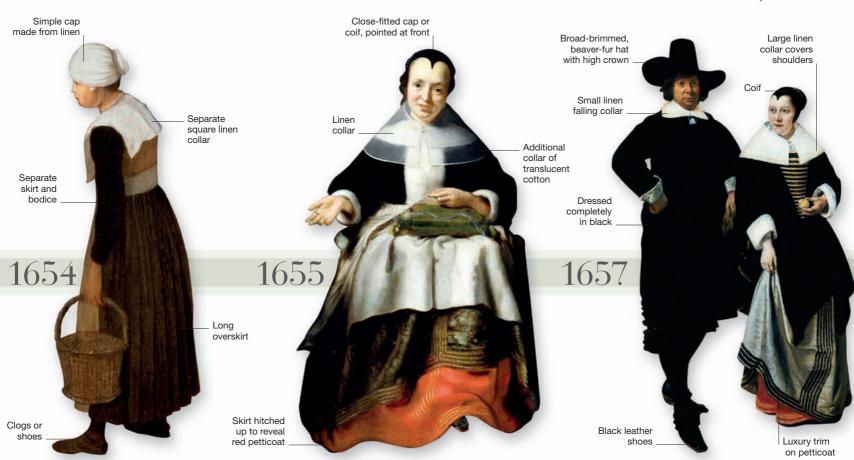

1649-1660

PURITAN INFLUENCE

fter King Charles I was executed in 1649, England became a republic called the Commonwealth, with Oliver Cromwell at its head. Cromwell, a Protestant and a Puritan, believed that people should lead pious lives and dress in a plain and practical way. His opponents, the Royalists, supported a return to the monarchy and wore elaborate clothing inspired by French fashion. Cromwell's Puritans based their dress on Dutch traditions, since the Dutch United Provinces (now the Netherlands) was a strongly Protestant country as well as a wealthy, influential one. Many style features associated with this period—such as linen collars covering the shoulders and the widespread popularity of black—are Dutch in origin. Dark clothes with little or no decoration were favored. English Puritans, a branch of Protestants, established a colony in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in what is now the US, in 1620 that would influence all aspects of American culture, including fashion.

Into the Commonwealth At the beginning of this period in England, people were still wearing fashions from Charles I's time. The laced stomacher (front panel) of the lady's bodice and soft-toned color of the man's doublet were both styles from the 1640s.

Dutch servant In a detail from a painting by Jacobus Vrel, this young servant girl wears clothes of linen and wool fabrics, with names like "serge" and "linsey woolsy." These would have been far less expensive than silk and cotton.

Seated woman In this Nicolaes Maes painting, c.1655, a Dutch housewife mends a linen shirt. Linen was woven in the city of Haarlem, exported widely, and used locally for both clothing and domestic textiles.

Merchant class Artist Pieter de Hooch offers a glimpse of Dutch domestic life in the 17th century. The prosperous couple is dressed in black, but with luxurious details, such as the woman's silver petticoat and laced bodice.

Oliverian clothing Named for Oliver Cromwell, this man from 1650 wears simpler clothes to express Puritan disdain of worldly splendor. Cromwell's supporters cut their hair close to their heads, giving rise to the term "Roundhead."

Dutch child Another de Hooch detail portrays a servant girl with a small child in simple modest dress. At this time children's clothes were just smaller versions of the outfits worn by their parents.

MILITARY DRESS

The English Civil War, from 1642 to 1651, came with a new style military dress. Parliamentarian Colonel Hutchinson appeared in the English House of Commons in "a habit which was pretty rich but grave" (a dark doublet decorated with gold and silver points), but ordinary soldiers wore plainer clothes. Buff-colored leather coats were worn by Cromwell's New Model Army and by those involved in conflicts in Europe.

OPULENCE RESTORED

ith the Restoration of the monarchy in 1660, opulence returned to fashion in England. The justaucorps (knee-length coat) took over from the doublet as the main garment in a man's wardrobe. Its body was longer and straighter than the doublet, falling to the knee and closing down the front with small buttons from neck to hem. The lower part of the coat known as the skirt had back and side openings (to allow a sword to poke through). Gradually it became tighter on the waist and fuller at the hem. Sleeves were wide with turned-back cuffs. The waistcoat was worn underneath—it was the same length but narrower in cut than the coat, with long, fitted sleeves. Breeches were still worn full and short to just below the knee, often decorated with bows and ribbon trimmings.

By the 1680s breeches became slimmer

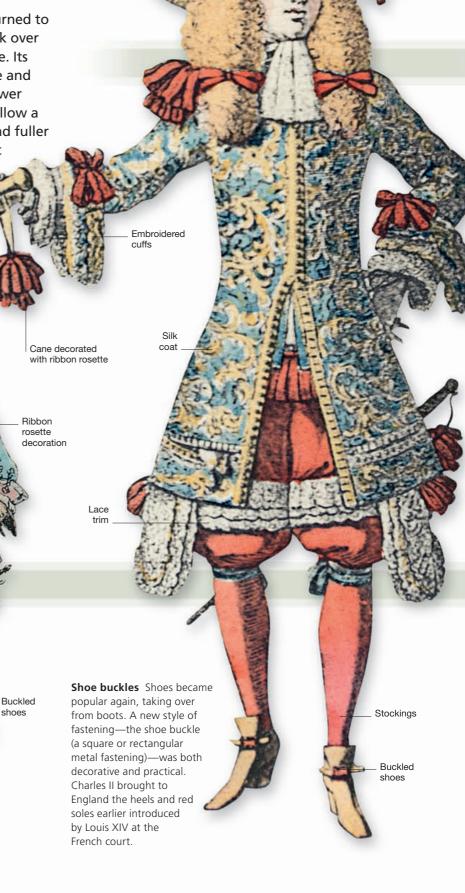

Gold braid decoration

in fit and fastened at the knee.

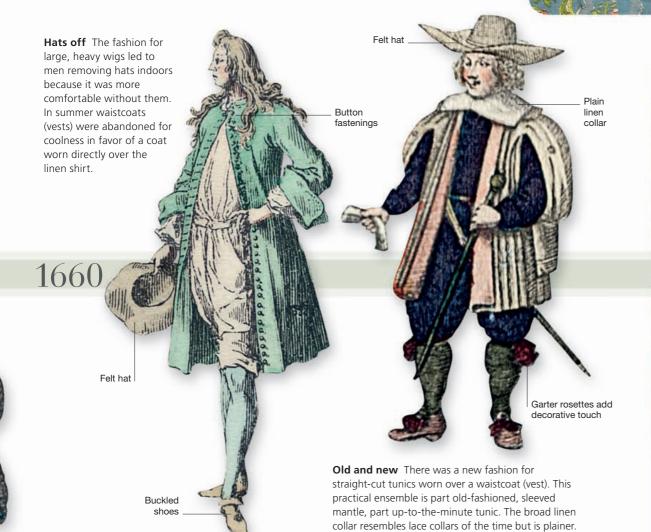

Breeches Petticoat breeches, known as pantaloons at this date, were falling out of style. Canions—the form of under breeches with elaborate trimmings, which fell below the hem of the petticoat breeches—had been popular in the early part of the century.

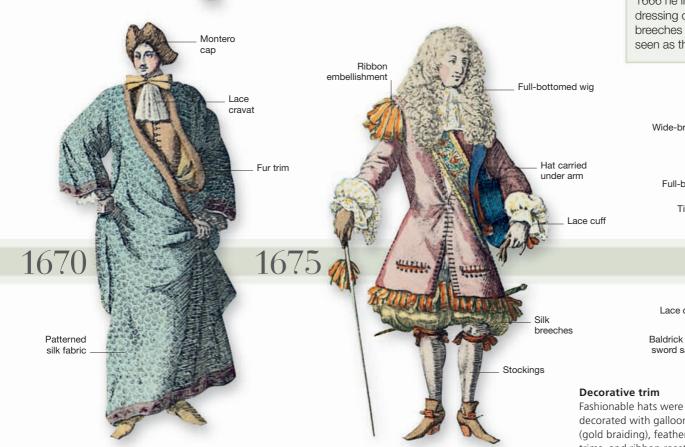

Shoulder sash A baldrick—a leather or silk sash—was worn to support the sword. With military dress the baldrick could be used to denote the allegiance or rank of a soldier before the introduction of uniforms.

Gold braid galloon hat trimming

OPULENCE RESTORED

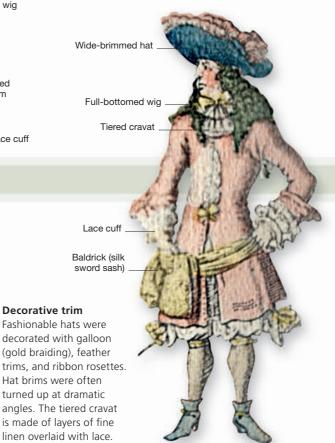

Home wear A nightgown was an informal garment worn at home, similar to a robe. Inspired by Eastern styles, it was made from rich silks or decorative printed cottons. A montero—an informal cap with flaps of fur or cloth—completed this look.

Heavy wigs Long, curled, full-bottomed wigs became fashionable. Calottes (small linen caps) were worn beneath to absorb the sweat. France's Louis XIV had a large collection, and Charles II popularized this style in England when he came to the throne.

CHARLES II

In 1660 King Charles II returned from exile in France to take the English throne. He was known for his love of fashionable dress and introduced styles from the French court. In 1666 he introduced a more sober style of dressing of a coat, waistcoat (vest), and breeches in black silk over white. This is seen as the origin of the three-piece suit.

BONED BODICE TO MANTUA

he 20 years between 1660 and 1680 saw significant change in women's fashions and in society in general. In England King Charles II reclaimed the throne, while in France King Louis XIV established the Palace of Versailles, re-establishing the monarchy as the center of patronage and high fashion. The evolution of women's clothing saw the slow demise of the dress made up of a boned bodice, a skirt, and gown, and the beginnings of the mantua, a loose gown with an overskirt elaborately draped at the back. New styles demanded different expertise, and women's dress was now made by mantua makers, although more structured garments were still constructed by stay makers although more structured garments were still constructed by stay makers and tailors. Women selected fabric and trimmings for dresses, including lace, from visiting drapers, linen and silk merchants, and milliners.

Riding clothes Women wore a particular type of clothing to travel on horseback in the 17th century.

1675

A "safeguard" was a loose skirt worn to keep off the dust, and there are also references to women wearing an early style of tailored jacket for riding. Rigid bodice The distinctive round shape of women's dress in the 1660s was achieved by a tightly boned bodice with strips of whalebone inserted into finely stitched channels. Separate sleeves were tied to the garment at the shoulder.

Fashionably high forehead

1660

Bands of applied lace

Royal gown Queen of France Marie-Thérése (wife of Louis XIV) wears a boned bodice, and matching skirt and gown (edged with ermine) of the finest woven silk. Her deep collar is of exquisite, Flemish bobbin lace.

A new style During the 1670s a full-length gown was worn buttoned across the chest, and open below to reveal the petticoat. The skirts were caught up and draped at the back in a loose bustle arrangement.

Jeweled

ornament

at breast

Full

Elbow-length, tightly set sleeves restrict movement

Clothes

made of rich silk brocade curling hair

RESTORED

The Restoration of the English monarchy in 1660 signaled the dawn of a new age of prosperity for the English aristocracy, which was reflected in the fashions of the time. Charles II was self-indulgent and foppish, and his courtiers soon followed suit. Despite their extravagances, English nobles took an interest in charitable causes, such as the one depicted in the painting, The Tichborne Dole, opposite, in which the Lord of the Manor in the village of Tichborne distributes bread to the poor. This painting showcases the lavish fashions worn by the noble class, in contrast with those worn by the less fortunate.

The central male figure in the middle ground wears a long and ornate waistcoat, fastened with close-set buttons from throat to hem, underneath a plainer coat. This was one of the many fashions introduced by Charles II. The figure also wears an elaborate lace cravat and a periwig, an indispensable part of wealthy fashionable attire. Shoes are high heeled and square toed.

The two women to his left show female fashions of the day. Their bodices, with a horizontal décolletage, are long, pointed, and fastened in the front with jeweled clasps. They wear full-puffed sleeves to the elbows, and their skirts are gathered at the hips in tight pleats, opening down the front over an ornate petticoat. Their bodice and skirts are joined, but poorer women would wear them separately, in different colors. Skirts were raised—to the toe for court women and to the instep for peasant women. Though the women use stays, the overall effect is one of increasing freedom.

The King hath in Council declared his resolution of setting a fashion for clothes, which he will never alter. It will be a vest. I know not well how, but it is to teach the nobility thrift, and will do good.

SAMUEL PEPYS, OCTOBER 8, 1666

TOWARD THE SUIT

The silhouette of the coat became increasingly exaggerated, worn tight on the waist and flaring to full pleated skirts below. Decorative braiding was applied along the center front closure, pockets, and cuffs. Sleeves became longer and tighter, but cuffs remained large. The waistcoat, still fit close to the body, was now worn shorter than the coat. While the waistcoat front was richly decorated, the back was frequently made of plainer fabric since it was rarely seen. Breeches were worn narrower and closer to the leg,

> Gold galloon braiding > > on arms

Buttons are more decorative fastening just above or below the knee. They were made from the same material as the coat or from a plain black fabric—the forerunner of the suit. From the 1690s large ornamental buttons became popular on pockets with decorative flaps and on cuffs as well as forming the front closure. These buttons could be made from decorative metal or from the same fabric as the coat and finished with embroidery.

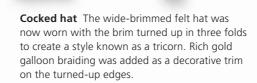

CLOTHES SELLER

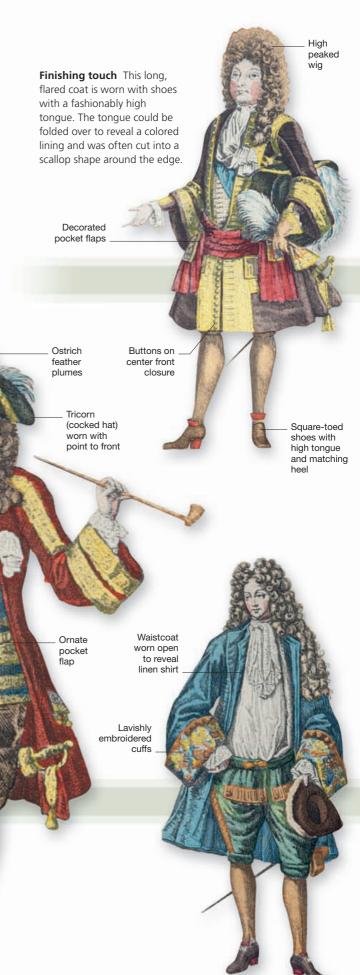

Expensive garments were made to measure, but there were many ways of buying cheaper clothing. Basic garments such as shirts and breeches could be bought in towns and cities from large clothing warehouses, and secondhand garments could be purchased in markets or from clothes sellers. These traders carried their wares around the streets, ready to sell to any interested customers. In order to be able to carry as much stock as possible, this clothes seller wears his hats piled on top of his head, allowing customers to instantly recognize his trade.

Engraving of old cloak and hat seller

Laced breeches Gathered into a waistband, breeches could be adjusted by laces at the center back. They were held up with a tie around the waist, often a decorative sash.

encircling the shield of St. George. The buckled, blue velvet garter was worn around the left calf.

occasions, but a steinkirk (long, plain linen cravat) became popular for men and women.

MANTUAS AND PETTICOATS

Trom the 1680s the mantua became the chief item of women's undergarment. A full-length, coatlike garment with elbowlength sleeves, the mantua was worn over the stiffened bodice and skirt of earlier periods. Closed from neck to waist, the sides and back were folded up and secured at the waistline to reveal the skirt below. To fit beneath the mantua, the bodice had straps instead of sleeves and was formed like a corset. It opened down the center back with a lace closure and was still long and stiffened and cut low on the chest. The petticoat was full and gathered in at the waistline. By the 1690s the top part of the mantua was worn open to show the bodice. It was filled in with a decorative panel known as a stomacher, which was pinned on to the stiffened bodice beneath.

> Silk nightgown During the Restoration famous beauties were painted in languid poses wearing rich silk casual robes (called nightgowns) over a linen smock. This red silk garment, worn by Charles II's mistress, has decorative fringing and metal clasps.

1684

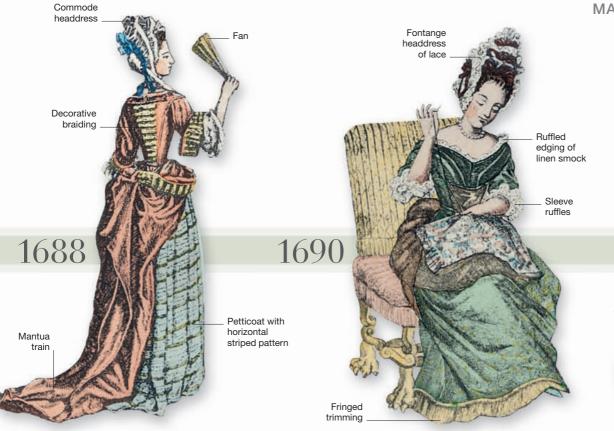

Bejeweled mantua This silver-gray silk mantua, worn by the Duchess of Burgundy, is embellished with rubies and other jewels. Over this she wears an ermine-trimmed cloak of blue and gold brocade, fixed at her shoulders with jeweled clasps.

Riding hood Long scarves were often worn to cover the head outdoors, and riding hoods (hooded cloaks) were also popular. The long, cloaklike fabric shown here may have been used more for effect in a portrait than as a practical wearable garment.

MANTUAS AND PETTICOATS

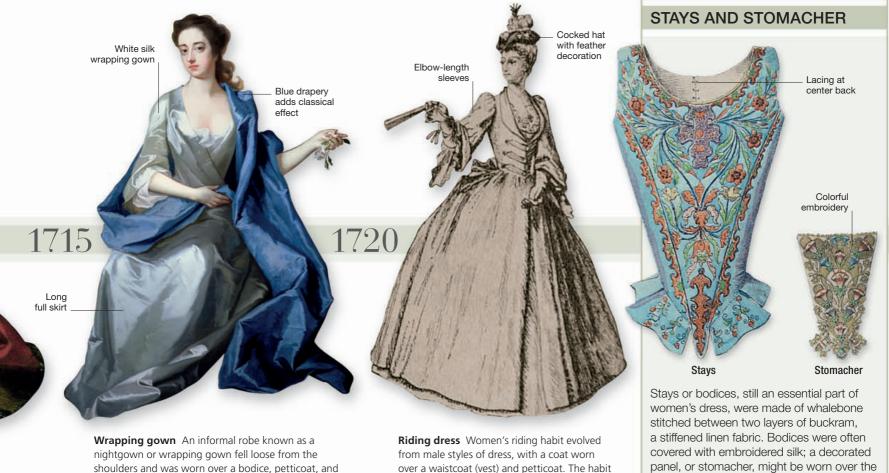

Folded train Toward the end of the 17th century the train on the mantua became much longer. The sides were intricately folded and pinned up at the back of the skirt to reveal ever more elaborate linings.

Tall cap The fontange cap was worn flat at the back of the head, rising up high above the crown in layers of lace and ribbon, often supported by a wire-frame commode. It was named after Madame Fontange, who originated the ribbon style.

Hood made from light muslin scar Soft calf-leather gloves 1695 Mantua train with contrast Mantua and petticoat By the end of the century the mantua and petticoat were made from matching fabric, with contrasting material used for the lining of the mantua. Petticoats were decorated with horizontal bands of lace or fringing (furbelows) top for further embellishment or contrast.

shoulders and was worn over a bodice, petticoat, and linen smock or shift. A popular choice for portraits such as this one, it was seen as a timeless garment.

over a waistcoat (vest) and petticoat. The habit was often decorated with metal braiding and frogging (horizontal bands across the front).

EMBROIDERED MANTUA

IN DETAIL

STOMACHER

The triangular piece of fabric worn center front—the stomacher—was first pinned to the stays (a heavily boned underbodice) before the gown was pulled into position and secured with pins. Diamonds might adorn the stomacher on grand occasions.

□ CENTER BACK SEAM

The silk has been carefully pieced together so that the pattern is mirrored on either side of the central seam that runs down the back of the gown. The mantua developed from a loose gown that was originally draped into graceful pleats before these came to be stitched into position. The arrangement of fabric at the back of the waist alludes to earlier incarnations of the mantua gown. These would have had their open skirts swathed toward the back, where a long train was looped up and arranged in pleats.

SLEEVE RUFFLES

During the 1740s deep sleeve cuffs were replaced with ruffles, usually worn in three layers. Sometimes a lead weight, the size of a large coin and covered in fabric, was attached inside the bottom of the sleeve to prevent it from riding up.

⊲ BROCADE

The silk is brocaded, which means that the complicated pattern was woven into the fabric, rather than embroidered onto it. At least 14 different colors and four types of silver thread were used, reflecting the light in different ways and sparkling beautifully in candlelight.

MANTUAS AND OPEN ROBES

hroughout most of the 18th century the basic style of women's dress was the open robe, a garment that was put on somewhat like a modern-day coat. A separate skirt known as a petticoat was worn beneath, and the gap at the bodice covered by a stiffened panel called a stomacher, which was pinned in place to the robe by a series of tabs. The robings (foldback edges of the gown) covered the pin heads. Fashion for the most formal occasions was set at the French court of King Louis XV and copied throughout Europe, particularly the style known as le grand habit—a heavily boned bodice, and a separate, richly decorated skirt and train. The mantua, a style of dress that involved folding and draping the sides and the back panel, was also popular and seen at the English courts of the Hanoverian kings.

Rococo robe The undulating lines of the design on this dress silk are characteristic of the mid-18th-century rococo movement in the decorative arts. The robe falls in softer, less formal folds than the exaggerated lines of the heavily hooped dresses.

SHOES

For most of the 18th century women's shoes were made of fabric. Although the material might be patterned dress silk, it was not usual to choose a gown and shoes in matching material. Sometimes separate leather overshoes were worn to protect the fabric shoes. A metal buckle decorated with cut-glass pastes was pinned into the latchets (side straps) to fasten the shoes.

Tip-up, pointed-toe shoe

Lower heel in 1740s

Latchets or straps flap across the vamp (top) of shoe

MANTUAS AND OPEN ROBES

Mantua The mantua was a style left over from the end of the 17th century, and by this date was only worn at the most formal occasions. Technically the mantua is the bodice, but the term is also used for the style of dress.

English court This ribbed silk mantua embroidered with over 11 lb (5 kg) of silver metal thread was worn at the court of King George II in Britain. Side hoops, which gave this exaggerated rectangular shape, were introduced as court dress in the 1740s.

Parading wealth France and England boasted the finest professional embroidery workshops. In the 18th century, dress was a way of parading wealth—everybody knew that your family was rich and important if you wore a costly mantua such as this one.

Transitional style By the 1750s formal fashions were changing and the draped style of the mantua was replaced by a bodice, which had only a hanging pleated flap from waist to hem. This was the forerunner to the court train.

Hand-painted Chinese silk Robes and petticoats made from painted silk were all the rage in the 1760s and 1770s. Heavily patterned, woven dress silks were going out of fashion to be replaced in part by painted and printed fabrics imported from China and India.

Sack back Originally a nightgown style, the French sacque (sack back) became the most fashionable and graceful dress style in mid-18th century England. The double pleats falling from the shoulders gave the distinctive triangular shape.

GOWN AND PETTICOAT

SACK BACK DRESS

The sack back dress, also known as a robe à la française, started out as an informal style in France earlier in the 18th century. It came to be the most elegant dress for most of the midcentury throughout Europe and the fashionable world. The sack back could be worn in two ways. The pleats could hang straight down from the back of the shoulders into a slight train. In the alternative polonaise style, the back fabric was tucked up using tapes in the waistband to create fullness at the back. The dress was cut away at the front, and so would have been worn with a triangular stomacher, as well as a matching petticoat. A pair of stays worn under the dress kept the bodice rigid and flat fronted and molded the body into the fashionable cone shape, with a narrow waist widening to the bust.

Heavily pleated petticoat

BACK VIEW WITH SKIRT DOWN

SIDE VIEW WITH SKIRT DOWN

IN DETAIL

⊲ STOMACHER

Although this stomacher is in poor condition, originally it would have been heavily embellished with colored silk and metalic threads in a floral embroidery design. The stomacher was pinned or stitched onto the stays and could potentially be worn with a range of different dresses.

⊲ BOX PLEATS

Deep pleats of silk stitched into the back of the neckline allowed the fabric to fan out over the back of the dress to display the quality and quantity of the silk.

□ LACE SLEEVE RUFFLES

Sleeves were cut tight to the elbow, and finished with cuffs, which were gathered and hand stitched onto the sleeves in two layers of ruffles. To achieve a light appearance, the ruffles were edged with lace.

□ CARTRIDGE PLEATING

This type of pleating, in which the fabric is folded in tight pleats, gives a great deal of volume. Cartridge pleats shaped the petticoat to expand from the narrow waistband to the width of the side hoops.

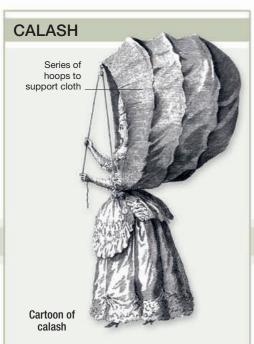

□ POLONAISE MECHANISM

Tapes sewn into the inside of the waistband could be looped and fastened to create the draped effect known as a polonaise, which added fashionable volume to the skirts. When the dress was worn hanging down, the tapes would dangle freely beneath the skirt. BAROQUE AND ROCOCO

1778-1789

FRENCH A LA MODE

oward the end of the 18th century people of fashion looked to France for the latest word on matters of taste in clothing, manners, and cultural trends. But on the eve of the Revolution, the French aristocracy were out of touch with the general population, and it showed in the excesses of their dress. The styles of the age included tightly waisted bodices and draped and padded skirts. Upthrust, corseted bosoms were set off with low, round necklines, often edged with lace. Hair tended to be high-rise and hats were big. The French influence, and exquisite textiles such as Lyons silk, ensured that well-bred ladies were not merely dressed in fine clothes but were themselves sophisticated adornments both in society and at home.

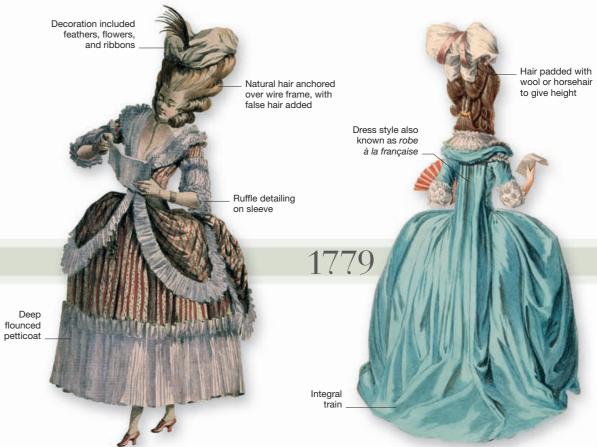

To protect their towering hairstyles, women wore a kind of bonnet called a "calash" after the similar hood on a horse-drawn carriage of this name. Usually made of fine silk stretched over hoops made of cane, wood, or whalebone, the calash folded away concertina-style when not in use. No calash was as vast as the caricature seen here, which is taken from a book of illustrations poking fun at 18th-century fashion.

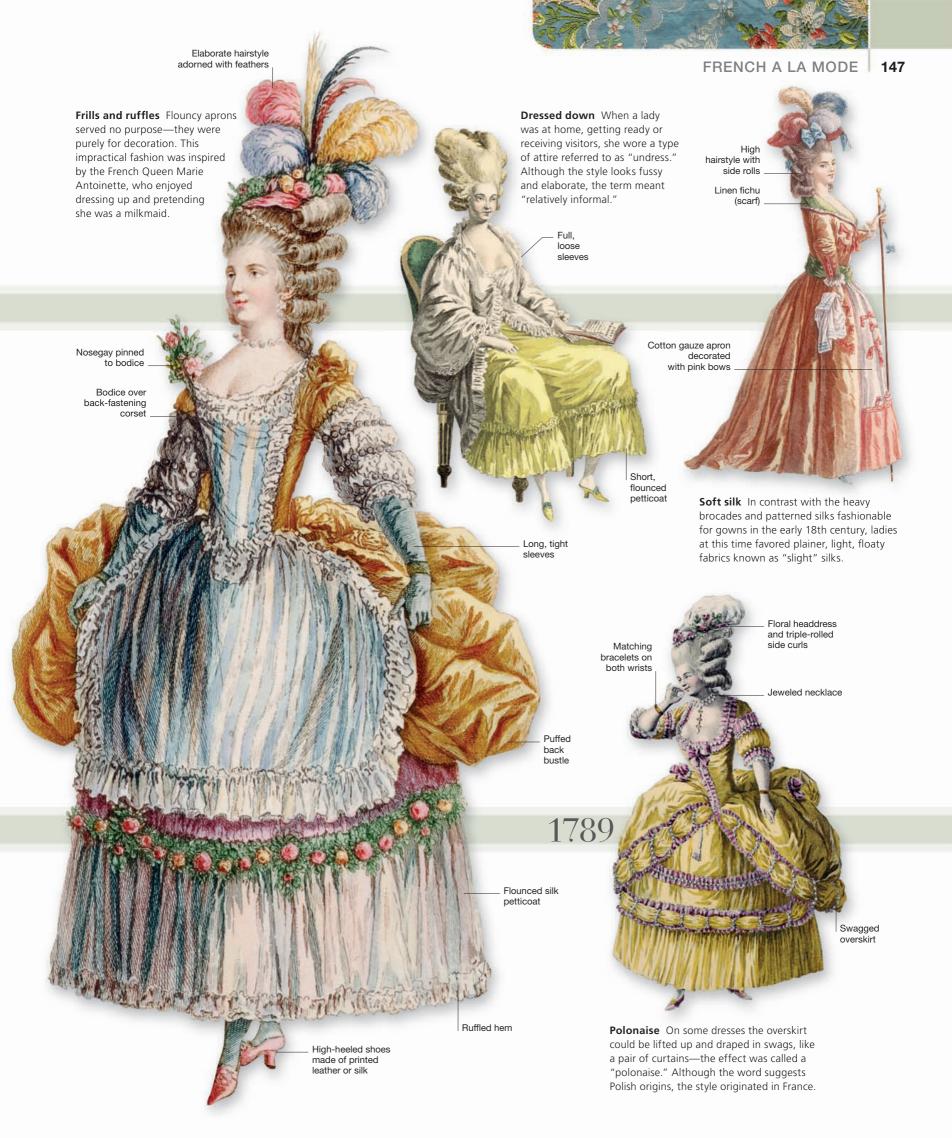

Supporting structure Ladies wore very wide skirts supported by a framework of cloth-covered cane hoops called a "pannier." Here, with this vital accessory in hand, a dressmaker hurries to her client.

High hats Women favored big hats with flat brims, tilted to the back or slightly to one side. Underneath this dress is a separate petticoat—the word at this time describing an underskirt that was meant to be seen.

Crowning glory Hair was complicated: padded, powdered, curled and rolled, and heavily adorned. Dressed hair was left untouched for months, and "scratchers" were used to deal with itches and vermin.

Sack back Sometimes spelled "sacque back," the term refers to a style of dress with a loose back falling from the shoulders. Generally popular early in the century, by the 1770s the sack back was for court wear only.

FASHION ICON

MARIE-ANTOINETTE

hen the Austrian-born Marie-Antoinette (1755–1793) arrived in France in 1770, she was handed over to the Bourbon court and stripped naked. Relinquishing her Austrian nationality along with her clothes, she was dressed in a gleaming ceremonial gown. She was to marry the dauphin, Louis Auguste, the future King Louis XVI of France, and give the kingdom an heir. At first she played the dutiful wife, but struggled to fit in with Versailles' rigid idea of royal glamour: vast pannier skirts (undergarments worn wide at the sides, but flat at the front and rear) and whalebone corsets. Friendless, childless, and viewed with suspicion by a hostile French court, she turned to costume as a strategy for survival and to bolster her prestige. One disapproving aristocrat remarked that she had staged a "veritable revolution in fashion."

Extravagance and experimentation

Marie-Antoinette confounded expectations of a royal consort. In a scandalous move, she refused to wear the posture-enhancing corset. After learning to ride, she abandoned the long, flowing skirts of a sidesaddle rider and wore male breeches and a riding coat, drawing swift condemnation. Her mother warned: "If you are riding like a man, dressed as a man...I have to tell you that I find it dangerous as well as bad for bearing children..."

In 1774, when her husband Louis XVI was crowned King of France, all eyes were on Marie-Antoinette and her new "pouf" hairstyle. Heavily powdered hair was teased high above the forehead and topped with a cluster of white ostrich feathers. It was a look soon emulated by all of French society.

The gueen experimented with eye-catching ensembles. She made weekly trips to Paris to meet the city's most famous designers. Rose Bertin (1747–1813), originally a fabric seller, became her most trusted stylist. In 1780 her provocative robe à la polonaise, with a bosom-enhancing bodice and ankle-baring skirt, soon caught on. Instead of having panniers, gowns once again had bunched fabric at the back. Sleeves remained elbow length, but were tight fitting and edged with a frill. The new "Polonaise" style was adopted simultaneously by the French and English courts.

Simplicity and star quality

By the mid- to late 1780s Marie-Antoinette had changed style completely. She offended her French compatriots > by adopting Anglophile fashions, wearing much simpler, lighter dresses. As her look softened, she outraged courtiers by wearing thin, muslin chemises à la reine loosely belted at the waist. Without panniers, the fabric molded around the legs. The peasant-girl look was topped with a broad straw hat, tilted at every imaginable angle. It was a trend condemned by French society but soon copied. Through her dress, Marie-

Antoinette conveyed total power, a queen who wore whatever she wanted, no matter the cost. Her enemies at court spread rumors of her financial irresponsibility and addiction to fashion, and in revolutionary France her outfits came to symbolize a betrayal of the people. Marie-Antoinette rode to her death in 1793 wearing a brand new white chemise she had secretly saved. A trendsetter whose style had been copied by commoners and courtiers alike, Marie-Antoinette was a queen of fashion to the very end.

△ THE YOUNG MARIE-ANTOINETTE In this portrait painted when she was 12, the Archduchess Marie-Antoinette is shown as perfection personified.

⊲ THE PANNIER GOWN

The epitome of exaggerated style, the material of Marie-Antoinette's dress is heavily laden with lace. Wide panniers, often up to 12 ft (3.5 m) wide, typified the style of dress required at court when Marie-Antoinette first became queen.

1770 Brings Austrian fashion to the French court, but is made to wear the traditional corsets and heavy dresses of the royal court

⊳ Early 1770s

Refuses to wear a corset and dons outrageous androgynous riding

O 1770

1774 Stuns the court with her new "pouf" hairstyle

O 1775

1780 Introduces the much-copied "Polonaise" dress, bringing the "bustle look" back in voque and baring the ankles

Late 1770s Her extravagant dresses repeatedly cause a stir

Late 1780s Adopts simple dresses and rustic attire, rebelling against strictures of Versailles

☐ 1788 Poses with her young children in a softer dress, showing her maternal side

O 1785

BAROQUE TO NEOCLASSICAL

Trance was the center of fashion in the 18th century → and dressing well was seen as the cornerstone of an established society. France had the finest textile industries, and throughout the salons of Paris, and Europe, clothes were the visible elements of social standing. It was English country dress, however, that became increasingly important as the century progressed. Fashions changed slowly, but there was an awareness of slight nuances, such as new styles in silk design or a change in the length of waistcoats (vests). The components of men's dress remained constant—an outer garment, waistcoat, and breeches—but the look changed across the century from the heavy baroque through the lighter rococo to the beginnings of the neoclassical. By the end of the period there was a new garment called the frock, which was based on English sporting dress.

Old style This man wears a bob wig, a style that was going out of fashion at this date. His suit, with its deep cuffs and its coat and waistcoat made of the same wool cloth, is old fashioned.

Summer shades Full suits (matching coats and breeches) in colorful tints were worn as formal dress at European courts, with pink silks and satins a popular summer choice. Men switched to heavier suits of patterned silk velvet in winter.

wear chivalric orders Bulky cuffs In early 18th-century Europe there was a baroque heaviness in the style of fashionable menswear, exemplified by the oversized turn-back cuffs on a man's coat, which reached almost to the elbow.

Waistcoat with long skirts

Tightly curled

Coat, buttoned iust at neck

Deep cuff (boot sleeve)

1725

Cotton or linen stock

with lace-edged scarf over the top

Order pinned

Blue sash, an alternative way to to coat

Silk coat with

Grand tour Wealthy men traveled to Italy to study classical antiquity and to experience polite society. An appreciation of fine dressing was part of gracious living. This man wears an embroidered matching silk coat and waistcoat.

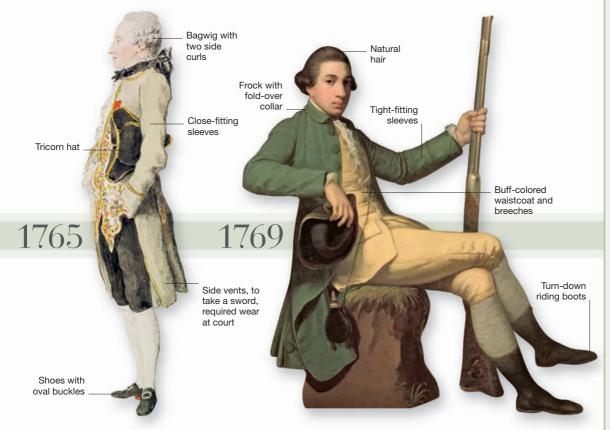

BAROQUE TO NEOCLASSICAL

WAISTCOATS (VESTS)

Revealing skirts The skirts of men's coats were often stiffened with buckram so that they stood away from the body showing the richly decorated waistcoat beneath. Waistcoat panels were woven or embroidered to shape before being stitched together.

Bagwig By the 1740s throughout both mainland Europe and the European colonies most men wore a wig. The prevalent style was the bagwig, with a series of rolls at the side, and the tail caught up into a small bag at the back.

Tricorn hat A hat was an essential part of a man's ensemble, and the tricorn was the height of fashion in the mid-18th century. As wigs became taller in the 1760s, the tricorn was carried increasingly under the arm.

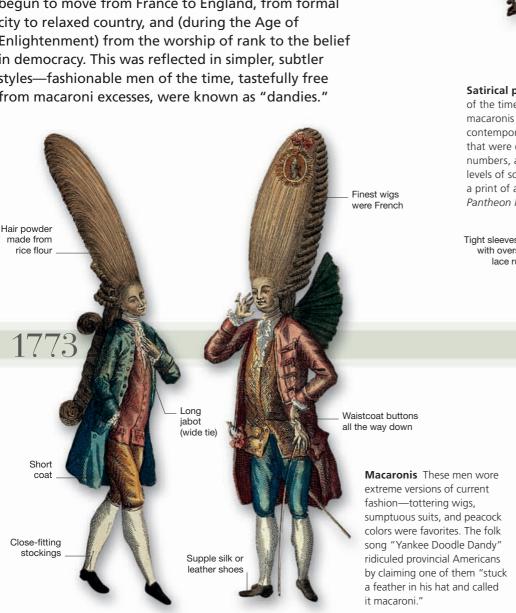

Sporting clothes Thomas Graham, Baron Lynedoch, who later fought in the Napoleonic wars, was a Scottish country gentleman and a daring rider in his youth. Country dress worn for such sports activities was known as a particularly British style.

In the 1720s and 30s men wore long waistcoats, and there was a vogue for hand-embroidered white-work styles in white cotton or linen threads on a white linen ground. The mid-18th century saw the start of more color, with delicate naturalistic embroidery in colored silk threads, sometimes with metal thread, around the waistcoat edges and the pocket flaps. There were embroidery workshops throughout Europe, with the finest in France and England. Portraits also show men wearing waistcoats decorated with broad bands of applied braid, giving a military appearance.

MACARONI TO DANDY

The 1770s saw the final flicker of flamboyant male fashion. Earlier in the century, the term "macaroni" had been coined for young men who affected fussy foreign dress and grooming (other labels were "fop," "exquisite," and élégantes in France). The name seems to have come from the informal Macaroni Club, made up of young gentlemen back from their Grand Tour, much of it spent in pasta-loving Italy. Then, toward the end of the century, powdered wigs fell from favor and the collared frock coat, based on English sporting dress, became popular. The inspiration for men's fashion had begun to move from France to England, from formal city to relaxed country, and (during the Age of Enlightenment) from the worship of rank to the belief in democracy. This was reflected in simpler, subtler styles—fashionable men of the time, tastefully free from macaroni excesses, were known as "dandies."

Fall-front breeches For this style, two side flaps buttoned together at the center, across the stomach, then the front panel flapped up Powdered over them and buttoned at the waist. This wig with exaggerated tail illustration is a caricature of the style, and also of the fussy neckwear in vogue. Draped, folded linen worn as stock at neck 1757 Bagwig-hair tied in "queue" Breeches reached from waist to knee (ponytail), kept in black bag Macaronis often wore striped breeches and stockings Satirical prints Caricaturists of the time lampooned the macaronis mercilessly in contemporary illustrations that were distributed in large numbers, and enjoyed by all levels of society. This detail is from a print of a 1773 oil painting titled Pantheon Macaroni. Tight sleeves end with oversized lace ruffle Ribbon rosettes at knees Stockings with elongating stripes Flat dancing shoes, also

with rosettes

MACARONI TO DANDY

Hairstyles Although huge wigs, cylindrical side curls, and fussy decoration were widely popular, macaronis exaggerated this style significantly. Swords were often shown in caricatures—as an ironic comment on their effeminate appearance.

of Young Werther inspired "Werther fever"— dressing in the informal, distinctly English country style of its hero. This French version of the English frock coat is slimmer with more decoration.

Slim lines The macaronis left one legacy: slim tailoring never went out of fashion. Numerous conflicts in Europe made military dress acceptable as day wear. This outfit resembles the official Windsor (court) uniform designed by King George III.

COAT, WAISTCOAT, AND BREECHES

STREAMLINED COURT SUIT

his man's court outfit from 1780, embellished ornately with a floral theme, is a typical example of a rococo, French-style suit known as the habit à la Française. Such suits consisted of a coat (habit), waistcoat (vest), and knee breeches, worn with a white shirt, a jabot frill, ruffled cuffs, and silk stockings. The striking colors, lavish fabrics, and extravagant embroidery continued a trend for bright colors and decoration from the 1600s. Characteristic of the pre-French Revolution period, outfits such as these were typically worn by the 18th-century upper-class man. Suit cloth often came already embroidered—known as à la disposition—prior to being made up. The slim, fitted cut of this suit is typical of the later 1700s, with its streamlined, unpadded coat and shorter, sleeveless waistcoat. As the Revolution (1789-99) approached, stripes became popular—this cut-velvet coat is striped with pink.

Decorative shirt-cuff ruffles

Embroidery design on one side mirrors that on the other Narrow, cutaway sides to reveal decorated waistcoat ivory silk decora waisto

Tiny flower sprigs embroidered across the Three-pointed, decorated pocket flaps

Breeches dark (once black) velvet patterned with tiny, pink diamonds

Breeches tighter fitting, like coat and waistcoat

With its very shallow, cutaway skirt fronts, this distinctive shape is typical of the era. The front section is made of ivory satin richly embroidered with colored silks. The pale color shows off the embroidery and contrasts with the dark coat.

IN DETAIL

STAND COLLAR

The short stand collar is a feature that became more popular on men's coats (and waistcoats) from the 1790s. The fully embroidered, stepped, cutaway version on this coat is small and works in harmony with the modestly sized jabot frill. Much taller collars were to become popular.

⊲ COAT CUFFS

True to later 18th-century fashions, the coat's cuffs, smaller than in previous eras, hug the wrist closely, in keeping with the garment's slim, fitted profile. Their lavish decoration includes sequins, glass flower shapes, and embroidered buttons.

⊲ TAIL TRIMMINGS

Focusing embellishment around the central division of the coat tails, and in a broad band close to the waist, attracts attention to the neat, elegant cut of the tails and the subtly waisted form of the coat.

\triangleleft FALL FRONT

The dark (once black) velvet knee breeches feature the characteristic 18th-century "fall" front. The fall is a panel that closes up toward the waistband with buttons. The buttons here are covered with the same fabric as the breeches, making them more discreet.

A colorful band of floral-themed embroidery sewn over the velvet and tightened with a buckle provides a stylish trim for the bottom of the breeches. The side opening is closed with embroidered buttons and shaped to ensure a snug fit at the knees.

SIMPLER

STYLING High-piled hairstyle sloping backward from forehead oth England and France were instrumental in establishing the look of fashion, which was then followed by the rest of Europe, and 1755 farther afield. French fashions were elegant, while English dress was more informal. By the Buff breeches. aathered at 1770s the collarless coat with bulky side pleats, the back fashionable since the 17th century, had been replaced by the frock coat, derived from the informal garment worn by English Cotton muslin chemise dress with men in the country. There was drawstring neck also a growing informality in women's dress in both England and Blue ribbon France, with floating and sash at waist, draped styles of newly possibly with seal tied at available cotton fabrics from one end the East becoming popular. Drape of red silk used as artistic backdrop written about the beautiful young Muslin soprano Elizabeth Linley, the neck scar most famous woman in England in the 1770s. She Seals hanging latest fashions. from chain at waist Short leather gloves, held Round in hand black hat 1780 Buff (pale vellow-brown) breeches Trailing hem Turned-down riding boots Flat, slipper-

Tailored coat Britain was known for immaculate tailoring and the finest wool cloth. The double-breasted style and cutaway skirts of this navy blue wool coat heralded the era of Beau Brummel and dandyism in the early 19th century.

Knit stockings Leather shoes with flat heels Loose cloak Country dress Self-colored wool outer garments worn with linen shirts, and white silk or cotton knit stockings were typical English country wear in the mid-18th century. This trend for less formal dress would soon inspire fashions throughout the rest of Europe. Hair wildly curled at sides, with single "The Maid from Bath" A play was ringlet over one shoulder

Natural hair and wayy locks denote an artistic sensibility

Linen shirt

1785

Silk gauze or very fine cotton gauze neckerchief tied in large bow was painted in the very Apricot silk dress with green silk sash at waist

High-heeled

Chemise Fashionable in the 1780s, this garment was the forerunner of later neoclassical dress. The style, a tube of cotton muslin with a drawstring at the neck and sash at the waist, grew popular throughout Europe.

style shoes

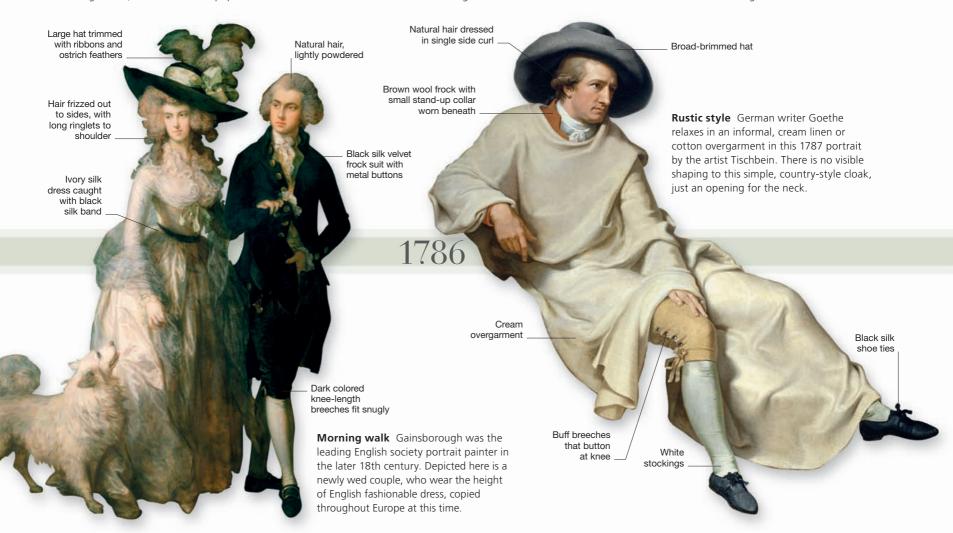

SIMPLER STYLING

Frock coat The frock coat was characterized by a folded-over collar, narrow sleeves without a turn-back cuff, and a slim silhouette, often with a curving front. It was a somber-toned wool cloth garment, with blue-black a popular choice.

Chiné robe This sack back style is in the newly popular chiné print. The pattern was printed onto the warp thread prior to weaving, giving a fuzzy effect known in this era as chiné in France and "clouds" in England.

Overcoat Another new style for men in the 18th century (as well as the frock coat), the overcoat, or redingote, was derived from English working men's dress. This French example was worn as a walking coat over a close-cut suit.

MASQUERADE

ince medieval times dressing up had been popular all over Europe. In the Middle Ages masked mummers $m{J}$ (traveling actors) performed in village pageants and traveled from house to house in Carnival season, which lasted from Christmas until Lent. During Carnival, the Catholic Church allowed merrymaking and open-air festivities, so bands of masked revelers regularly paraded through the streets. During the Renaissance people performed set scenes in elaborate processional pageants. By the 18th century Carnival was celebrated all over Italy, with Venice leading the fashion for lively masguerades (masked balls and entertainments), held at night and lit with flickering candles and torches. This trend soon became popular in France and England too, possibly because shadows and masks encourage relaxed behavior. The term "masguerade" specifically described dressing as particular characters, but these extravagant events led to the more general practice of displaying wealth and social position by wearing "fancy dress"—formal clothes with small elements of masquerade added.

Hooked nose identifies Pulcinella Many women, not just nuns, wore wimples in Dressed the Middle Ages as a monk Female players, rare in Commedia dell'arte, usually dressed as figures from the past 1650 Long, medieval-style skirt had to be held up for walking > Commedia dell'arte This comic open-air entertainment, first seen in Venice, may have been connected to Carnival. The traveling players, dressed as stock characters such as Harlequin and Pulcinella, probably performed at early masquerades, providing costume inspiration.

Orient, the past, political and social scandals, fairy tales, and accessorized their best contemporary clothes and wore a mask.

extreme fashions. For late-1700s fancy-dress balls, guests

the period

Gown and hooped underneath cloak petticoat fit

Pointed hat with a veil

Gold

mask

Mantua-

style dress

bodice and petticoat has separate

High hairstyle threaded with ribbon and feathers

fired public imagination, and their glamorous uniforms were ideal for costume balls.

LADY WITH A MASK

skirt folded back at sides

Deep border of silver fabric

This print of a portrait by British artist Henry Morland is called The Fair Nun Unmasked. In 18th-century England the word "nun" could suggest a prostitute, and the painting is a form of satire. The black veil suits this purpose, since prostitutes of the time often donned religious dress. The veil also suggests an Italian batua, a length of black silk that covered the face for masquerades.

TURKISH DELIGHT

Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, better known as Madame de Pompadour (1721–64), was the powerful mistress of Louis XV of France from 1745 to her death. When in the 1750s she commissioned artist Charles André van Loo to paint her as a Turkish Sultana, Pompadour started a craze for portrait à la turque. Exotic oriental culture was already widely popular in France, and Turquerie, as the craze was known, permeated all aspects of French art and fashion.

Both women in this picture wear a loosely wrapped turban (Madame de Pompadour's is decorated with her signature rose), a flowing, long-sleeved shift worn over a full skirt with a natural waistline and, on top, a long jacket in rich colors. Pompadour wears an ornate belt with full, baggy silk trousers. She kept several styles of these garments in her wardrobe and enjoyed wearing them in private. Pearls were particularly favored by women at this time, and, here, Pompadour has them entwined in her hair, hanging from her ears, and around her neck. Her hair is dressed in a style she helped to popularize, drawn back close to the head in a small bun, from which a few curls fall onto the neck or over the shoulder to decorate the nape.

The first piece of my dress is a pair of drawers very full that reach to my shoes. Over this hangs my smock of a fine white silk gauze, edged with embroidery...The smock has wide sleeves...the shape and colour of the bosom is very well distinguished through it...

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, TURKISH EMBASSY LETTER, 1717

MADAME DE POMPADOUR ▷

The last portrait of Madame de Pompadour, A sultana served coffee by a slave, was by one of her favorite painters, Charles André van Loo. Completed c.1747, it shows Pompadour in exotic Turkish attire.

SPORTS DRESS

en wore tailored coats for country pursuits such as riding, hunting, hawking, and fishing. Often these activities were social and became sports occasions as a result. Special occasions demanded special dress, and so sports dress evolved. Men put on leather boots, breeches, and sometimes a cape or cloak with or without a hood. Women too wore tailored coats—for the first time—for riding. Since horseback riding was the main form of transportation, the tailored habit became the principal form of traveling dress, right up to the mid-19th century. Women's tailored jackets and skirts were based on 16th-century garments known as juppes and safeguards—Queen Elizabeth I had these in her wardrobe. For swimming, undergarments and linen caps were worn. A 1675 engraving of the Kings and Queens baths at Bath in England shows women in linen shifts and men topless with linen breeches, all wearing linen caps. The earliest sports to have specific dress were cricket, with The Sporting Magazine depicting cricketers in white jackets and breeches in 1793, and golf, for which red jackets were worn.

worn to permit players to move quickly, along with a shorter jacket or waistcoat (vest). Golfer This golfer wears a beret known as a Prince Charlie or Scotch bonnet, which was worn by Highland Regiments in the mid-18th century. His shortened version of a fashionable coat has sleeves cut close to the arms and minimal decoration for ease of movement.

Prince Charlie beret of blue wool with red tuft and band

Powdered wig

Short, wool coat

Red became mandatory for golfers

Silk stockings _

SPORTS DRESS

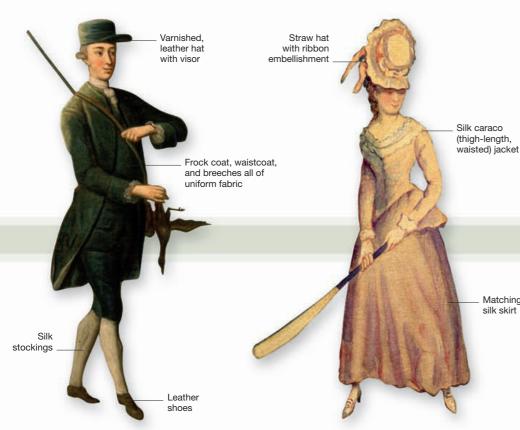

Shooting coat Riding and shooting frock coats worn at this time were shorter than regular frock coats, and often double breasted. The waistcoats were also shorter. The ammunition pouch was held on a leather belt around the waist.

Tailoring for women This brown wool, tailored jacket follows the line of a man's frock coat. It is lined with the same pink silk that makes up the waistcoat and skirt. The wearer finishes her outdoor ensemble with a beaver felt, cocked hat.

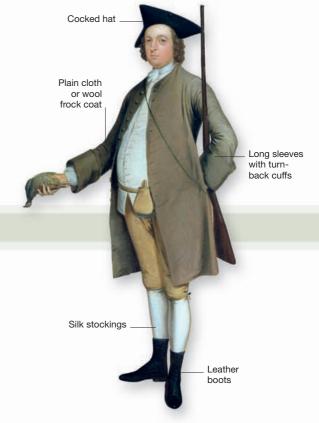

From the late 18th century outdoor activities were regarded as an essential pastime for children. Previously dressed as miniature adults, they began to wear less constrictive garments. The skeleton suit consisting of a short jacket and trousers allowed for better movement. For games such as cricket, boys wore a shorter jacket, and girls donned riding habits not only for riding but also for outdoor pursuits such as walking.

French formality Hunting hats of varnished leather with straight visors were popular in France in the 1750s. The casual approach of English dress for outdoor pursuits contrasted with the more formal, uniform styles popular in France.

Matching silk skirt

Buckskin breeches This gentleman wears buckskin breeches, which became fashionable for outdoor pursuits. Worn with wool frock coats in buff, blue, or black, they were a practical, durable choice. He sports a shooter's leather belt around his waist.

REVOLUTION TO FRIVOLITY

1790-1900

FROM REVOLUTION TO FRIVOLITY

his was a century of unprecedented and accelerated change. The world's population grew dramatically, and infant mortality was reduced by a quarter due to improved health care and hygiene. The average adult lifespan increased by a decade, and a burgeoning middle class acquired property and possessions, patronized department stores, and indulged in sports activities. Day trippers to national exhibitions and the seaside saw fashionable society men and women at leisure and aspired to their lifestyle—and fashions. Philanthropic reforms, including educational provision, assisted the working classes in seeking to better themselves by working their way up in factories, stores, or "in service." The world was changing rapidly, and the increase in members of the affluent middle classes breathed life into the market for fashionable garments.

On the move

After the Industrial Revolution, there was a major shift from country to town dwelling. Improved transportation systems—railroads, steamships, roads, and bridges—supported trade and allowed ordinary people to travel greater distances. Increased mobility expanded their range of experiences and gave rise to a new sense of worldliness and fashion consciousness. The efficient circulation of newspapers and the advent of mail delivery, as well as photography, the typewriter, telephone, and transatlantic telegraph facilitated long-distance communications. News of national, European, and American politics traveled at greater speed. Fashion information, through magazines and correspondence, could now be readily shared between continents. Fashion was becoming truly international.

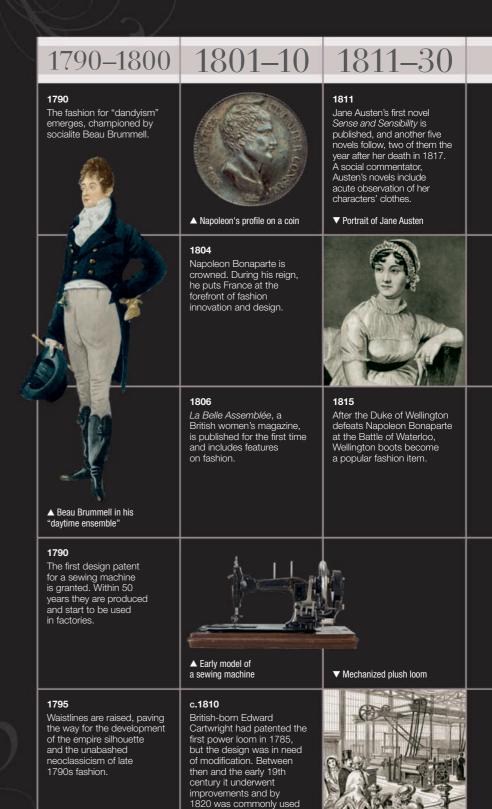

A new age

Rapidly evolving politics, economics, technology, and new discoveries affected fashion. Pride in national heroes in Britain spawned the Wellington boot, named after the Duke of Wellington, and the Gladstone bag after Prime Minister William Gladstone. Mechanization of textile processes enabled ever more complex weaves and prints at more affordable prices.

A revolution in the home came with the domestic sewing machine, and running water, which aided daily washing; most people above the breadline now owned and wore more garments than ever before.

SEASIDE ELEGANCE

Two elegantly dressed women; a color plate in The Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine, January 1875.

in both Britain and the US.

By the end of the century,

and high heels are fashion

■ Turn-of-the-century fashion looks ahead to the Edwardian era high collars, long-line bodices, colored tights, must-haves.

Fashion is a form of ugliness so intolerable that we have to alter it every six months.

OSCAR WILDE, 1890

Known as the "Year of Revolutions" because of the series of political upheavals

Europe, prudery reigns that take place throughout supreme and women's skirts are down to the ground.

1831–50 | 1851–54 | 1855–70 | 1871-80 1895-1900 1839 1851 1872 A dotted pattern on fabric is The registration of designs American women's rights The marcel wave is first for clothing is established activist Amelia Bloomer named "polka dot" after the developed by hairdresser to help protect emerging makes the bloomer polka, a popular dance. François Marcel, and manufacturers from pirate copies of their goods remains popular for more than 50 years. pants popular. A new range of dye colors being made. The Great Exhibition in in purple-pink hues are Crystal Palace, London, discovered and named attracts millions of visitors magenta and solferino after ► Irons used for creating who observe displays of contemporary battles. fashion and style. the marcel wave curling effect With the arrival of the The Englishwoman's Oscar Wilde embarks on a The new artistic style of Art Domestic Magazine is published, including advice tour of America. His "too too and utterly utter" aesthetic Nouveau influences fashion in the form of simple felt hats, railroad in the 1840s comes mass travel and clothes fashion style is regularly remarked upon in the media. designed for travel, leisure. on needlework from domestic turbans, and clouds of tulle. writer Mrs. Beeton. and vacations. Fancy Dresses Described by ▼ Bustling Regent Street Ardern Holt is published. ▼ Playbill poster shows an actress dressed in Art Nouveau style outside Liberty & Co. The first issue of Vogue magazine, founded by Arthur Turnure, is published in the United States. Viyella (a blend of wool and cotton) is introduced and is popularly used for night wear. ◆ Photography was used for fashionable visiting cards With the birth of photography Liberty & Co. department Dolly Varden costume, named after a character in Charles Dickens's Barnaby comes the "carte de visite," a store opens in London. fashionable visiting card that includes a photograph of the Rudge, becomes a traveler. Immense popularity fashionable look. leads to the publication of the cards of prominent figures, whose fashions are followed. ▼ Dress'd in a Dolly Varden became a popular song IN A DOLLY VARDE 1900

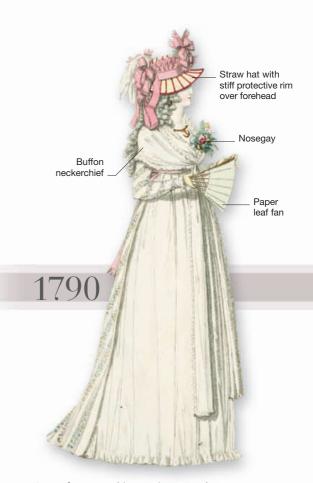

NEOCLASSICISM

he fashions of the last decade of the 18th century reflected a time of upheaval and change. It brought more informal dress, inspired by country rather than court styles, and influenced by revolutionary fervor in France. Wrapping gowns in striped silk and painted chintzes gave way to printed cottons and plain cotton chemise dresses that could, at last, be washed. Imported Indian muslins and cotton gauzes were popular for neckerchiefs and full-length dresses. By 1800 white predominated. The shape was a neoclassical columnar silhouette, with a simple, high-waisted dress. There was little understructure except for an opaque linen shift and cotton underslip that echoed the shape of the gown, and sometimes half-stays to support the bust. Hand-stitched seams were neat and unobtrusive. Accessories added colorful highlights. Extraordinary features emerged: like the audacious revealing of thighs through flimsy muslins, laced corsets worn on top of dresses, and red ribbon that may have signified veiled support for the revolutionaries.

Overtunic embroidery White cotton dresses were fastened with ties, or Dorset (yarn-covered) buttons, and often had drawstring necklines. This sleeveless, trained overtunic is secured on the shoulders, toga-style.

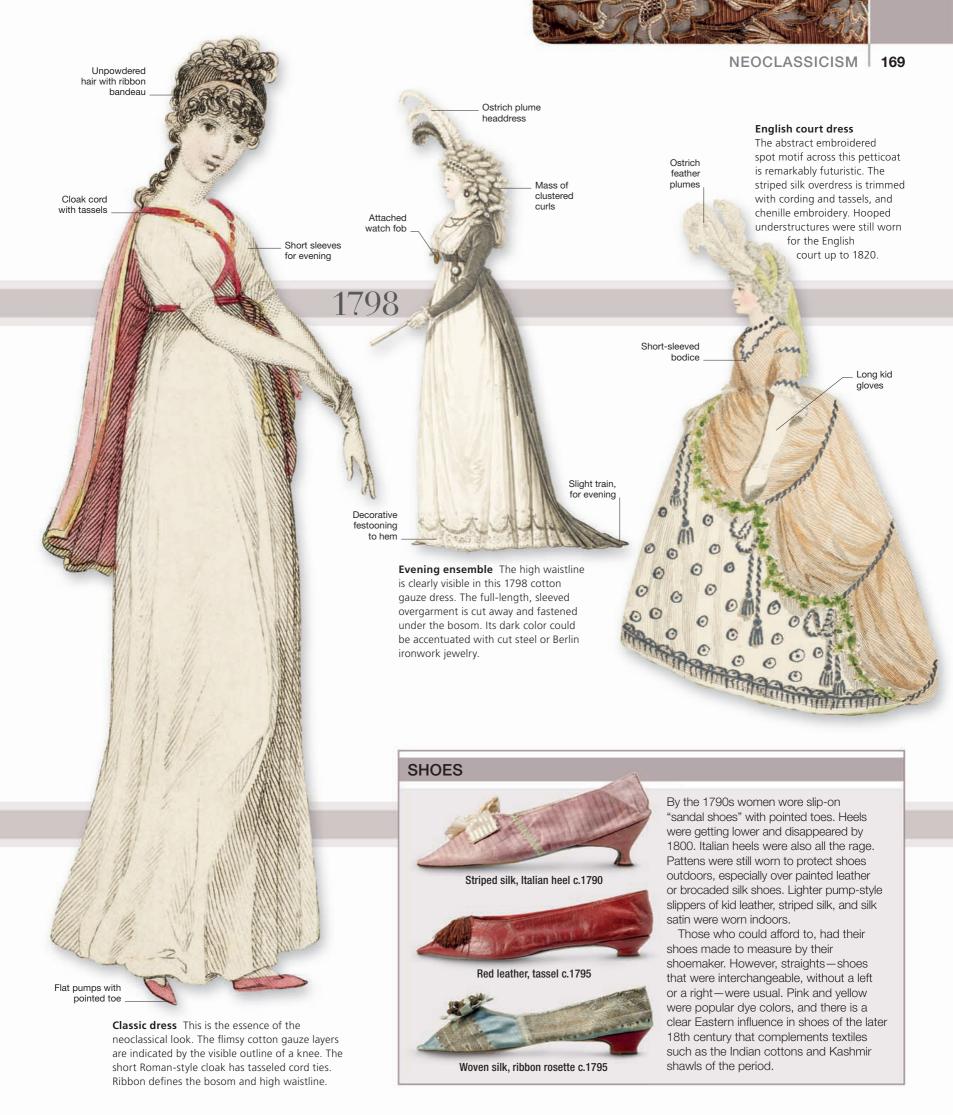

Outer wear Fur muffs added warmth for women suffering for the whims of fashion, as did satin and velvet tabards, and bearskin-fur tippets. Close-fitting head wear covered shorter hair.

Straw bonnet This morning gown has an overdress of delicate striped print. A buffon neckerchief folded into a triangle and puffed up under the chin crosses over at the front and ties behind. Half-stays still support the bosom.

Laced bodice Neoclassical meets avant-garde in the dress (left) with external front-laced corset. Accents of color are introduced to the dress (right) through the use of red ribbon trim.

EMPIRE LINES

ashion magazines produced hand-colored plates for each month, → specifying whether a dress was best for morning, afternoon, or evening wear, or designed for a special occasion. In France the so-called Empire line had been fashionable since the 1790s (Napoleon became emperor in 1804). This simple style was inspired by classical Greek and Roman statuary, where figures were draped in fabric with minimal ornamentation. Waistlines were high and skirts had short trains until 1807 when straighter lines were favored. The palette at this time was white or pastel shades, although trim and accessories could add brighter accents. Corseting was unboned but corded corsets separated the breasts and controlled waist and hips with back lacing. Dresses with short sleeves in simple cotton muslin required stoles and capes or pelisses to provide warmth. Some dresses were overlaid with layers of lace and gauze. Gradually, more exotic accessories became available, such as parasols and embroidered shawls from India.

Grecian This style of dress clings to the body with draping reminiscent of a Grecian statue. The dress is simple with a trained skirt. A feather bonnet and boa lend elegance but very little warmth.

Fabric

drapes

Ostrich feather

on soft cap

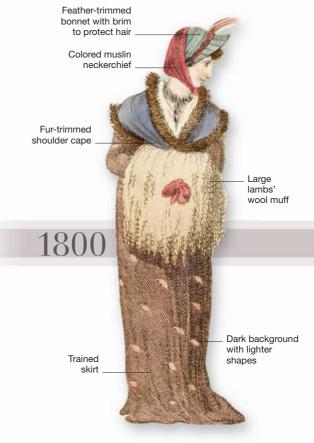

Classical influence Based on an idealized version of a classical Greek statue, this simple gown has very restrained decoration; just lace edging at the neckline and along the hem.

Cut without a train

à la Titus

Cotton gown A light cotton gown cut in the high-waisted Empire line required little corsetry. The fabric was so thin and simple that decorative shawls were often worn for warmth and to add color.

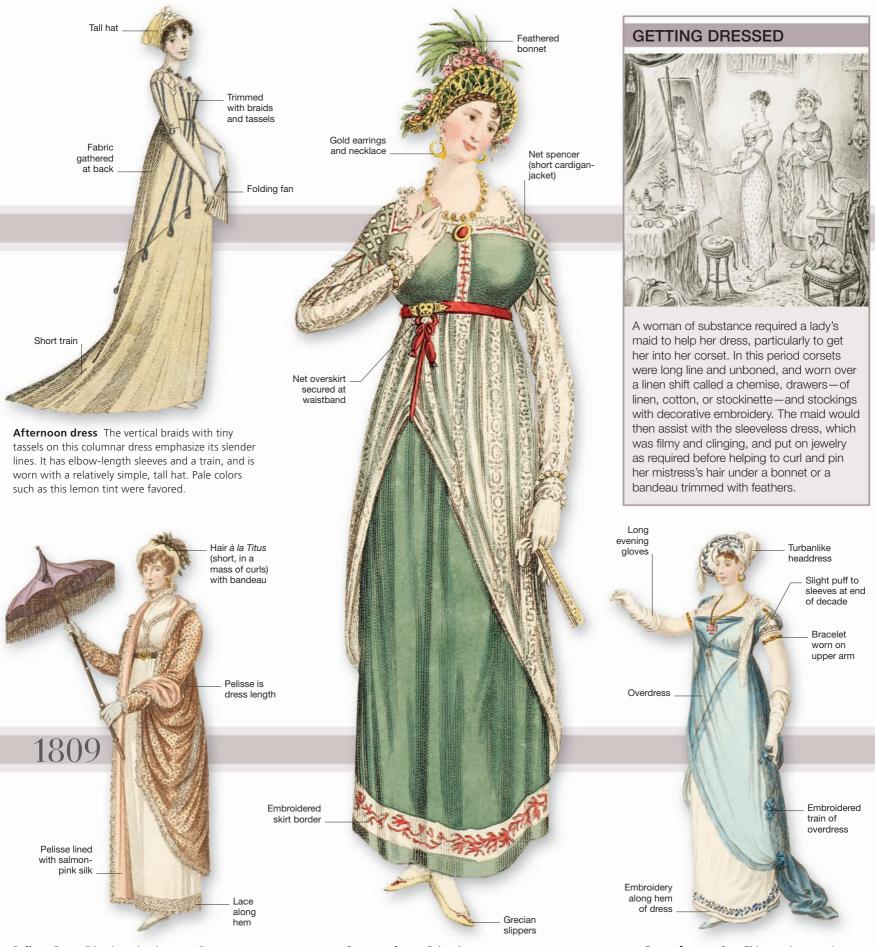

Morning dress To keep warm on a winter's day, a feathered bonnet and lambs' wool muff could be worn with a neckerchief. The dress underneath has long sleeves and trailing skirts.

without a train

Pelisse For walking in springtime, a pelisse coat, such as this full-length sleeved version in figured silk, could be worn. The extravagant fringed parasol is pagoda-shaped. The waistline on the dress is now a little lower.

Stronger hues Colors became stronger by 1809, and this green dress is trimmed with bright red ribbon. There is also a contrasting embroidered hem, though the net or lace spencer and overskirt are white.

Gauze for evening This overdress retains its train, an indicator of evening wear. It covers an embroidered cotton gown. There is more decoration from the exotic headdress, pendant, and bracelets.

REGENCY SOCIETY

In the early 1800s Regency Britain changed from a rural society to an urban, trading one, and London became an important center. A "social season" evolved during the 17th and 18th centuries where the better off divided their year between the high life of London (also Edinburgh and Dublin) and hunting seasons at country residences. Provincial towns and cities boasted Assembly Rooms and theaters for the proliferating middle classes. Social rounds provided chances for young people to parade their looks and fashionable clothes in order to make good marriages.

In this fashionable evening gathering in Bristol in 1817, the young women favor a relatively simple look: a pale empire-line gown with a low, wide neckline, short puffed sleeves, gloves, fan, and modest floral hair ornaments. Frilled and decorated hems and shorter dress lengths had recently gained currency, and diaphanous fabrics such as muslin and gauze, including satin gowns with net overlays, were popular. Maturer and married ladies dressed in stronger colors with fancy head wear.

The gentlemen wear long-skirted frock coats, tall, upright collars, and cravat-style neck cloths. Transitions in menswear are apparent—the man on the right wears black kneebreeches and silk stockings, while the man in the center with a lady on each arm sports loosely cut trousers.

What gown and what head-dress she should wear...became her chief concern...She lay awake ten minutes on Wednesday night debating between her spotted and her tamboured muslin, and nothing but the shortness of time prevented her buying a new one for the evening.

JANE AUSTEN, NORTHANGER ABBEY, 1817

Men and women prepared carefully for a social event in Regency England. Artist Rolinda Sharples shows them in the cloakroom of the Assembly Rooms in Clifton, a fashionable area of Bristol ashions began to move in a new direction away from ★ the narrow Empire line and into a softer bell shape, with fuller skirts. Though white still predominated, stronger dye colors were reintroduced for outer garments like pelisses and spencer jackets. Upper sleeves gained small puffs, and lower sleeves had longer cuffs. The English waistline had begun to move down a little c. 1808-14, but this did not last and it sprang back up to a high point when French fashions became accessible again after the Battle of Waterloo in 1815. Pintucking appeared on skirts as a decorative feature and went on to be used for lengthening and shortening skirts as hemlines changed. Vandyking (zigzag shaping) was a prevalent feature c.1815-35 and satin stitch was popular. Original gowns that survive testify to the detail, ingenuity, and fineness of the designs and embroidery.

REGENCY BELLES

SHOPPING

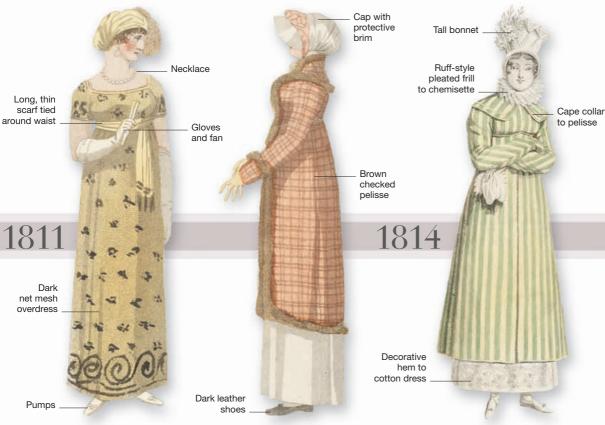

Drapers, haberdashers, hosiers, and mercers supplied fine materials like gauze and trimmings for dressmakers and ladies who liked to trim their own dresses and bonnets, or give fashion items as presents. Milliners not only sold caps and ribbons, but also plain white cotton cloth, jaconet (cotton muslin), cambric (linen), sarcenet (silk), and superfine fabrics, gloves, and lace. There were dyers who also cleaned clothes, with ox-gall and fuller's earth. Note the reticule (bag) on the lady's wrist.

Summer fashion Peace after the Napoleonic wars put a spring in the step of ladies of fashion. There was a buoyancy and frivolity about fashion designs, which began to feature decorative trims and ruffles. A parasol to keep the sun off completed this outfit.

Evening dress This evening dress with back outlined in chenille or ruffled ribbon demonstrates the ultrahigh waistline that returned from 1815 to 1817. The design, inspired by neoclassical decoration, featured in the April issue of the Lady's Magazine, a British fashion magazine.

REGENCY BELLES

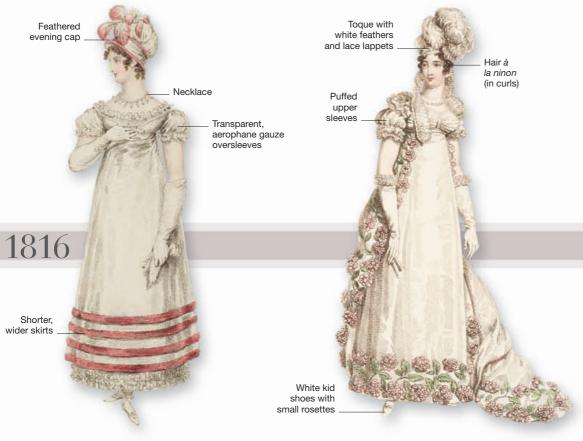

High fashion This short-sleeved evening dress with sash comprises an overdress with embroidered sequins or bugle beads in circles and swirls, over a yellow silk slip.

Fur trim Pelisses of 1811 were worn to calf length over plain cotton muslin gowns. This Londoner wears one with fur trim on the collar fronts and cuffs.

pelisse coat has vertical, green, woven stripes typifying the era. The higher waistline in Paris influenced English styling.

Costume Parisien This French

Fine net Four horizontal, red silk rouleaux give weight to this fine net overdress. The underdress has puffed sleeves and hem ruffles. The delight of a separate transparent overdress was that it could be worn over various colors to create different looks.

Parisian court This dress has a trained overgown of white satin or silver tissue, with colored foil, point lace, and kid gloves ornamented with "narrow fluted quilling of blond" (lace) as described in La Belle Assemblée magazine.

JEWELRY

Jewelry was worn extensively for evening. Parures (sets) were admired, and came in presentation boxes. This set of necklace, drop earrings, and brooch of seed pearls on mother-of-pearl adopts the bunch of grapes design so beloved of the neoclassical era. Rings, pendants on chains or ribbons, and matching bracelets were also worn. Cameos and engraved gems were popular as was turquoise, amber, topaz, carnelian, and other semiprecious stones. Gold and metal tiaras and bandeaux (headbands) and tortoiseshell combs were worn on and in the hair. Bloomed (matte-textured) and chased (relief-decorated) gold, gilt metal, and imitation paste diamonds made fashionable jewelry more affordable.

Brandenburg-closure pelisse This green pelisse coat is fastened with brandenburgs (decorative loops and buttons). Worn below are a bell-shaped, white skirt, and cambric chemisette with a layered, pleated frill at the neck.

FITTED, OUTDOOR COAT

Shoulder detail, known as a mancheron

Padded collar matches cuffs garment retains much of the neoclassical simplicity of earlier been fashionable from the late 18th century. Although the ade from a pale green silk with a darker contrast trim, this pelisse would have been worn outdoors years, the additional trimmings—padded collar and cuffs, to be an area of focus through the 1820s and early 1830s. Lduring the day over a lightweight dress. Dating and slashed mancherons at the shoulder—anticipate the fussier Gothic styling of the years to come. The shoulder from c.1818-20, it features the high waistline that had detail adds volume at the upper arm, which continued

. Waistband with concealed fastening

Long sleeves taper to cuff costume. The piped edging is an up-to-the-minute fashion. the influence of medieval the epaulettes of military known as a mancheron, It takes inspiration from was a popular feature. dress and also reflects The shoulder detail, △ MANCHERONS

Adjustable bands to tighten at wrist

Open front allows for movement metal thread, it looks a concealed closure beneath its overlap at the front. Edged with braid of twisted The waistband has like a belt.

△ BELT CLOSURE

△ CONSTRUCTION

meticulously crafted, demonstrating fine needlework skills. This detail shows the shaped back panel of stitched together by hand. Clothes of this distinctive diamondthe pelisse, which is time were often to add volume and create a soft, bell-shaped skirt. the back of the pelisse, This was a fashionable The fabric is gathered into the waistband at sometimes padded to accentuate the shape. silhouette for dresses too, which were were beginning to be a popular decoration on clothing. These cuffs are padded and hand stitched, to form Padding, and rolls of wool-padded fabric known as rouleaux, bands at the wrist. decorative puffed shape, particularly the corner at the hem, the emphasize its cut and high waist and long skirt. To create a neat lines of the pelisse to Braiding follows the braid is twisted into a small loop. 178

△ PLEATING

△ CUFFS

1820-1830

DELIGHTING IN THE DETAIL

he widening and shortening of skirt hems in the 1820s revealed footwear and, on occasion, stockings and ankles. A wide waistband helped to lower the waist, enabling alterations through the addition of a strip of extra fabric under the belt. Piping appeared on bodices and cuffs and persisted until around 1870. Dress bodices were uniformly back fastened, while spencer jackets and pelisses opened at center front. The pelisse evolved into a redingote (literally riding coat). Fashion plate distinctions between outfits for different occasions were not so clear in real life—people adapted what they had. Upon the death of George IV (June 1830), various stages of mourning were shown, as a lavender-gray filter descended on fashion.

The 1820s were typified by elaborate hats and bonnets that revealed faces, and were poised at jaunty side angles. Front temple curls or smooth-parted hair was always visible under light muslin or lawn caps. Head wear was of straw, velvet, or silk on a firm foundation, or fabric drawn across cane or wire. Feathers and artificial flowers on top were balanced by ribbons fashioned into bows and roses under the brim. There were endless variations on a theme, ever more stylish and extravagant. Ribbons of silk gauze were highly prized. Trimmings were often pinned in place, and moved from one hat or bonnet to another.

Matching purple

bonnet lined with cerise silk

French gray Mourning dress for the king in July 1830 saw black and white stripes. In August mourning continued, as here, with French gray afternoon dresses and white cotton trimmings. Sleeves are in "double bouffant" puffed shapes to the wrist.

Cording detail This mourning dress is of plain violet fabric, with cording to fichu-pelerine and overskirt. The shoulder line shows cartridge pleating into the gigot sleeves, as the shape evolves and fullness moves down the upper arm.

DELIGHTING IN THE DETAIL

Dinner dress This vandyked (zigzag-bordered) bodice forms a wide "V" to the tiny waist. The dress has asymmetrical, pinked trumpet fanning along a piped line on the skirt. Its short length reveals high-laced indoor shoes.

Vine embroidery This redingote with wide collar is decorated with meandering vine and grape embroidery, and ruching. A scarf square is tied lightly around the neck, and lilylike trumpet flowers sing out from the hat.

Carriage shoes

THE EVENING HOURGLASS

ey features of evening wear between 1820 and 1830 were the gradual appearance of very wide puffed sleeves and strong appliqué decoration. At the beginning of the 1820s dresses were simple and pale, with small puffed sleeves and some decoration around the hem of the full skirt. By the end of the decade they became shorter and puffed sleeves expanded, balancing the bellshaped skirt and emphasizing the tiny, corseted waist. Appliqué decoration in self fabric and lattice work created three-dimensional layering on dresses, and realistic flower trimming on dresses was used as well as on hair adornments. Evening dresses had low décolletage necklines, which emphasized a bottle-shaped neck. The bare neck was often unadorned, or sometimes broad necklaces were worn. Hairstyles became elaborate, piled high on the head with sculptural shapes formed of bows and loops adorned with flowers, feathers, and jewels.

Court dress Underpinned by hoops, this dress was suitable for wearing at court (though hoops were banned by George IV in England). It has a squared décolletage and is accessorized with an elaborate bandeau.

Hair adorned with flowers

Off-the-shoulder dress This silk dress has lantern-style puffed sleeves. Careful pleating on the bodice tucks into a low waistband. The skirt has a deep lattice overlay with diagonal piping, and ribbon bows.

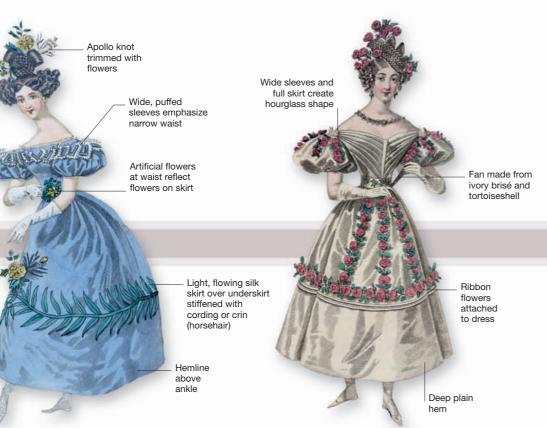

Tassel trimmings This unusual, silk dress is overlaid with spotted, silk ribbon. It has trellis fringing and plentiful tassels. There is a wide belt and ties and even wider shoulder epaulettes.

decoration

Hem detailing Layers of ruched fabric on this silk opera dress form a wavy border between a line of piping and padded rouleau, formed of bias-cut fabric filled with wadding to give weight and interest to the hem.

Opera cape This velvet opera cape is lined with wadding and yellow sarsenet (silk) and edged with fur. The double sleeve recalls medieval gowns that had an opening at elbow level for wearing "short."

Puffed sleeves In a soft-colored silk with cream lace at the neckline, this dress has a shorter hem for dancing. A bold line of appliqué foliage ends with a pretty bouquet. Short sleeves became wider and more gathered by this time.

Ball gown The plain silk of this dress is decorated with garlands of silk roses. The bodice is finely pleated to the waist, emphasized by a wide ribbon. Ribbons were also used for the rose decorations and chenille (a furry yarn) for the leaves.

Dress for religious festival This round gown was worn for a religious festival in France. Though the dress is a relatively straightforward shape, the silver embroidery is dramatic, especially the crescent motifs above the padded rouleau band.

c.1826 that gave height and poise to fashionable ladies. To achieve the complex confection, hair was centrally parted and swept up to the crown, where it was styled into braids and looped into bows.

Sometimes false hair braids were used as well as wires to help loops stand erect.

FASHION ICON

BEAU BRUMMELL

△ CURLS AND CRAVAT This engraving of a young Beau Brummell was taken from an original portrait miniature. He is not yet quite the peerless dandy, but his cravat is immaculate.

PORTRAIT OF BRUMMELL, 1805 ▷

Robert Dighton's painting shows Brummell in his famous daytime ensemble, complete with tasseled boots.

outinely dismissed as a shallow fop, George Bryan ("Beau") Brummell was far more than the fashion arbiter for Regency England. The first true dandy, and enormously influential, he helped overturn men's fashions in the early 1800s and pave the way for modern menswear. He also became an archetypal, appearanceobsessed star in a celebrity-crazed age—a phenomenon still familiar today. Brummell developed a close friendship with George, Prince of Wales (the Prince Regent and later King George IV), and became fashion and etiquette adviser to the prince and his court. His influence spread widely both in England and France.

Modern menswear

Said to have been tall and fair, Brummell probably justified his nickname. His fastidiousness means that he is often seen as the instigator of overly fussy fashions, but the reverse is true. Eighteenthcentury aristocratic menswear included lavish fabrics, white stockings, ruffles and buckles, three-cornered hats, and fragrance. Fashions were simplifying by Brummell's time, but he cemented and extended this trend, sweeping obvious fussiness aside in favor of sombercolored, elegant restraint.

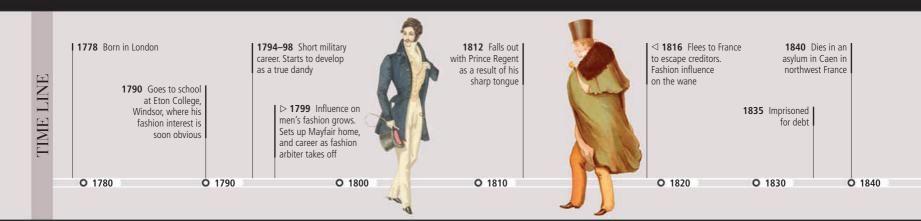

Brummell's bold simplicity was a take on the English country gentleman's sportswear, and fit with the neoclassical revolutionary spirit of the era. It featured a plain white linen shirt, immaculately bleached and starched; a fitted, pale waistcoat (vest); a short-fronted, double-breasted, swallow-tailed wool coat, dark blue or black; fitted pantaloon pants rather than knee breeches; a white linen neck cloth tied showily (Brummell often fastened it in a "waterfall" of flowing layers); and a top hat. Brass coat buttons were the only gaudy detail. This type of outfit had become standard by the 1820s and 30s, and what Brummell popularized with his pants-jacket-flamboyant neckwear combination was none other than the original modern suit and tie.

Brummell's clean look also included close-cropped curls and a freshly washed face. He rejected fragrance because he washed daily, which was rare in Regency times. Scrupulous personal grooming was part of his code of etiquette, built on poise, excellence, and attention to detail. Brummell had his boots polished with champagne and rejected piles of neck clothes while dressing, until the creases fell in just the right place. One literary caricature based on Brummell suggests he was so fussy about perfect cut that one glover made the hands of his gloves, another the fingers, and a third one the thumbs.

Striking a pose

Dandyism is also an attitude of mind. Brummell affected a studied indifference, as if his simpler look was effortless (this parallels modern "cool" and the Chanel ethos—Coco was called "the female Beau Brummell"). Behind the facade of nonchalance, it took Brummell about six hours to get ready. Attitude was underpinned by expert cut and fit. Thanks to advances in textile-making during Brummell's lifetime, more flexible wool cloth was produced. It made a neatly cut fit much easier to achieve than in previous generations.

Brummel's fashion influence helped to establish London as the center of men's tailoring. His reputation for impeccable quality inspired Charles Worth, Aquascutum, and Tommy Nutter of Savile Row. In attitude and style, the dandy has lived on in Mick Jagger's 1960s and 70s suited look and more recently in Karl Lagerfeld's personal wardrobe.

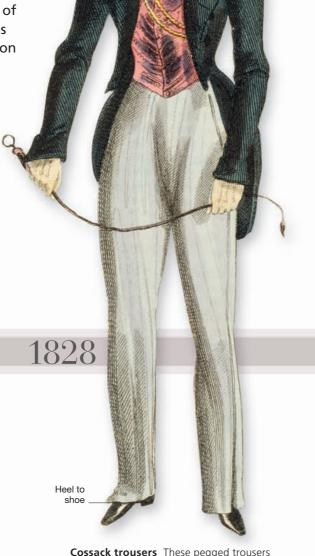

THE RISE OF THE DANDY

entlemen in this period prided themselves on the quality of their wool cloth and the tailoring and fit of their clothes. Earlier interest in elaborate brocaded and embroidered silks disappeared as the upper classes affected a country look. Men's coats were now of fine wool, in rural colors, and developed waist seams from the 1820s. Tailors perfected a range of coat styles for different occasions. Pantaloons and trousers gradually replaced breeches. The riding crop, cane, or umbrella, together with beaver hat, buckskin gloves, and riding boots, were now essential accessories for the man about town. Some of the most exacting Regency dressers, such as Beau Brummell, paid extraordinary attention to every last detail of their appearance. White cotton vests and fine white linen stocks and cravats were a hallmark of their style.

Double-breasted top coat Good-quality wool cloth tailored to fit, as shown here, looked stylish and protected the wearer from severe weather. The top coat was a forerunner of the top frock of the mid-19th century.

Ivory silk

Hair in tight

Stock and cravat

top hat

Cossack trousers These pegged trousers show Cossack influence. The single-breasted frock coat has puffed upper sleeves, echoing women's sleeve styles. The ruby velvet vest has a roll collar.

Stylish country look This morning walking ensemble to wear in town is influenced by riding apparel. The coat with standing collar has decorative buttons but slopes sharply away to a swallow tail, fastened with hook and eye.

Greatcoat This vest with padded chest has a slightly pointed waistline, echoing women's waistlines. Likewise, the greatcoat has wide lapels that emphasize shoulder width, and full coat skirts that make the waist look small by contrast.

THE RISE OF THE DANDY

Georgian royal blue The contrasting collar demonstrates the M-notch, which tailors introduced (along with N and V) to ease the intersection of collar with lapel. The white stock and cravat partially encase the chin.

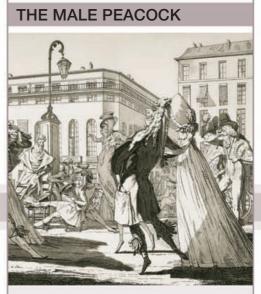

Special occasion outfit The dress coat, white vest with a woven or printed abstract floral pattern, together with white stock cravat (made all-in-one), white pantaloons or trousers, and stylish shoes, constituted an ideal wedding outfit.

Top hat and tails This dashing Frenchman is a stylish man about town, in evening dress coat, crisp white vest, and skin-tight pantaloons. The tailcoat waist seam aided by chest padding creates a "pouter pigeon" look.

Frock coat with military frogging This coat displays corded frogging for fastening and trimmings. Frogging is a military hussar reference, and reappears later on velvet smoking jackets. The velvet revers lay flat, the waist is nipped in, and the skirts are full.

Dandies were the successors of the decadent Macaronis and foppish Incroyables. They liked to eclipse their female companions with their finery, as shown by this cartoon. The man struts along like a male peacock, walking on tiptoe to make himself look taller and thinner, a gait that indicates extreme pride in his appearance. Dandies spent hours tying their stocks and cravats, wore jewels and perfume, had their hair carefully dressed, and were prepared to be laced into corsets to achieve a small waist. In total, they spent a small fortune on their wardrobe.

Parisian full dress A Parisian gentleman here wears full dress suitable for the opera. Tailcoat. pantaloons, light-colored checked vest and dress shirt, top hat, and dress shoes comprise an outfit of elegant sobriety and restraint.

REGENCY SPORTSWEAR

s leisure time increased in the early 19th century, men took up a variety of sports. Walking tours and excursions, hunting and hawking, angling, and ice skating were all popular pastimes. Riding dress and morning dress were frequently synonymous because riding was considered a morning sport, and any dashing young man would at least pretend an interest. Women's sporting dress mainly comprised riding habits. Women rode side saddle until the end of the century, so skirts were very long by 1840 to ensure their legs were fully covered as they rode. They also wore habits for traveling in open or closed carriages, for walking, and for boating. "Seaside bathing habits" were worn for promenading by the sea but not for immersion. Tailors and the burgeoning ready-towear industry worked hard to meet the demand for all the assorted outfits.

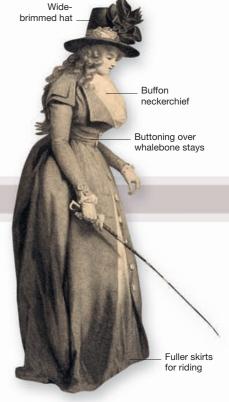

Morning outfit This outfit is a variation on Regency town wear, but the green coat marks it as a morning riding outfit, with tight pantaloons and flexible leather boots.

Coat lining

the horse

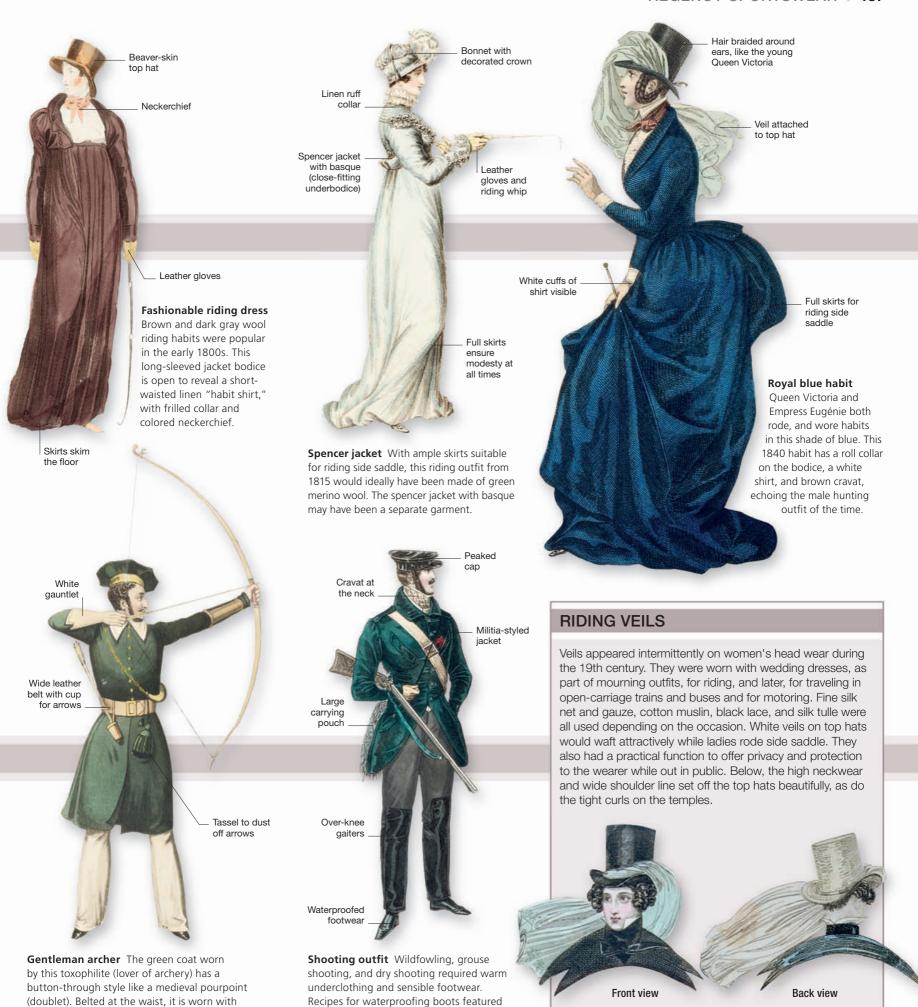

Riding habit Dating from the early 1790s, this riding habit buttons through the skirts like a man's greatcoat, and has large lapels and double shoulder flaps for added protection. Stays pull in at the waist.

Traveling coat A pardessus or overcoat could be worn over a stylish outfit. Superfine broadcloth was popular for such coats. The light color is suitable for summer but the wide shoulder cape will keep off the rain.

REGENCY SPORTSWEAR

beeswax, beef suet, resin, and balsam.

a soft-crowned cap and loose trousers.

188

1830-1837

PRINTS AND PATTERNS

number of recently evolved fashion features came to epitomize the new reign of Britain's King William IV and Queen Adelaide. The gigot sleeve had expanded to its fullest, and a lightly whaleboned corset was back in place. A tiny waistline was prized, with the waist at a more natural level. A small cushion pad sat in the small of the back. Separate pockets returned, and waist petticoats multiplied to support still fuller skirts. Patterned materials, particularly roller-printed China silks, soft cottons, and fine wools, were in vogue. Fashion was becoming accessible for the emergent middle classes, with import tax on silk reduced from 1825 and more ready-made goods available. Articles appeared in magazines to support home dressmaking. Girls were taught needlework skills such as piping and cartridge pleating. They stitched samplers to practice decorative borders and motifs, and alphabets for laundry marking. And they gathered a wedding trousseau in their bottom drawer.

Roller printing The fabric of this dress is roller printed by the mill-engraving technique, with two-color, wavy lines. More interest is created on sleeves and bodice through clever positioning of the printed material.

Pelisse-robe The pelisse (coat) of earlier decades developed into the pelisse-robe, which now fastened down the front with concealed hooks and eyes. Here, these are covered with decorative bows and tassels.

Square shawl A printed or woven border in the colors of an English country garden adorns this shawl worn folded diagonally, to wrap round bouffant sleeves. The outfit is completed with white kid gloves and green boots.

Rococo cloak Featuring a rococo design on figured material, this cloak with cape is trimmed and lined with darker wool or velvet material. The bonnet picks up the blue of the striped dress worn underneath.

of russet red wool

Artificial

daisies

on hat

PRINTS AND PATTERNS

Lightweight cotton This light dress is made from jaconet, a lightweight cotton material. The manche à la Montespan oversleeve with a large bouffant at the elbow is held by a muslin band. The lower sleeve, embroidered in foliage, forms a ruffle.

Walking dress Abstract floral weaves and prints on cream-colored sturdy cotton, lightweight wool, or challis silk and wool were popular. Gigot sleeves had a narrow tubular lining, and skirts were stiffened with a cotton lining.

Promenade dress This spring/summer afternoon promenade dress has roller-printed, pale turquoise stripes and a meandering convolvulus flower pattern. The range of color gradations with vegetable dyes was improving.

Sleeve plumpers padded upper sleeves

with feather down support

Wedding dress White weddings were popular from the early 1800s. The style was a restrained version of fashionable dress. This cream dress would have been worn with a veil of Brussels bobbin lace, orange blossom, and an embroidered linen fichu.

Collared shirt front with pleating

WEDDING SHOES

Ivory-colored shoes and boots like these survive in large numbers. They were usually wedding footwear, kept carefully after the special day, for sentimental reasons and because they would very quickly be ruined or worn out by wearing for ordinary, everyday tasks. Boots of silk, twilled cotton, and kid leather were typical.

190

1830-1838

TURBANS AND TIGHT LACING

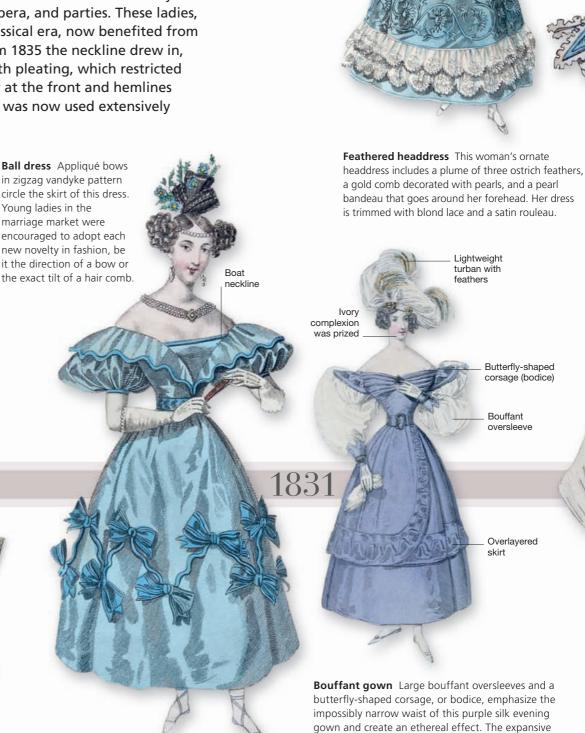

vening wear at the start of the 1830s had boat necklines that emphasized the champagne-bottle necks that were so admired. Turbans, an Oriental fashion formed of long scarves imported from India, fed the desire for exotic fabrics and an air of mystique gleaned from Romantic and Gothic novels. The turban became a favored style of older ladies for going out to dinner, opera, and parties. These ladies, who had sported bare arms in the neoclassical era, now benefited from transparent oversleeves for evening. From 1835 the neckline drew in, and the sleeve head was pulled down with pleating, which restricted movement. Bodices dipped down slightly at the front and hemlines returned to floor length. Crin (horsehair) was now used extensively in linen petticoats to stiffen them.

Boned corsets cut with triangular gores (panels) under the arm and on the hips created the desired hourglass figure. A center front steel busk and corded panels forced an erect form. Metal eyelets allowed for tighter lacing for a more fitted shape and dispensed with shoulder straps, to suit the wide boat necklines.

turban is worn at an angle.

Ornate

headdress

Necklace of hanging

pearls, en girandole

1830

Bunch of Lappets

of blond

Stylized pinecone motif A diaphanous overskirt covers this plain, ivory silk ball dress. Static images and surviving garments cannot fully convey the joy of these dresses in movement, but there is a sense of the flow of material here.

Modes de Paris This lady wears a long, mantleshaped pelerine with turn-down collar, trimmed with lace. The sleeves of the white dress would be tightly pleated below the shoulder line and puff out at the lower arm. A restrained, demure look was evolving.

All-enveloping cloak Under the silk and velvet cloak, the deep flounced skirt hem may show off the early use of machine-made lace. Turbans were soon to be relegated to costume dress, until a brief revival in the 1870s.

DEMURE DAY DRESSES

rom the late 1830s dresses expanded slowly but surely to ever wider proportions, enveloping the legs and ankles completely. Lower shoulder lines and tighter sleeves restricted the range of upper body movement, as did square shawls folded diagonally and draped around shoulders. Corsets, and often bodices, were stiffened with whalebone and had a long front busk pushing down on the embonpoint (plumpness of the stomach), creating a narrow waist. Full skirts, organ-pleated into the waist, were supported on multiple layers of petticoats, at least one of which was stiffened with crin, (from the French for horsehair). Dress skirts began to feature tiers and, by the early 1850s, were embellished with trimmings. The desired look, as shown in these fashion plates from France and England, was meek and submissive. Accessories such as beadwork bags, purses, and parasols were pretty and feminine.

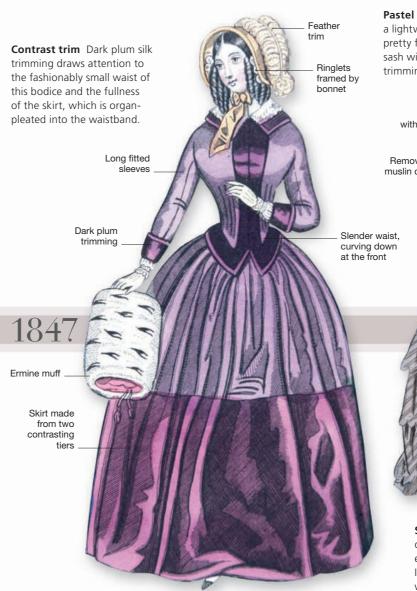

Girls at this time were dressed as miniature

Girls at this time were dressed as miniature versions of their mothers, with full dresses worn over two or more layers of petticoats to create a bell-shaped skirt. Young girls' skirts were shorter, however, and revealed pantalettes (linen or cotton leggings tied above the knee), which were edged with lace or pretty embroidery. When outdoors, these light-colored dresses were covered with darker overcoats made from heavier fabrics. Bonnets and gloves were also worn.

Young boys also wore dresses until they were "breeched" (first dressed in breeches or trousers), which was usually when they were between four and eight years old.

Pastel shades This summer dress in a lightweight fabric is trimmed with pretty frills. It is worn with a pastel yellow sash with matching ribbon and feather trimmings on the bonnet.

Striped shot taffeta This French dress has three flounces with pinked edges, which add volume to the skirt. It is trimmed at the neck and cuffs with white lace or embroidered linen.

DEMURE DAY DRESSES

Parasol poised "against the sun" (para sol)

Fullness of sleeve extends to wrist

Wrist

Blue-gray silk skirt

Spanish lace By this date, Spanish mantilla (veil-like headdress) lace could be machine made. This taffeta dress has generous mantillastyle lace trims.

> Headdress has muslin lappet features below the ears

> > 1844

Black lace trim

Pelisse robe This opulent blue coat, a color popular during the 1840s, is edged with luxurious ermine. Cording bows on the sleeves are matched at the waist by a belt that is finished with decorative tassels.

Flowers worn

under bonnet

Ermine for warmth in Wide sleeves trimmed with cording bows

1840

winter

Tartan flounces This checked dress reflects the popularity of Queen Victoria's new Scottish palace, Balmoral, and the ensuing vogue for tartan. The flounces of the skirt are cut on the bias to create a diamond-shape pattern.

Wedding, confirmation, or party dress

The flounced sleeves and skirt with central diaper pattern panel are both trimmed with yellow ribbons and broderie anglaise. The hair is outlined with pink ribbon, in Italian style.

1840s, like the straw

Silk bonnet

bonnet here.

OPULENCE

France during Napoleon III's Second Empire (1852–1870) was a place of prosperity, quickly made fortunes, and rampant consumerism. Visitors flocked to see Baron Haussmann's transformation of Paris into a city of grand boulevards, and the theaters, opera houses, and new department stores buzzed with life. The favorite court painter, Franz Xaver Winterhalter, who painted the scene opposite, captured a glittering imperial life, providing powerful public relations for the regime.

At the center of this court life was Napoleon's striking, Spanish-born empress, Eugénie—a leading fashion icon of her day, whose patronage of designer Charles Frederick Worth made him the first real "dictator" of Paris fashion. Eugénie (fourth from the left) wears trimmings in purple, a color she loved. Purple was an expensive natural dye, suitable for royalty, when this was painted in 1855, but just one year later a synthetic dye was made and soon "mauve madness" swept Europe and the United States, fueled by Eugénie's example. The luxuriantly stylish court ladies, shown in tulle, taffeta, silk, muslin, lace, and ribbons, also display the newly fashionable crinolines, which became enormous during the Second Empire. In 1861 one English fashion magazine noted: "The Empress Eugénie['s] petticoats... stood out a great deal: and following her example, all the Paris Ladies are wearing their skirts very wide and ample."

66

Would you believe that, in the latter half of the nineteenth century, there are bearded milliners...who...take the exact dimensions of the highest titled women in Paris—robe them, unrobe them, and make them turn backward and forward before them?

CHARLES DICKENS, ALL THE YEAR ROUND, 1863

99

CRINOLINES

he new crinoline frame provided relief from wearing multilayered petticoats, but its buoyancy meant that long cotton drawers were now essential under linens. In the 1860s an oval frame shape evolved and box-pleated skirts gave way to gored panels, which provided a smoother fit over the frame. Bodices and skirts were often separate items, allowing alternate styles of bodice, and front-closure for convenience. With the availability of domestic sewing machines home dressmaking increased, as did the use of copious trimmings. Large frames were abandoned after 1867, skirts trailed and were gathered up internally with ties, forming a soft bustle. Then crinolettes and bustle pads took over.

Hair swept back under cap and streamers

Pagoda-

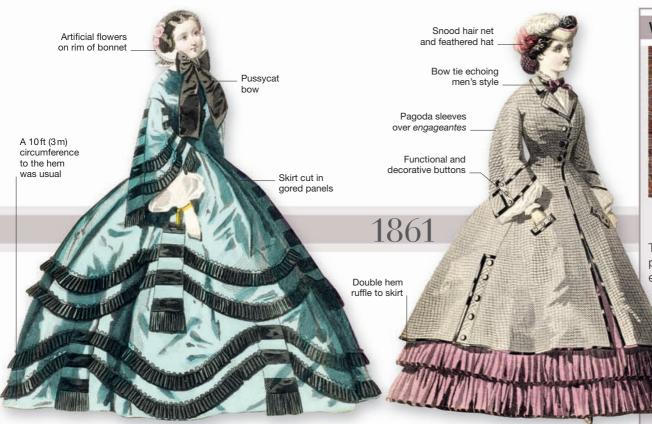

shaped

Matching wrist bracelets with cameos

Lace-edged handkerchief

1859

Visiting outfit This bodice and skirt has copious lengths of pleated, black fabric applied by sewing machine. Pagoda sleeves reveal engageantes (undersleeves) of cotton, cotton gauze, or lace that were detached for laundering.

Walking outfit The Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine was a fount of fashion advice, and gave patterns for bodices and coats like this paletot. Checked fabric was popular, and the outfit clearly borrows elements from menswear.

WOOL AND SILK WEAVES

Machine-woven silk daisies (apron detail)

The range of materials and complex patterning available to women by 1860 was extraordinary. The textile industry in Britain vied with Indian manufacturers to satisfy increasing demand and changing tastes. Edinburgh, Crayford in Essex, Norwich, and later Paisley produced wool shawls. Huge, double-square, long shawls were folded in half and then diagonally draped across the large skirts. Jacquard looms could produce wide lengths of woven silk to look like embroidery that could be used for dress skirts, and accessories such as aprons, as here. The subtlety of color gradation, and accuracy in depicting specific flowers, are quite remarkable.

Tartan dress This day dress is of three-color checked wool: red, pale green, and heather blue. A horsehair pad supports the back fullness of the skirt. Velvet rickrack (zigzag) braid trim suggests a collar. Rosettes were a popular feature in 1867-70. Royal blue This silk moiré outfit has separate bodice and skirt—the front-closure bodice made getting dressed much easier. Here a small crinolette frame gives buoyancy and, with the squared bodice and apron front, anticipates 1870s styles.

Madame Vignon creation The bodice sleeves on this magenta, silk outfit are slashed in Italian Renaissance style. The skirt, with mock apron and peplum overskirt, trails along the ground, and paves the way for the onset of bustled skirts.

DESIGNER

CHARLES WORTH

orth's reputation as the father of haute couture—designer-led, custom-fit "high dressmaking"—was well earned. He dominated the Paris scene for the entire second half of the 19th century and made the city the couture capital. Shaping the high-end industry we know today, Worth led a general move in 19th-century Paris away from tailor-dressmakers toward designers whose creations bore their name.

An Englishman abroad

The initial irony was that Monsieur Worth was an Englishman. When family financial problems forced him out to work, he swapped his Lincolnshire home for an apprenticeship at London drapers Swan & Edgar at the age of 13. In 1845 he moved to Paris to Gagelin's, a dress accessories shop where he made a major mark, winning a medal for a stunning embroidered train at the 1855 Exposition Universelle in Paris. By 1858 he had established his own maison with business partner Otto Bobergh at 7 rue de la Paix.

Worth combined creative, impeccably fitted and made garments with astute business sense, especially the canny cultivation of an aura of exclusivity. With a discreet gilt sign outside, his maison featured a series of enticing salons, including a mirrored one with dressed wooden mannequins arranged so that customers would compare their own dress unfavorably.

Against the backdrop of the heady prosperity of Napoleon III's Second Empire (1852–1870), Worth's enterprise flourished. His wife's relentless networking helped. By the 1860s Pauline, Princess Metternich, the wife of the Austrian Ambassador to France was a customer. She introduced him to the fashionable French Empress Eugénie. It was a short step to securing her patronage.

Enduring values

Worth's creations included frothy ball gowns and outfits combining taffeta, velvet, and his beloved Lyons silk, with intricate detailing such as wood beads wrapped in silk thread. Midcentury, his work featured the oversized crinolines for which the man and the era are so well known. He pioneered the flat-fronted, bustle-backed skirt silhouette that took over after the empire fell in 1870.

Other innovations included a knee-length tunic worn over a long skirt, the shorter crinoline, ideal for walking, and the gigot sleeve popular in the late 1800s—one of many historical (in this case, Elizabethan) influences culled from National Gallery visits during his London years. Worth was first to show whole seasonal collections in advance, to use live mannequins to display garments, and to produce pieces that were copied in France and sold worldwide in addition to exclusive one-offs. Concerned about copyright issues, he pushed for the couture association that is still going today. After his death in 1895, House of Worth and its values went forward under Charles

Frederick's sons, Gaston-Lucien and

Jean-Philippe, and beyond, taking in glamorous 1920s cocktail and evening dresses along the way before closing in the 1950s.

Worth's influence has been far reaching, from Poiret to Bellville Sassoon to Valentino.

△ VISITING CARD IN FANCY DRESS c.1860 Worth had the gift of self promotion and helped turn a trade into an art form. The first male style arbiter with international superstardom, his word was law. Customers deferred to him rather than the other way around.

□ DEBUTANTE'S BALL DRESS

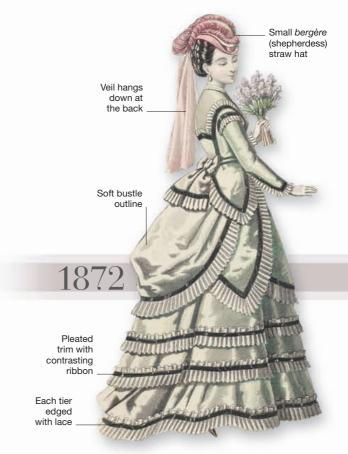

This satin gown with iridescent taffeta is decorated with silk roses and petals and accessorized with an ostrich fan. Worth's efficiency and talent with sumptuous materials made him equal to the task of producing the 1,000 or so lavish gowns that might be needed for just one imperial ball.

1851 His designs 1857-58 Opens 1870 Second □ 1895 Dies in Paris; 1838 Starts apprenticeship at win prizes at London's French Empire House of Worth his own ladies' Swan & Edgar, London Great Exhibition fashion business ends. Splits from continues under his sons, making dresses on the rue de business partner la Paix □ 1860s A period Otto Bobergh and such as this, worn by 1825 Charles 1845 Takes work with 1852 French Second of acclaim and continues alone. renowned Parisian Frederick London silk mercers Empire begins—an success—creates all Prospers with rich beauty Countess Worth born in Lewis & Allenby. Moves era of wealth and of Empress Eugénie's American and Bourne to Paris to work at dress lavish dress evening and state Russian clients Lincolnshire accessories shop, wear from 1864 Maison Gagelin O 1820 O 1840 O 1860 O 1880 O 1895 200

1870-1879

SOFT BUSTLES AND FISHTAILS

ashions by the 1870s were softer and more delicate, with pastel coloring and frivolous trimmings and decoration. Bodice necklines were square, with exposed décolleté for evening. Dresses had three-quarter-length sleeves with lace cuffs, or could be sleeveless for evening wear. Aided by the sewing machine (now becoming a desirable acquisition for home use), fabric was draped and layered around the hips, creating an overskirt with apron and panniers that was supported in the small of the back by a straw or horsehair understructure, called a soft bustle. By 1875 colors were deeper, a more streamlined shape was emerging, with a smoothly fitted bodice, and the waist and hips were more defined. By 1876 dresses were shaped in a Princess line (with an all-in-one princess petticoat), often with a cuirasse over bodice. The upper fullness of earlier skirts had moved lower at the back, forming a fishtail train that was delightful to look at but complex to create and needed skill to manage.

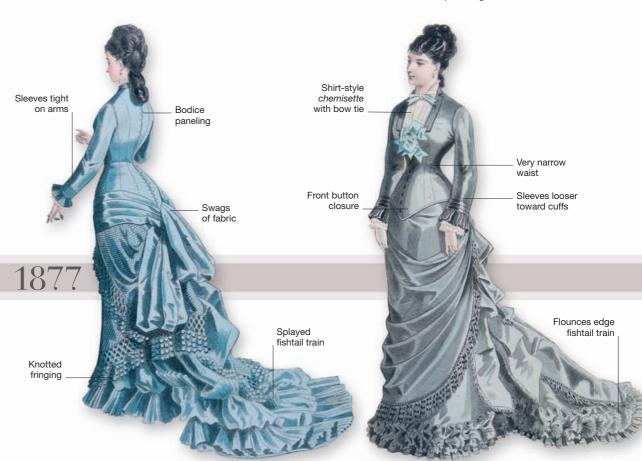

Wedding dress This triple-tiered main skirt is overlaid with 1770s-style polonaise overskirts, with each layer outlined in a dark trim. The bergère straw hat is perched jauntily on hair—real or false—that is piled high on the crown.

SOFT BUSTLES

To support the fullness at the top of the skirt at the back, a framework known as a soft bustle was worn. This could be made from a variety of materials, including meshed horsehair, wadding, and straw, or even improvised with scrunched-up newspaper. The example shown comprises covered watchspring steel, half hoop cording for the lower skirt, moire fabric, and a wavy braided outline along the hem. It fastens at the front of the body with buttons.

Fishtail train This skirt has copious drapery, which would have hampered movement. The train would swish from side to side as the wearer walked and turned. A ribbon on the train's end could be attached to the wrist to lift the fabric for ease of maneuver.

Cuirasse bodice The cuirasse (from the French for armor) bodice helped create a small waist. It was aided underneath by a princess petticoat and back-laced corset, which by now had steels and a front-opening spoonbill busk.

BUSTLE SKIRT

onsisting of a tightly fitted bodice and long, trained skirt, this two-piece ensemble of striped, apricot silk displays the fashionable silhouette and longer bodice of 1874–75. Skirts narrowed, and volume shifted to the back to form a bustle. A bustle pad worn under the skirt provided the support. This style of skirt takes its inspiration from the 18th-century polonaise and is constructed in a similar way. Tapes attached to inside of the skirt allow it to be gathered up at the back. The wearer could also choose to loosen the tapes and have the skirts long, achieving the look of the alternative back and side views below.

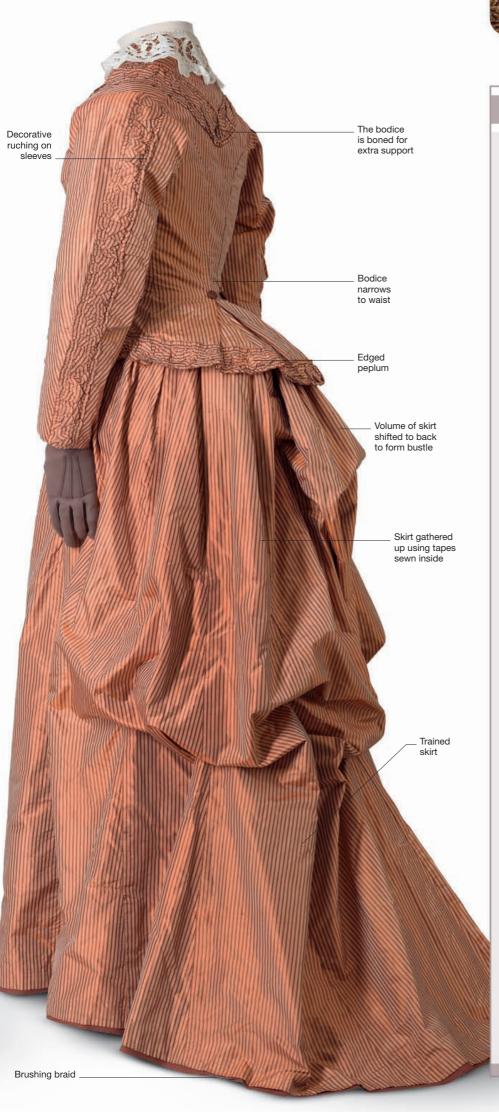

BACK VIEW WITH SKIRT DOWN

BACK VIEW WITH SKIRT UP

SIDE VIEW WITH SKIRT DOWN

IN DETAIL

⊲ RUCHING TO SLEEVES

Strips of the silk have been ruched and applied as decoration to the sleeves and bodice. The advent of the sewing machine enabled the increasingly complicated decorations and trimmings fashionable at this time. The machine stitching is visible on the sleeves.

⊲ FRONT OF PEPLUM BODICE

The bodice is fastened at the center front with five metal hooks and eyes for a close fit around the narrow, corseted waist. The bodice extends to a short peplum, which is shaped over the hips into a pointed front and finished with a ruched band of fabric.

⊲ BUTTON DETAIL

A pair of brown, fabric-covered buttons trim the center back waist and mark the top of two deep pleats, which splay over the volume of the bustle. This simple detail draws influence from masculine tailoring and anticipates women's fashions in the following decades.

\triangleleft POCKET

From the 1840s dresses began to have pockets sewn into the skirt. This skirt has an internal pocket lined with glazed cotton, a durable fabric suitable for holding items. The lining discreetly matches the tone of the dress.

\triangleleft HEM

This contrast binding, which was known as brushing braid, was used to finish the hem of the skirt. It would have helped to strengthen and protect the silk as the train trailed on the ground. The brushing braid could be brushed to remove dust and dirt at the end of the day before the outfit was put away.

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE BUSTLE

dark colors were used effectively in exciting

False vest fronts

1888

y 1880 there was no discernible bustle, and fishtail trains were rejected. Cotton combinations—chemise and drawers—were worn under the main outfit, and were supplemented by knit wool combination garments that combated a series of cold winters. An extremely tight, steel-boned corset secured the small waist that was being increasingly admired and forced a rigid, upright posture. Further boning reinforced the dress bodice. A new bustle shape gradually developed from 1881-83, this time stiff and angular. From 1883–87 the bustle grew, and stuck out at right angles, eventually tilting over into a chicken tail feather flourish before disappearing.

The majority of garments were now made by sewing machine, and many fabrics were colored with synthetic dyes.

Coordinating bonne > layered cape collar

> > Fan pleating

Feathered

cap tied under chin

mourning dress

Very little shows-only face

flesh

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE BUSTLE

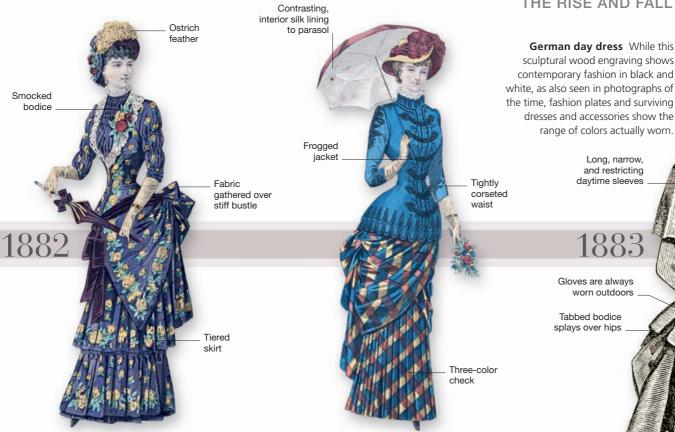

German day dress While this sculptural wood engraving shows contemporary fashion in black and dresses and accessories show the Gloves are always worn outdoors Tabbed bodice splays over hips range of colors actually worn.

Long, narrow, and restricting daytime sleeves

Disposition patterning Attractive floral prints or weaves à la disposition—with different patterns in the same colorway, used togetherwere popular. Forehead fringes appeared in high society, but were disallowed for maids.

Silk poppies attached to corsage

Silk flowers

Braid-trimmed scalloped hem with solvents may have been an option.

Ball dress This design from Madrid would require a skillful dressmaker to swathe spotted fabric over the hips, attach silk flowers, and make the rigid understructures of whalebone and steel disappear.

Evening dress This Spanish dress and bodice are exquisitely embroidered. The trained overgarment adds warmth and elegance. This fashion plate, along with the three to the left, show the range of styles in Spain in a single year.

sticks and guards

206

1890-1899

HIGH RUFFS AND WASP WAISTS

omen's wear in the last decade of the Victorian era was characterized by high collars, held in place by collar stays, and stiff steel boning in long-line bodices and corsets. Mid-decade, tiny wasp waists were emphasized by the most enormous sleeves and pyramid skirts with smooth fronts, which had pleating concentrated at center back. In mainstream fashions, the ruff, corseting, padded sleeves, and coneshaped skirts consciously recalled Elizabethan fin-de-siècle styling. Ball dresses were décolleté (had a low neckline), but for day wear barely any flesh was revealed below chin level. Dark colors persisted but were challenged by a lighter palette anticipating Edwardian pinks and creams. Colored stockings and high heels were popular. The use of exotic bird feathers and even whole birds on hats had become such an issue that the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds was founded, to campaign against any but ostrich feathers being used in the future.

Leg-of-mutton

Short, boxy capes replaced the 1880s dolman capes, once the bustle had disappeared. Silk brocade was popular for opera wear, to cover décolletage, and might be trimmed with jet, French jet (glass), lace, appliqué, braid, fur, or feathers. For day wear, wool cloth capes trimmed with braid or appliqué detail coexisted alongside traveling jackets and full-length coats. They were certainly easier to wear over the large, leg-of-mutton sleeves of 1893–96. Black and red were the most fashionable colors.

Dressed for evening The shoulder puff heralded a new focus on sleeves. Petticoat silks were tin-weighted to make them sit properly, and rustled as the wearer moved. Here, delicate embroidery, worked on fine net or gauze, overlays the skirt.

Crescent

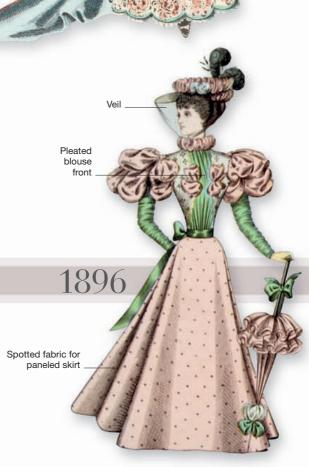

"Diana" headdress 1890

Trained

overdress

Hourglass shape Warp-printed chine silk gives this outfit a particular luster. Enormous, leg-of-mutton sleeves, bows along skirt seams, a defined V shaping to the bodice, and "Elizabethan" ruff typify the fin-de-siècle style.

Shoulder puffs

Tight-corseted

Gilt and colored bead

embroidery on net

Summer blouse and skirt This veiled hat would have been secured with decorative hat pins that pierced into the top knot of swept-up hair. The ruff encouraged good deportment, always required in Victorian women.

Pink satin These sleeves are leg-of-mutton shape and the gored skirt has box-pleated fullness at the center back. The high-necked bodice, trimmed with black velvet, jet, and lace, is attached to the skirt with hooks and eyes.

Traveling This skirt has characteristic 1890s detailing in its diagonal trim, and the checked overcape has echoes of an epaulette shape in its squared shoulder line. The wool cloth cape is lined with fur.

Spring afternoon dress The Edwardian era is near, and the straight-fronted corset is now in evidence. This dress is made of delicate printed silk, linen, or light muslin, with lawn ruffles, and a wonderful tiered skirt design.

BODICE AND SKIRT

EPTION

This elaborate house dress, designed by American hourglass shape of the 1890s. The dress features broad and light-catching silk damask emphasize a tiny waist, couturier Kate R. Cragmile in 1891, reflects the the exaggerated bustle of the 1880s to the rounded while the vest and overdress show the influence of The contrasting colors and textures of deep velvet shoulders on leg-of-mutton sleeves, a very narrow change in women's fashionable dress from waist, and a skirt gently widening to the hemline.

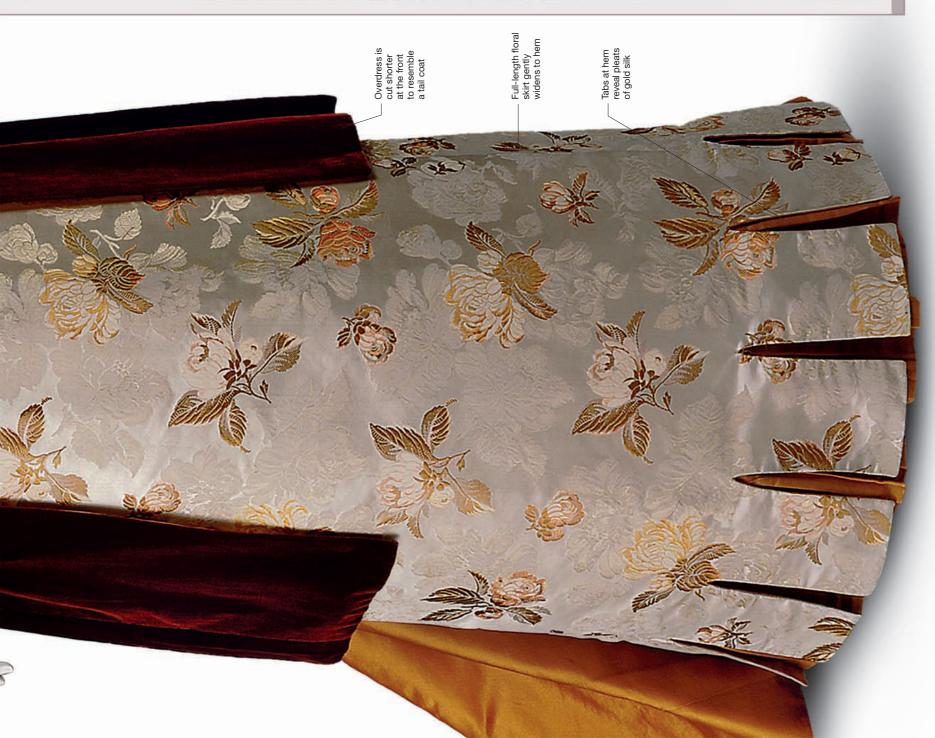

of lace at the neck—a jabot-refers back to The decorative ruffle the late 1600s and draws attention △ JABOT to the width of the bodice, while also upper part of the concealing the dress closure.

The leg-of-mutton sleeves are wide and puffed at the shoulder. Volume through the upper arms is amplified by deep tucks into the inside seam.

△ DAMASK SILK

dress fabric is a complex colorful roses in green silk and gold thread. pattern of silver-gray weave combining a damask self-colored roses overlaid with a brocade of more The patterned silk into the waist. The dress back, where it is pleated would probably have been worn with a small Although reduced from the exaggerated bustle remains at the center fullness of the skirt of the 1880s, the pad underneath.

△ FULL BACK

adds length at the back A fairly short gathered of the dress, and is train of golden silk SMALL TRAIN

△ SHAPED SLEEVES

FORMAL WEAR FOR MEN

entlemen's formal dress became more somber in shape and tone in the mid-19th century. The three-piece suit emerged in the 1860s, although it was still some years off becoming a uniform of business respectability. Fibers for all garments were still natural, but advanced machinery made more intricate weaves and color combinations possible. The sewing machine helped the ready-made trade, while tailors' manuals with patterns for varying styles of coat proliferated. In leisurewear there were color combinations and contrasts to delight: embroidered accessories, an intriguing glimpse of luxurious lining fabric, or a jaunty pair of striped, checked, or plaid trousers. Stylish items of day wear—top hat, cravat, and pantaloons—became reserved for formal wear, while bowler hats and ties supplanted them for day. Fall-front trousers gave way to fly fronts.

Figured, checked, or embroidered with ribbon work, decorative wool and silk vests added an accent of color to a man's outfit. Brides-to-be might embroider them in canvas work for their grooms. While the fronts were decorative, the backs, covered by a jacket, were of plain cotton with an adjustable strap.

Figured fabric

Flower garden embroidery

Woven check

FORMAL WEAR FOR MEN

vest, with an overcoat in dashing quality and the fit is expert.

bronzed tan, a dye color favored in the 1870s. The materials are of superb around 1859 and was well established as lounging or morning wear by 1869. Light-colored trousers increasingly indicated casual dress, as did the straw boater.

a tie cravat, velvet vest, and light-colored trousers. The jacket edges are turned and stitched; earlier jacket edges were left raw with firmly woven and milled cloth.

BEAUTY

After 250 years, Japanese isolation from the West during the Shogun era ended, and the impact on Western fashion, art, and culture was swift. Inspired by the display of Japanese art at the International exhibition of 1862, members of the Aesthetic movement (1862–1900) with its "cult of beauty" embraced all things Japanese. E. Desoye opened a store of Japanese curios in Paris and in 1875 Arthur Lazenby Liberty sold Japanese goods at his store, Liberty and Co. on Regent Street, London, alongside a comprehensive range of fabrics and artifacts from the Far East.

Japanese prints based on conventionalized forms of the natural world, such as flowers, birds, dragonflies, and butterflies, along with free-flowing garments, appealed to the bohemian style makers of London, in particular Aesthetes such as Oscar Wilde and his wife Constance. Fashions such as classic Greek gowns or "Athenes," Japanese kimonos, Indian pajamas, and embroidered coats from China and Japan created an immediate contrast with the established, traditional Victorian dress of corsets, crinolines, and bustles, and a restricted and structured silhouette. At the Divan Japonais nightclub in Paris, fans and silks festooned the walls, and customers were attended to by waitresses dressed in kimonos. In 1876 Claude Monet painted his wife wearing a kimono in a painting entitled "La Japonaise."

One should either be a work of art, or wear one.

OSCAR WILDE, 1894

Facsimile of a chromoxylograph by Wilhelm Greve after Katsukawa Shunsho, 1776.

214

1870-1900

SPORTSWEAR FOR THE NEW WOMAN

omen's day wear was adapted for sports from archery to croquet and boating to tennis, while still preserving a fashionable waistline, sleeve shape, and skirt fullness. Drawers worn under petticoats enabled freedom of movement without fear of embarrassment. Knit underclothing such as Dr. Jaeger's sanitary underwear, available from the mid-1880s, cotton combination garments that avoided bulky waists, and specifically designed sports corsets were a boon. The breathable cotton-mesh fabric Aertex was invented in 1888, and less restrictive corsets were made that incorporated this mesh to allow better air flow. Women supporters of the Pre-Raphaelite and Aesthetic movements had already stopped wearing corsets and wire understructures. While the new woman spurned fancy fabrics, burgeoning department stores sold silk brocades and plush velvet gowns in joyful colors, and society women found themselves with an abundance of choice.

Women in artistic circles, such as the Pre-Raphaelite muse Jane Morris, flouted rigid dress conventions, pioneering a freer style. Dress reform societies also campaigned for healthier, less structured forms of dress. Their dress styles recalled medieval (prehooped skirt) days. They borrowed relaxed styles such as the early sack back, in which fabric fell unfettered from nape to hem.

Riding habit Made of soft wool, this jacket has a long row of tiny buttons to fasten tightly over a corset. Riding tails sat neatly upon late 1880s bustles. The top hat perches high on the crown on frizzed hair.

Bustle dress This sensible wool dress in brown, c.1870–75, was suitable for country walking, traveling, croquet, archery, and picnicking, all popular female pursuits. Going-away outfits were often of a similar style and color.

Lawn tennis dress Although earlier tennis dresses (c.1875–85) had aprons with pockets for the balls, this 1897 fashion advertisement for the new season offers little concession to sports. Punch magazine joked that women should have a handicap.

SPORTSWEAR FOR THE NEW WOMAN

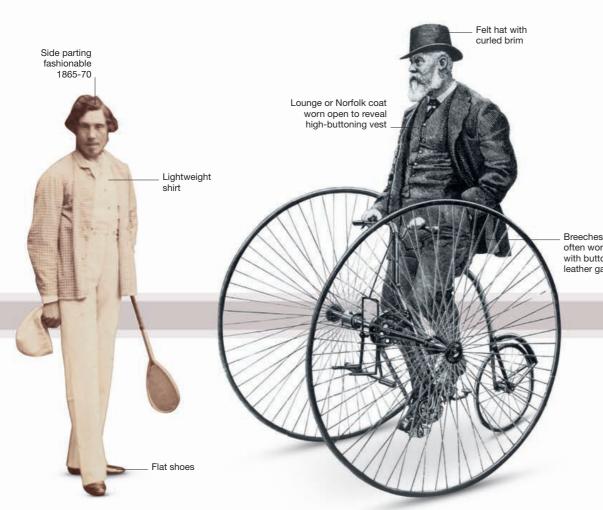

Bathing dress Sailor suits influenced bathing dress, hence the sailor collar and stripes. This wool serge garment, c.1900, is an all-in-one, like combination undergarments. There may have been a modesty skirt originally.

Nautical Blue and white striped fabrics as well as children's sailor suits gave a nautical flavor to dress, and were worn for regattas, yachting, boating, and seaside promenading. The draping and soft vertical pleating over the bustle of this dress from 1885-88 suggest informality.

Walking suit Tailored by the French designer Jacques Doucet, this no-frills linen suit, from c.1894, reflects a move toward the sobriety of men's suits. Women now joined men in hill walking and mountain climbing.

MEN OF ACTION

hile men's suits settled into sobriety and uniformly dark coloring, their leisurewear for sports and country pursuits became more flamboyant and revealing. Garments were adapted for the purpose of health-oriented exercise, using stretchy materials such as jersey knit. Drapers who supplied cloth and ready-to-wear shirts began to focus increasingly on sportswear for pursuits such as tennis, boating, mountaineering, and golf. Men wore plus fours for golf from the 1860s. From the mid-century French companies and Britain's Aquascutum and Burberry developed lined, twilled cotton fabrics for waterproof outerwear for the "huntin,' shootin,' fishin'" fraternity. Shepherd plaid, a black-and-white check, was popular in the 1890s. Sports clubs and activities brought industrialists, military men, artists, and writers together, in pursuit of healthy bodies to fuel the mind. J.M. Barrie, author of Peter Pan, even had his own cricket team from 1887.

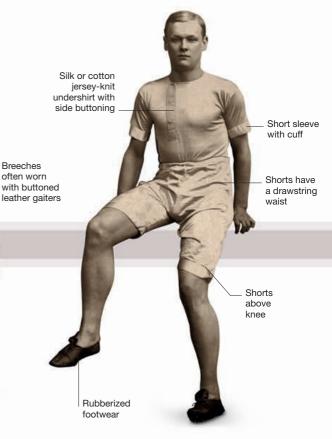

Tennis clothes "Whites" were established for tennis and cricket as early as the late 1860s. This tennis outfit consists of a lightweight linen jacket, now called a blazer, with trousers, cotton shirt, and a cap.

Cycling suit The Earl of Albermarle, president of the National Cyclists' Union, rides a tricycle, c.1880. He wears a wool three-piece suit consisting of single-breasted jacket, vest, and breeches that finish just below the knee.

Paletot jacket The paletot for men hung loosely from the shoulders and was sleeved. Checked and tartan wool linings, as in this example of c.1838, provided warmth for country clothing. They later became a fashion statement.

Team sports Men undertook football, rugby, and rowing in variations of undershirt and drawers. This sportsman, c.1890, may be a member of Cambridge University's rowing team. His short-sleeved undershirt precedes the T-shirt.

lightweight, and washable. London's to British expatriates.

Army and Navy Stores supplied outfits

Wide-brimmed

THE LEOTARD

Prussian Eugen Sandow became a celebrity of British music halls in the 1890s as a bodybuilder, extolling the virtues of weight-bearing exercise on the physique. He wore only a stretch-fabric leotard. The garment was named after Jules Léotard, a trapeze artist. Léotard himself wore what he called a maillot, but in 1886, some years after his death, the term "leotard" was coined for the skin-tight stretch garment he had made his own. The leotard could be long or short sleeved, with a low or high neck. Sandow wore his with a belt and gladiator-style sandals. Earlier sports such as pugilism (a form of boxing) had already seen men bare to the chest, wearing only light-colored breeches. Strong man Eugen Sandow wings, and even live fireflies in net bags, were used to create a suitable macabre or exotic atmosphere.

THEMED COSTUMES

hemed costume parties enabled the late Georgians and Victorians to have fun with dressing up. Like a game of charades, partygoers had to guess who their fellow guests were dressed as. Esoteric costumes absorbed influences from history, mythology, theater, literary characters, and the Orient, reworked by dressmakers in imaginative and extravagant ways. Some partygoers wore costumes that family members had brought back from abroad, or retrieved treasured ancestral outfits from the attic. Others were inspired by sources such as Arden Holt's 1887 catalogue of Fancy Dresses Described, which was sold through Debenham and Freebody's the department store. These featured themed costumes as diverse as a foppish Incroyable, a witch, and a hornet. Natural materials such as beetle wing cases and butterfly

ROYAL DRESSING UP

England's 1897 Devonshire House Ball was themed around allegorical or historical costume pre-1820. The Duke of York went as the 3rd Earl of Cumberland, with embroidered Genoa velvet pourpoint, sleeves and mantle, steel gorget (plate armor collar), crimson velvet trunks, high boots, and felt hat with three feathers. The Duchess was Marguerite de Valois, in pale blue satin, with a Medici old lace collar, and copious pearls and diamonds.

Middle Eastern This 1830 figure wears a Persianstyle, knee-length vest of metal thread over a white lawn shirt and under a rich blue tunic trimmed with gold braid. Vandyking (zigzag borders) often indicated a themed costume in the 19th century.

Feathered headdress to Checkered, padded match mantle Slashed Elizabethanstyle bodice Striped scarf worn as sash Floral design Padded breeches Dancing Eastern Masque costume This couple from 1803 are in masguerade dress, with eye disguise. The woman wears an exotic Middle Eastern sash and the hem of her dress is hand embroidered. He wears a Late Tudor-style jerkin and padded trunk hose. Early Victorian Antique brocade The Eglinton Tournament of 1839 was a romantic extravaganza with medieval jousting and banquets. This lady, shown in her costume for the Scottish event, wears a Queen Henrietta Mariastyle dress with a silk brocade overdress.

Powdered wig like those of c.1775-80

THEMED COSTUMES

devil is dictated by contemporary fashion, with its tight corseting, bustle-shaped skirt, and high heels. The short petticoat length revealing the calves was extremely daring

Faust is the inspiration behind this French costume. The look was popularized by Sir Henry Irving, who played him in a similarly vivid red costume at the Lyceum Theatre in London from 1885-88

DOLLY VARDEN STYLE

This look mimicked the 18th-century bergère (shepherdess) style, with its straw bonnet and looped-up polonaise skirt over a quilted petticoat. Dolly Varden was a coquettish character in Charles Dickens's Barnaby Rudge, published in 1841 but set in 1780. This music sheet cover depicts a woman in a Dolly Varden style costume.

LA BELLE EPOQUE AND THE JAZZ AGE

1901-1928

LABELLE EPOQUE AND THE JAZZ AGE

 $oldsymbol{\gamma}$ implification and in particular the idea that "less is more" governed the development of fashion in the early 20th century. The old way of dressing was only abandoned after a final extravagant flourish, which found shape in Paul Poiret's colorful Orientalist designs and Lucile's gossamer creations. The beginning of World War I accelerated the trend toward less restrictive clothing, as many women became used to wearing practical uniforms. After the War the popularity of elaborate hairpieces and many layers of flimsy fabric diminished in favor of practical, shorter skirts and sweaters. The figure of the static, hourglass woman was being replaced by the energetic, boyish "flapper." Always on the move—either dancing the night away or racing around in an automobile—the new style represented youth, fashion, and fun.

The suntan era

Men and women increasingly revealed their bodies, as clothes shrank and became less structured. The fashionable set went to Palm Beach and Malibu in the US, or the Riviera in France, to acquire a suntan and to flaunt their beach pajamas and summer suits. Different outerwear also meant changes to previously restrictive undergarments—fewer pieces of less-rigid underwear became possible. New designers were paticularly adept at picking up the trend toward increased movement and practicality in fashion. French designers Chanel and Patou both started their Houses just before World War I, and promoted clothes for the active woman, in which knitwear featured prominently.

New icons

Royalty and aristocracy still played a significant role in setting trends. In Britain, Prince Edward initiated and popularized new styles. Following his investiture as Prince of Wales in 1910, the 16-year-old heir to the throne soon became a major fashion icon, accelerating the move toward less structured garments. He also popularized the use of garments such as Fair Isle knitted vests and plus fours off the golf course. With the rise of Hollywood during the second decade of the century, movie stars such as Douglas Fairbanks, Rudolph Valentino, and Louise Brooks began to supplant high-society figures in setting trends.

1901-03 1904-07 1908-10

c.1903

J.C. Penney, the American retail magnate, opens his first department store in Wyoming.

1908

Mannequin parades are introduced at the House of Lucile in London, and become very popular.

Bobbed or short hair for women is introduced to Paris fashion

Mariano Fortuny patents his pleating and dyeing process. His long, clinging sheath dresses, known as Delphos. are made with a single, vibrantly colored piece of silk. Devotees include stars such as Eleanora Duse, Isadora Duncan, Cleo de Merode, and Liane de Pougy.

The straight-fronted corset, also known as the swan-bill, S-bend, or "health corset", is popular from the turn of the century until the 1910s. It forces the torso forward and makes the hips protrude. removing pressure from the abdomen and creating an S-shaped silhouette.

▲ Women work in a factory that makes rayon underwear Artificial silk made from viscose (known as "rayon" commercially in the UK. It reaches the US in 1910.

Paul Poiret designs a range of loose-fitting, Orientalinspired dresses, paving the way for modern dress.

▼ A Paul Poiret creation

■ A straight-fronted corset worn under the dress provides the distinctive S-shape silhouette

Madame Paquin introduces the empire-waist dress in imitation of the fashion of the Regency period

■ Dancing the Charleston in cloche hats atop Chicago's Sherman Hotel

The designers have forgotten that there are women inside the dresses...Clothes must have a natural shape.

promote the style as "patriotic" and "practical."

COCO CHANEL, 1928

99

1920-22 | 1923-25 | 1926-28 1911–13 1913 1920 The first modern brassière The 19th Amendment to the The Broadway show Runnin' Wild includes the popular tune "The Charleston." It becomes is patented by New York US Constitution gives women socialite, Mary Phelps Jacob. the right to vote. Some believe that the women's Old-fashioned corsets are a dance craze, requiring no longer suitable to wear rights movement affected low-waisted dresses with fullness at the hemline to kick under new lighter, less fashion, promoting formal garments. androgynous figures and the death of the corset ▲ The Munition Girls by English The tango arrives in most painter Alexander Stanhope Forbes The diplomatic visit of The ideal haircut for showcasing cloche hats—the fashionable Eton crop—is first mentioned in The Times. European capitals. Jean Edward, Prince of Wales to 1914 Paquin designs gowns to be the US popularizes a kind worn for dancing the tango, World War I begins, ushering of short breeches for men – plus fours. It is popularized by Josephine which are shown during in an era of darker colors and simple cuts. Women take "dress parades" at popular Baker, an African-American "Tango Teas" held in London. over men's jobs, accelerating expatriate singer, dancer, and the trend toward practical entertainer, who becomes an overnight sensation at the Folies Bergère music hall. garments. Plus fours were four inches longer than the traditional knickerbockers worn by men Fashion designers make up ▼ Tango shoes are designed Invented by Giden Sundback a large number of the artists in 1913 the zipper is finally patented in 1917. It is first with crisscrossing straps who display their luxury used for closing rubber boots wares at the "Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs et Industriels Modernes" in Paris, which gave art deco its name. Outrigs BURBERRY The Prohibition Era begins in Burberry is commissioned the US, but is largely ignored by fashionable young men to adapt army officer's coats for the trenches. The trench and women of the time. "Flappers" dance the night away to jazz tunes at illegal fashion icon Josephine Baker, speakeasies by Jean Chassaing ▶ Print advertisement for military clothing made BURBERRYS et LONDON 1922 Coco Chanel opens a Howard Carter and George Fashion magazine La Gazette boutique in the French Herbert, 5th Earl of du Bon Ton shows full skirts seaside resort, Deauville. Carnavon, discover the tomb with hemlines above the ankle. They are called of Ancient Egyptian ruler lacktriangle The Chanel logo soon the "war crinoline" by Tutankhamun. Fashion becomes established the fashion press, who designers are inspired to use motifs from ancient cultures in their creations.

SUITS FOR CITY GENTLEMEN

The turn of the century did not herald major changes to the three-piece suit, although some styles were gradually replaced or began to be used for different occasions. For the day the black frock coat with its long, straight skirt, worn with black trousers, was the most formal option. It was followed by the cutaway frock ("morning coat" in the UK) with its sloping front, which could be worn with matching or contrasting trousers.

The lounge suit, originally country wear, was now worn in town. In the evening options gradually expanded as "tails" (tailcoats) were joined by tuxedos (tail-less dinner jackets), at first only considered appropriate for informal dinner parties. More formal attire demanded the stiff collar, available in several shapes. Men had a wide choice of accessories including canes, umbrellas, a variety of hat styles, cravats, bow ties, watch chains, and tiepins.

Silk top hat

Double Albert watch chain

1901

Trousers of as coat

same material

Silk top hat

Dark bow tie

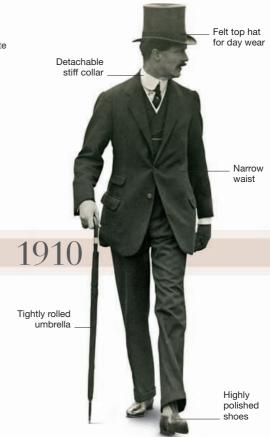

ROYAL FASHION LEADER

King Edward VII had become a male fashion icon when he was still Prince Albert of Wales, popularizing the Norfolk jacket, the Homburg hat, and the Albert watch chain. The king also lent his name to doublebreasted frock coats, which he preferred. The unusual closure shown here might have had more to do with his increasing girth than with any fashionable considerations.

Morning coat The very dapper Lord Chesterfield wears his morning coat with white vest, shirt with high stiff collar, striped cravat, and prominent buttonhole (the flower worn on the lapel).

Lounge suit Unusually the Duke of Roxburghe wears a lounge suit, rather than morning coat, to call at Buckingham Palace. A waistcoat slip, a stiff cotton strip attached to the neckline of his vest, gives the illusion of a second vest worn beneath.

SUITS FOR CITY GENTLEMEN

hat, cane, and gloves.

until the middle of the century.

226

1901-1914

SPORTS AND COUNTRY

arments initially developed for sportswear were often modified or appropriated for mainstream fashion. The most popular example from the male wardrobe were knee breeches of various widths and shapes called either knickerbockers, apparently after the garment worn by 17th-century Dutch settlers in America, or plus fours that extended 4 in (10 cm) below the knee. Before World War I knee breeches were rarely seen away from the shooting ground or the golf course. Now they formed part of smart suits worn in town. Other garments that were used for sports were cardigans for tennis, cricket, and baseball as well as increasingly for leisure wear, and thick, wool sweaters seen on motorcyclists and skiers. Wool sweaters were also popular with fishermen—work wear being another source for fashion innovation. Sportswear remained modest, however, and the male body was mostly hidden except at the beach where male swimsuits became increasingly revealing, although they did not shrink into mere trunks until after World War II.

Flat cap

Formal

wing collar

Tweed This gentleman sports a Norfolk jacket, made fashionable by the Prince of Wales in the 1860s. A popular part of golf attire, it was originally developed for shooting. It was always single-breasted, with box pleats in the front and back, and Front box pleat

1900

Patch pocket

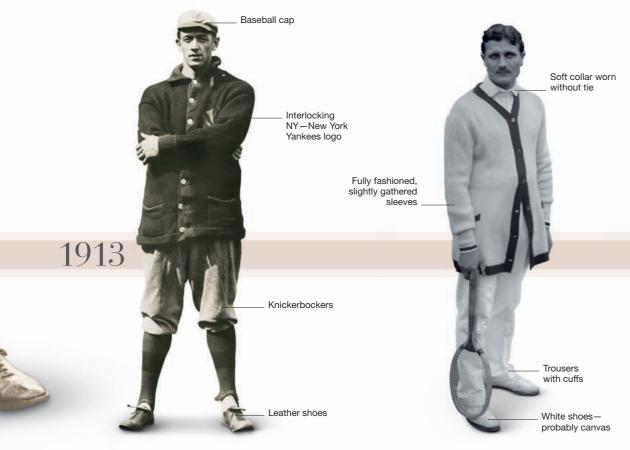

a belt or half-belt.

Wool swimwear The marathon swimmer S.S. Nichol wears an all-in-one swimsuit, probably made of heavy, machine-knit wool, which lost its shape when wet. Nonprofessional male bathers usually wore short trousers with a separate tank top.

Leather gaiters The British racing driver Oscar Godfrey poses with his motorcycle during the British Motorcycle Race Club Trials at Brooklands, England. He wears very long gaiters (leg coverings that fasten over his shoes and stretch up to his knees), probably over knickerbockers.

in southern Germany, Austria, and the Tyrol.

Baseball cap Ray Caldwell, a famous pitcher for the New York Yankees, is shown in practice wear: knickerbockers, a roomy, wool cardigan, and a peaked cap. His gaiters might have been in his team's color.

the flat cap and wide belt.

Cardigan Otto Froitzheim wears a long, white cardigan edged in a contrasting color during the tennis world championships in France in 1913. This kind of outfit would not be seen off the tennis court until after World War II.

SKIING

This 1904 poster for a French resort demonstrates that the vogue for skiing depended on direct trains from Geneva and Paris. Initially skiers wore multiple layers of everyday clothes. It was inconceivable that women would wear anything else but skirts. Specific clothing for the sport was developed only after the war.

Chamonix ski poster, 1904

SIMPLER SILHOUETTES

transformation in women's silhouettes, certain aspects were slow to change. The fashionable, wealthy lady was still expected to change outfits several times a day, and her body continued to be molded into the desired shape by rigid corsetry. There was, however, a gradual shift from a curvy, hourglass figure—with its emphasis on a tiny waist—toward a more tubular outline. The practical tailor-mades (suits) that had been introduced in the previous century remained fashionable and heralded the move toward simpler garments. Turn-of-the-century ribbons and lace, and ruches and pleats were slowly discarded to reveal not only a more pared-down style but also women's feet.

LINGERIE

Flimsy, soft, and highly decorated chemises and camisole-and-underpants combinations were worn underneath rigid constructions that molded the body into the fashionable shape. The flat-fronted corset induced the "S-bend" with the upper body pushed forward while the hips were thrown back. Corsets left the busts largely unsupported so that bust bodices and a variety of bust improvers had to be enlisted to create the fashionable, impressive "monobosom."

Toward the end of the first decade corsets slid down the body, shortening above the bodice and lengthening below. Gradually, women were allowed to stand upright again.

House of Creed This French house began as a tailoring business in London in the 18th century and specialized in riding habits and tailor-mades.

This suit shows the move away from the S-shape silhouette toward a more tubular outline.

Small collar

Ship shape For travel aboard a liner, two young Americans wear loosely fitted jackets with straight skirts. This new look was more comfortable and practical than the narrowwaisted dresses of the preceding years.

Smocking effect at top creates fullness

1900

SIMPLER SILHOUETTES

French daydress This confection accentuates the fashionable S-bend posture and emphasizes the narrow waist and "monobosom." While the skirt is relatively plain, the bodice remains elaborately decorated.

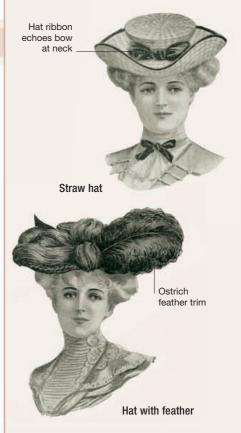

Pour le Matin This tailored French morning suit for spring 1913 features a prominent high waistband and asymmetric button fastening. The skirt takes the newly fashionable slim column shape, narrowing to the ankles.

New silhouette This ensemble was recommended for vacation traveling wear. The skirt is relatively loose but narrows toward the hem where it allows a glimpse of the wearer's shoes and stockings—a new focus for decoration.

HATS AND SHOES

While some women favored small, modest hats, others wore huge creations decorated with ribbons, flowers, and feathers. Hats floated on elaborate coiffures created with the aid of transformations (hair pieces). With these lavish trimmings, occasionally incorporating entire birds, large hats had to be kept in place with long and often highly decorated hat pins.

For day wear, women could choose between practical and sturdy laced or buttoned ankle boots and shoes. Heels returned to a manageable height and were usually of the curved "Louis" heel type. Straight-sided, stacked leather "Cuban" heels became popular toward the end of the first decade.

Ankle boot with Louis heel

Buttoned ankle boot

Laced shoe

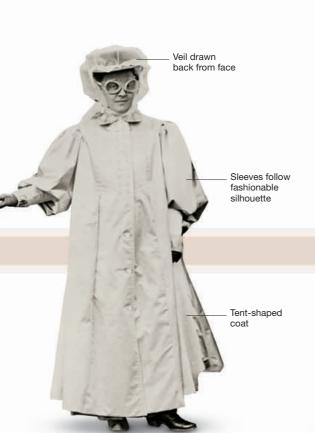

WOMEN IN ACTION

ntil World War I women's sportswear followed the fashionable silhouette and included garments that could also be worn in other contexts. The "tailor-made" (a suit), and the shirtwaist (simple blouse) and skirt combination were often adapted for sports. For bicycling, hiking, and fencing, women could wear divided skirts or bloomers, provided they covered their legs with high, laced-up boots or gaiters. Sportswear usually had minimal surface decoration and was often paired with a manly cravat and flat cap. Even when playing tennis or bicycling, women wore corsets, but these were often smaller and more lightly boned than usual. The knee-length dresses worn over bloomers for bathing gradually became shorter, but continued to be worn with dark stockings.

Tennis Dora Boothby, winner of the ladies' singles title at Wimbledon in 1909, is wearing a corset with her white shirtwaist and flared skirt. White canvas shoes were popular for tennis with men and women Motoring Most early cars were open, and to travel comfortably the entire body and face needed protection. Clothing included a long coat of light-colored fabric called a duster, goggles, and motoring bonnets or veils to shield the face.

Very narrow waist

Yachting The English firm of Burberry supplied a variety of clothes for women and men for summer and winter sports. The relatively short skirt of this yachting gown, worn with a manly tie and flat cap, reveals practical footwear.

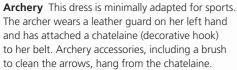

Bathing suit

sleeves now shorter to reveal arms

Red cotton tunic and breeches

Dark belt provides

Skirts reveal ankles

focus at waist

Peaked cap

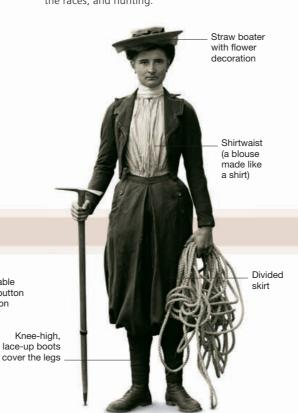

Fashionable

decoration

vertical button

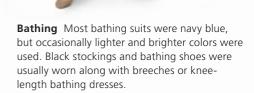

Hunting This figure is taken from an advertisement for H.J. Nicoll of London's Regent Street for its "world famous wrap coats." These warm, long over garments were useful for walking, carriage driving, the races, and hunting.

Golfing The white shirtwaist, usually worn with a tie, was popular with female golfers. Here, it is accessorized with a tweed cap and kilties—shoes with a fringed tongue that covers the lacing and keeps out water.

Hiking Mountaineering became fashionable after the mid-19th century. This practical tailor-made suit has a divided, rather than the more customary floor-length, skirt. It is worn with a shirtwaist underneath.

Edges decorated with two lines of white braid

Skating This suit from the American department store Sears Roebuck is made of mackinaw, a dense, water-repellent, wool cloth. The ensemble is cut along fashionable lines, which, by 1916, had become more suitable for physical exercise.

EVENING AND TEA GOWNS

adies of the Edwardian era (1901-10), whether young or old, bared their décolletage and upper arms when wearing evening dresses, but encased their lower arms in long evening gloves. Sumptuous fabrics such as silk satin, damask, and chiffon, usually in light, soft colors, were decorated with lace, rhinestones, and spangles, often highlighting a part of the body or the face. The gowns' many layers made them difficult, if not impossible, to put on without help. Often made of materials that could easily be damaged, evening wear required decorous deportment. Tea gowns had emerged in the 1880s and continued to be a popular choice for receiving guests in the afternoon. The gowns were often made up of many layers of soft, light fabrics that were flattering but utterly impractical.

THE GIBSON GIRL

In the 1890s the American illustrator Charles Dana Gibson drew tall, slender-waisted, confident young women with layers of softly waved hair piled high on their heads. The "Gibson Girl" set an almost unobtainable beauty standard for the next two decades. The actress Camille Clifford (above) won a competition to find a living version of Gibson's creation.

Empire line Both the silk underdress and a fine outer layer are embroidered in colored beads arranged in linear motifs that emphasize the statuesque feel of this gown. The three-dimensional tassels would move sensuously with the wearer.

Peacock dress The blue and green of the printed and embroidered peacock's body and feathers in this dress are picked up in the waist sash, sleeve ends, and deep hem. The dress was bought in the little-known House of Weeks in Paris.

Slimmer lines Toward the end of the first decade dresses become higher waisted and slimmer, as in this design for a French House of Paquin evening gown. Embroidery or lace trimmings were essential.

Tea gown Worn indoors for afternoon tea, these gowns were usually made in light colors and soft fabrics, as seen in this magnificent example by the French House of Doucet. These garments went out of fashion around 1918.

Dinner gown The longer sleeves and absence of embroidery and other surface decoration, other than the fabric's pattern, mark this as a dinner, rather than an evening, gown. The skirt is split to aid movement. The new shape is very evident here.

Robe du soir The French magazine Gazette du Bon Ton presents an idealized version of a Paquin evening gown. It shows the hallmarks of the new style: high waist, slimline but relatively loose, split skirt, and short "lampshade" overskirt.

Pink damask The loop attached to the train is slipped over the wrist to lift the gown during dancing. The lace echoes the floral pattern of the damask. A local English dressmaker may have made this dress.

London couturier Lady Duff-Gordon dressed actresses—such as musical comedy star Gertie Millar (above) - both on and off the stage. Duff-Gordon, who owned the House of Lucile in London, favored slit skirts and low necklines. She used copies of dresses worn on stage to open a Paris branch of her House of Lucile Ltd. in 1910.

A LIFE OF LEISURE

The early 1900s was a time of contradiction: on one hand was rapid technological change, the rise of motorcars, and female emancipation; on the other, a golden glow of romantic, hedonistic nostalgia enjoyed by the leisured classes. The latter view still defines the Edwardian era for many, and it was captured perfectly by contemporary fashions.

Edward VII's love of extravagant pleasure set the age's tone, with rounds of lavish balls, country-house parties, travel, and athletic pursuits. England's expanding middle classes, upwardly mobile due to the Industrial Revolution, aped this upper-class lifestyle: garden parties, tea on the terrace, picnics, regattas, the races—all requiring suitable outfits. For women, pastel colors were de rigueur, as was sumptuous lace, mousseline de soie (gauzelike fabric), silk chiffon, tulle, crêpe de Chine, ribbon trimmings, and any frilly, lacy detailing. Huge hats bobbed with great feathers or silk flowers. Long, wavy hair was fastened around pads for luxuriant fullness, and the parasol was an essential accessory. The fashionable female shape, created by corsetry, was also luxuriant: a large, low, forward-thrust "monobosom," a wasp waist, and full hips from which a bell-shaped skirt, narrower than Victorian styles, fell gracefully. High necks and long sleeves were worn in daytime, with bodices and necklines infilled with lace or light fabric. Male fashions served as a simple, sober foil. Frock and morning coats were joined by lounge suits worn with crisp collar and cuffs, hats, and umbrella or cane.

66

Society tottered through the last of the pre-War parties, waved tiny lace handkerchiefs, and carried elaborate parasols until the War came with its sweeping changes.

LUCILE, LADY DUFF GORDON, LEADING EDWARDIAN-ERA LONDON COUTURIER, IN HER MEMOIRS, DISCRETIONS AND INDISCRETIONS, 1932

99

FASHIONABLE PURSUITS ▷

The man's binocular case suggests these Edwardians are at the races. Ascot, Derby, Longchamps, and Auteuil almost served as catwalks and the less well-to-do went to these racecourses not only to bet but also to gape.

ANTIFASHION

ransforming women's clothing into something more practical, timeless, "aesthetic," or all three, had been the aim of dress reformers since the 1850s, albeit without much success. Despite the introduction of specialized clothing for some physical activities, many women at the beginning of the 20th century still wore restrictive clothing and, if they could afford it, changed their wardrobe frequently according to fashion's demands. Artists and designers in several countries tried to change this state of affairs. While they proposed different solutions, their designs had common features. Corsets, seen as the root of all evil, were generally abandoned; dresses often had a high, relatively loose waistline, while voluminous sleeves and skirts allowed greater freedom of movement. Prominent surface decoration incorporating the swirling lines and motifs of Art Nouveau—or based on patterns derived from Ancient Greece, the Renaissance, or Byzantium—was a common theme.

ANNA MUTHESIUS

In 1903 German concert singer, and wife of a well-known architect and writer, Anna Muthesius published a book entitled Das Eigenkleid der Frau (Women's Own Dress).

Muthesius believed that dress should express the individuality of the wearer, and she urged women to break free from the fashion dictates of Paris and develop their own taste. Only then would they be able to make suitable sartorial choices and design clothes to suit themselves, using aesthetically pleasing textiles and patterns.

Grecian The American dancer Isadora Duncan was fascinated by Greek culture. Her gowns inspired by, but not replicating, ancient Greek clothing enabled her to dance more freely. Off the stage Duncan wore mainly fashionable dress.

Art Nouveau This gown, designed by Belgian architect Henry van de Velde, was shown in a German exhibition of reform dress. Its "reception gown" label shows van de Velde was not at odds with the female custom of changing clothes throughout the day.

Wiener Werkstätte Koloman Moser was one of the founders of the art collective Wiener Werkstätte (Vienna Workshop). Moser designed the fabric for this dress, which is cut looser than the current fashion.

Pattern Austrian designer Eduard Josef Wimmer-Wisgrill founded the fashion department of Weiner Werkstätte. His design reflects a move toward a tubular form. The use of different patterns and colors strengthens the effect of stacked-up geometric shapes.

Liberty The London department store Liberty & Co. had been associated with aesthetic dress since the 1890s. This dramatic evening gown shaped like a kaftan is made of "hera," one of the most well-known Liberty prints.

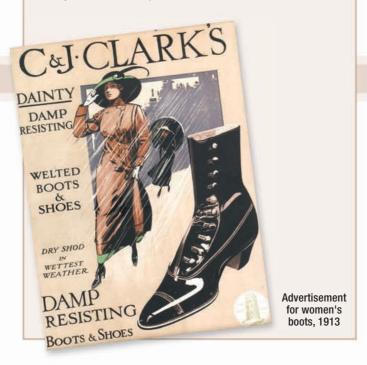

Mariano Fortuny The Spanish designer's trademark dress was the Delphos, a simple column of finely pleated silk, inspired by Greek clothing. Mme. Condé Nast, Isadora Duncan, and Lilian Gish were photographed in his gowns.

WARTIME WOMEN

restrictive and decorative day wear as many women became accustomed to wearing practical uniforms or work wear. The loss of male workers to the armed forces meant that women were employed as railroad porters, bus drivers, train conductors, window cleaners, and even welders. Women also became members of voluntary forces, which were organized and dressed along military lines, such as the "land girls" who worked in agriculture or helped with cutting wood. Most of these occupations came with their own uniforms, though these often had to be bought. Some garments, such as the "British Warm" greatcoat worn by officers during World War I, was adopted as fashionable wear by both men and women.

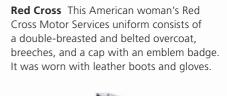

FOOTWEAR

The war had a big impact on fashion, changing the way women perceived themselves and how they were seen by others. Many more women were now doing manual work, requiring practical, durable clothing such as pants and sturdy, sensible footwear. Women needed shoes and boots that were comfortable enough to wear all day, and strong enough to withstand the elements. British shoemakers Clarks produced boots that were waterproof as well as "dainty." The low heel and welting made them practical, while their narrow fit and neat eyelet closures kept them feminine.

Trench coat Versions of the belted officer's coat became part of many women's uniforms. For motoring, or as part of the work wear of the "land girls," the coat was shortened to just above the knee.

Red Cross

Long length boots emblem

Russian look The revival of the full skirt at the end of 1914 pleased petticoat makers. Russian influences remained and knee-length tunics as well as fur-trimmed "Cossack" coats were "quite the stylish thing" for women outside the workplace.

Land Army Wearing durable jodhpurs and sturdy boots, this member of the British Women's Land Army is one of about 33,000 females who worked on the land during the war, all requiring practical and durable garments.

WARTIME WOMEN

Bus conductor Wartime uniforms for women, like this worn by a London "clippy" (a bus conductor) often incorporated shorter skirts or jodhpurs. To maintain modesty, they were usually worn with high boots or puttees.

Practical

brimmed hat

Button to fasten collar together

Coveralls Working with explosives was hard, dirty, and dangerous. These munitions workers from Kent dress in full-length coveralls and head scarves to protect their clothing and hair from factory dust and dirt.

Motor Corps The original Abercrombie & Fitch, a New York retailer of sporting goods, supplied so-called "Lighting Liz" with her Motor Corps uniform. The skirt could be exchanged for breeches when she needed to scramble around truck engines.

Wide

US wear The simple detailing of this American wool suit is reminiscent of women's wartime uniforms. The buttoned half belt at the waist recalls the "British Warm," and clever seaming provides some surface decoration.

WARTIME FASHION

The cover girl of The Gentlewoman wears the uniform of a US male soldier: campaign hat with pinched crown, issue shirt with large pockets, breeches, and puttees (a bandage covering for the lower leg). After the US entered the war in April 1917, US women took part in military service though their uniforms usually included skirts.

240

1914-1923

TOWARD THE NEW WOMAN

cloche hats of ten years later. Embroidered belt The new woman of the 1920s with her bobbed hair and knee-length dress emerged gradually. The evolution to the modern female silhouette took around ten years and started just before World War I. Maybe the most fundamental change was the gradual revelation of the lower part of women's legs, which put a new emphasis on shoes and, more importantly, on stockings. Flesh and soft pastel colors Slim silhouette replaced the dark stockings of the previous age and emphasized Black brimmed were made of real or very shiny artificial silk. Equally by stripes hat with white bow trim noticeable was a change in the fashionable ideal: the statuesque, shapely, mature woman was replaced by her bosomless, hipless, thighless, much younger sister. Waistlines rose and dropped, finally settling around the hips. The new silhouette and less rigid clothing necessitated different kinds and Feet peep out below hem fewer items of underwear. Flat chest Patterned Brimless, parasol angled toque hat Fitted sleeves Sash tied at one side Sash Ropelike belt 1921 1922 Tightly rolled parasol Ankle-Narrow length Buttoned boots with French pattern Almost no traces of the hourglass figure ideal remain. The simple cut of this dress would have made it easier for dressmakers to replicate than previous more elaborate confections. The use of only two muted colors creates visual interest.

black galoshes

Lower waist This simple, striped dress has a Peter Pan collar and matching cuffs. A few darts in the side seam, just above the low waist, allow for a small bust. The black and white of the hat are echoed in the two-tone, lace-up shoes.

La mode simple This French pattern for a summer dress was practical and easy to make. Side skirt panels of patterned fabric make the simple shape more interesting. The same fabric is used to edge the neck and sleeves.

Two-part ensembleThis blouse is made of ratiné, a loosely woven fabric with a knotty surface. The tight hat hiding most of the wearer's hair foreshadows the hairstyle and Striped front

Belt

TOWARD THE NEW WOMAN

Brimless toque in contrasting color

Buttons possibly for decoration

1919

Marshall & Snelgrove This taffeta suit from a London department store echoes the shape of the uniforms worn by female bus conductors during World War I. The hat still features the large crown popular before the war.

Journal des Demoiselles The French Magazine for Young Women shows an elegant yet practical dress design. The collar could be attached to a chemisette—a biblike, fake blouse that did not increase bulk.

Russian influences After the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution many Russians fled to Paris where some found work as embroiderers. The collar, sleeves, and hip area of this velvet daydress are embroidered with motifs found in Russian folk dress.

Modern woman The American magazine Elite Styles specialized in patterns for women's and girls' clothing. The flat-chested, narrowhipped modern woman could easily slip on this colorful dress and face the day.

Fashionable

strapped shoes

BLOUSES

Pullover blouses, like these two examples from a 1922 pattern book, were popular in the early 1920s. Those intended to be worn over the skirt usually had a band, sash, bow, or other feature at the low waistline. Women could choose from a variety of necklines to complement their jacket or cardigan. Nautical styles remained in favor, blouses with sailor collars being advertised as "middies" in the US after the shirt of the midshipman.

DESIGNER

PAUL POIRET

nown as Le Magnifique in Paris and the King of Fashion in the US, Poiret (1879–1944) was said by The New Yorker (1927) to have "helped to change the modern retina." This brew of descriptions underlines three aspects of the man who dominated Parisian and international fashion in the 1910s—a theatrical orientalism, a new talent for branding and promotion, and a blending of clothes with avant-garde art. Poiret started auspiciously, working for two leading turn-of-the-century maisons:

Jacques Doucet, then House of Worth. When he opened his own Parisian couture house around 1903, he set about overturning Belle Epoque fashion values. European women had been enslaved to a corseted waist, more or less, since the Renaissance. From 1903

Poiret set out to free them from the petticoat,

Draping by design

With a new silhouette came Poiret's fresh take on structuring garments. He replaced classic 19th-century pattern-dependent tailoring with an inspired draping of fabric and let garments hang from the shoulders. Between 1906 and World War I Poiret experimented with bold shapes inspired by a more natural female form and his own take on oriental luxury. Beginning with the svelte, empirewaisted lines of his startlingly simple Directoire garments, recalling French styles of the late 1700s and early 1800s, he pushed aside the subdued Edwardian palette, and added striking colors and exotic turbans. The year 1910 saw hobble skirts, so narrow at the ankles that walking was almost impossible. The next three years brought harem pants, followed by a minaret or lampshade tunic and then the corset, in favor of looser, leaner

Vionnet, also endorsed corset-free fashion, Poiret stole the limelight with vigorous self-promotion.

lines. Although others, such as Madeleine shape in colorful beaded and fur-trimmed silks and chiffons. Confucius cloaks, kimonos, cocoon coats, and African kaftans were popular shapes.

Fusing fashion, theater, and art

A sense of theater was integral to Poiret's work, the oriental costumes of the Ballets Russes in productions such as Schéhérazade (1910) being a major influence. Poiret's lampshade tunic appeared in his costume designs for an orientalist play called Le Minaret. Placing his young wife, Denise, in the audience at the Paris première of the play in 1913, dressed in a similar garment, was a mark of Poiret's genius for promotion. Poiret showed women how to make their fantasies into daily reality. Famed for lavish events—such as a Persianthemed costume party entitled "The Thousand and Second Night" (1911), co-hosted by a Poiret-dressed Denise—the business-savvy Poiret is often credited with inventing the glitzy fashion launch. Under Poiret's influence, fashion became part of a total artistic lifestyle. An enthusiastic painter himself, Poiret collaborated with artists such as Raoul Dufy and Erté, elevating clothes to an art form. He founded a decorative arts school in 1911, worked in interior design, and pioneered the couturier perfume business.

Nicknamed the Prophet of Simplicity by Vogue in 1913, there is irony in the fact that Poiret was undone by modernism. He was dismayed by the androgynous 1920s garçonne look and Chanel's love of black over color. Although the 1920s saw his business in dire straits, he remains a towering fashion influence on designers such as Proenza Schouler, Prada, Hussein Chalayan, and Rei Kawakubo.

△ NEW WAYS OF WORKING

Poiret painstakingly fits a house model, draping fabric directly onto the body and cutting material in straight lines. Despite the lean simplicity, his look was sensual, elegant, and feminine.

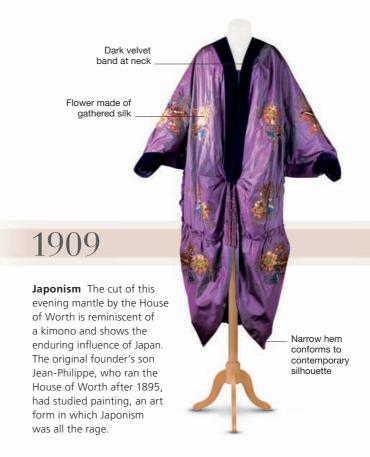

⊲ EMPIRE LINES

A Directoire-style evening dress from 1910, in forest-green and ivory-striped silk and black silk chiffon. This neoclassical columnar shape was revolutionary in the age of the corseted S-curve. Collar and cuffs are made from a traditional French cartridge-pleated linen bonnet, while the high waistline is caught with the folkloric brocaded ribbon that Poiret adored.

1879 Born in Paris c.1903 Founds his first 1910 Designs hobble 1929 Closes his fashion maison on rue skirts—an impractical, fashion business Auber, Paris oriental-led fashion 1898 Starts work for Paris couturier Jacques Doucet, and creates an ▶ 1911 La Perse > 1913 Iconic Poiret 1906 Launches the coat, in silk and 1944 Dies lampshade-minaret 1922 Beaded. 1901 Joins the simple, empire-line fur, features fabric penniless in Paris shapes launched oriental-flavor House of Worth, Directoire Revival look designed by Raoul evening dresses in and begins the liberation Dufy. Harem hot Poiret colors Gaston Worth from corsetry pants appear O 1900 O 1910 O 1920 O 1930

ORIENTALISM

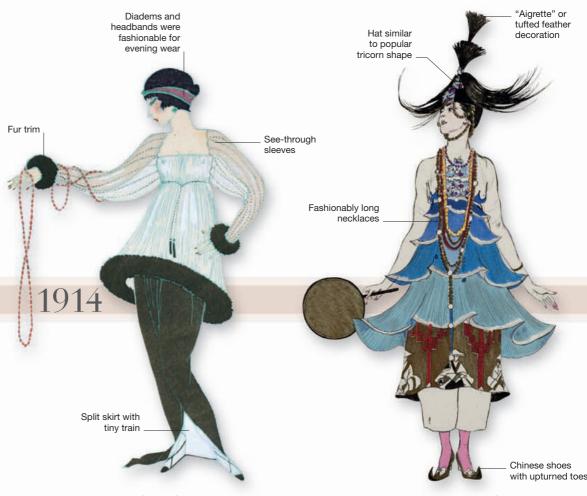

In the summer of 1909 the Ballets Russes (Russian Ballet), the company formed by impresario Sergei Diaghilev, first performed in Paris with great success. Shows in other European cities followed over the next 10 years and everywhere the bright colors of the ballet's sets and costumes made a huge impact—"exotic" features such as turbans and harem pants were adapted for fashionable dressing. While Paul Poiret claimed to have used bright colors before the Ballets Russes, the French couturier, the so-called Pasha of Paris, is most associated with this trend. Poiret continued a long tradition of using motifs from Middle Eastern and Asian cultures in Western design that went back at least as far as the Renaissance. During the 19th century North Africa and Japan were prominent sources of inspiration and continued to be in the 20th century. Ideas of which countries belonged to the "Orient" changed over time, but they were usually associated with a richer, freer, and more sensuous way of life.

HARLEM DANCER

The identity of the woman in this 1925 photograph—titled Dancer, taken in Harlem in New York City—is unknown, but she is wearing a costume similar to a Ballets Russes design. Dyed ostrich feathers tower over a headdress perhaps inspired by traditional Persian dress. Other than the baggy pants, her outfit is heavily embroidered with beads and spangles.

Lamp-shade tunic After his famous Persian costume party, Paul Poiret created one of his best-known designs—a tight "hobble" skirt and a lamp-shade tunic held out with wire. This diaphanous example is edged with black fur.

Pagoda The tiered tower design from Asia was imitated in Western architecture, interior design, and fashion. The outfit depicted in French designer Etienne Drian's fashion plate might have been costume, but certain features also appeared in fashionable gowns.

ROBES DE STYLE

n stark contrast to the streamlined dress of the "modern woman" with its straight lines, often emphasized by geometric decoration, a much ■ softer and more romantic silhouette survived beyond the late 1910s. The most prominent feature of this feminine style was a very full skirt that sometimes required support by the means of side-hoops—stiff understructures shaped like small baskets and worn over the hips. The Paris couturier Jeanne Lanvin is most associated with this type of dress, which was particularly suitable for younger ladies.

The so-called robe de style was inspired by 18th-century gowns and was more forgiving than androgynous 1920s shapes. The vast expanse of the skirt provided a large, blank canvas that could be filled with embroidery, artificial flowers, lace, and feathers.

DOLLY SISTERS

The Hungarian-born twin dancers Roszika and Janszieka Deutsch were known less for their stage act than for their matching outfits, often provided by Jean Patou, and their spectacular private lives acted out on the French Riviera, in nightclubs and casinos. The ostrich feather skirts of their windmill costumes echo the robe de style silhouette.

Waist at natural level

1920

Cinderella The French House of Douillet was known for attention to detail and exquisite evening wear. Andre Marty illustrated this evening dress called Cendrillon (Cinderella). which combines soft lace, a colorful band at the hips, and large blocks of austere black.

Short overskirt

Lace skirt with black apron feature decorating Lanvin's evening gown, two embroidered peacocks face each other, surrounded by beads, pearls, rhinestones, and spangles. Embroidered tulle decorates also used in their natural colors.

Fall leaves The French couture house Mybor employed artists to create designs for their clothing. Silk fall leaves, their veins emphasized with pieces of lamé, are attached to triangular panels that fall to the hem of this skirt.

underslip that includes two rows of boning

just below the hips.

of, probably, dyed ostrich plume have been knotted together to form longer strands.

DESIGNER

COCO CHANEL

redited with inventing everything from the suntan to the little black dress, "Coco" Chanel (1883–1971) was one of a number of designers, including Jean Patou, who set the tone for informal womenswear. She was a towering fashion figure, expertly anticipating the post-World War I spirit, representing the modernist woman, and adding weight to many trends. Her 1920s and 30s women's wear developed a cleverly "simple" look that chimed with the sober functionalism of wartime clothes. It embraced relaxed Chanel suits in jersey and tweed, as well as streamlined shift chemises and the LBD (Little Black Dress), costume jewelry, wide-bottomed trousers, and signature accessories.

Capitalizing on her own boyish figure, Chanel embraced the less constricted approach, creating clothes that were comfortable and easy for "new" women to wear. Her own appearance—and lifestyle—personified modernist ideals, providing powerful publicity and giving her an enduring, iconic status.

Making the right connections

After a hard start in life, support from wealthy male admirers helped Chanel establish a Parisian millinery business in 1910, followed by shops in the fashionable beach resorts of Deauville and Biarritz. She began experimenting with menswear styles and making women's garments from jersey, a soft, easily draped fabric. By 1919 she had a booming business in Paris.

The 1920s established her staple range of pullovers and loose or cardigan jackets, short skirts, and simple blouses. There were fancier dresses for evening but still with a lean, stylish simplicity. Acclaim followed. Practicality and comfort were key to Chanel's relaxed mode—encapsulated in the sensibly placed pocket, for example. More importantly, Chanel clothes spoke of youthful effortlessness, so different from prewar styles, but with high price tags; her market was the leisured wealthy.

Chanel promoted an often muted palette of gray, black, white, and navy, and fed a major craze for beige. Enlivening additions included gilt buttons and gilt-chained bags, as well as costume jewelry, which under her influence became not just acceptable but desirable. She pioneered mixing real gems with fake ones—artificial pearls

Closing her couture house during World War II, Chanel (now in her 70s) relaunched herself in 1954. were a favorite.

Her reinvented simple skirt suit with braid-trimmed collarless jacket was an enormous success, especially in the US, where Jackie Onassis was a high-profile 1960s fan of the boxy ensemble and pearls. Chanel's enduring appeal is thanks partly to loose lines that suit a wide variety of women and partly to her beautifully perfectionist finish, while her separates have promoted the all-important concept of the mix-and-match, investment capsule wardrobe.

Chanel was still overseeing her collections when she died, in her 80s, in 1971. The couture house continued and in 1978 the first prêt-à-porter (ready-to-wear) line was launched. In 1983 Karl Lagerfeld became head of design, raising the brand's profile globally and promoting cult use of the Chanel logo. That he has found so many fresh ways to mine Chanel concepts proves that Coco had tapped into a timeless purism. Many designers have drawn on her approach, from Claire McCardell to Betty Jackson.

△ TIMELESS ALLURE
Effortless chic and an air of enduring youth came naturally to Chanel and were key elements of the clothes she designed.

Still going strong in the 21st century, the Chanel suit with its collarless jacket, relaxed style, and easy-to-wear fabric is instantly recognizable.

1883 Born 1921 Launches ☐ 1930 Goes to Hollywood to 1953–54 Relaunches 1983 Karl Lagerfeld Gabrielle her fragrance design movie costumes for United and reinvents prewar takes over Chanel haute Bonheur Chanel Chanel No. 5 Artists stars such as Gloria ideas to produce couture (1983) and in Saumur, France Swanson and evening dresses a classic collarless suit prêt-à-porter (1984) □ 1918–19 After running for the modern age shops in Deauville and Paris, moves business to 31 rue 1939 Closes her 1971 Dies in 1910 Cambon, Paris, selling Paris, age 87 Opens hat ensembles and separates shop in Paris It remains there today O 1880 O 1910 O 1920 0 1930 O 1950 O 1970 O1980

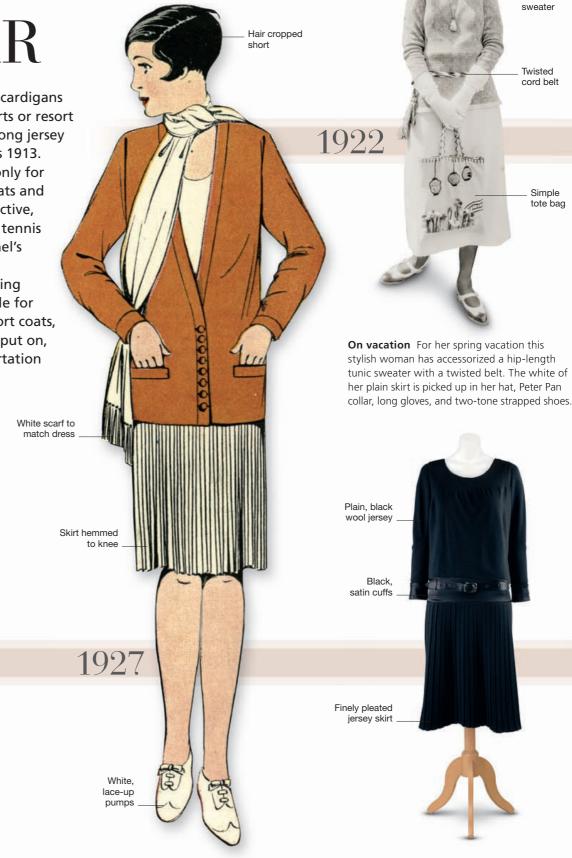

THE NEW KNITWEAR

n the late 1910s women began to wear cardigans and long sweater tunics, mainly for sports or resort wear. Coco Chanel famously donned a long jersey sweater on the Normandy beach as early as 1913. This knit textile had previously been used only for underwear but Chanel fashioned it into coats and suits. Knitwear was the perfect fit for the active, modern woman, personified by the French tennis ace Suzanne Lenglen who patronized Chanel's rival Jean Patou. While not everyone could afford his patterned sweaters—with matching accessories—cheaper versions were available for the mass market. Knit cardigans, tunics, short coats, or entire knitwear ensembles were easy to put on, comfortable to wear, and survived transportation in a suitcase to the Riviera or the Alps.

JEAN PATOU

In the Paris of the 1920s and early 30s the dashing Jean Patou was as famous and successful as Coco Chanel. Often credited with the invention of the knit sweater and swimsuit, and sportswear in general, the couturier dressed sports stars, actresses, and dancers such as the Dolly sisters and Josephine Baker. The French tennis champion Suzanne Lenglen, a major popularizer of la mode sportive, here models a long, belted tunic sweater with zigzag bands on sleeves and hem, a and a fashionable felt cloche hat. Patou also designed the daring short-sleeved cotton Jersey Coco Chanel's perfect "little black dress" is in fact made in two parts from one of her trademark materials: wool jersey. The unlined skirt, attached to a deep waistband, is paired with a short sweater edged with satin.

Black

satin cuffs

Plain wool sweater

Twisted cord belt

> Simple tote bag

On the beach Mrs. Sherwin of New York wore an all-white outfit while on vacation in Palm Beach, Florida. Hip-length tunic sweaters were usually worn with matching or contrasting belts, often fastened to one side.

Graduated stripes The explorer Violet Cressy-Marcks could scarcely be more fashionable. She wears a simple hip-length, V-neck sweater with a short, full skirt, accessorized with a belt, long necklace, and clutch bag.

Wide-brimmed cloche hat

Graduated

Cardigan suits These ladies wear fashionable knit jersey ensembles by Wilson's of London, inspired by the casual chic of leading designers Chanel and Patou. Long cardigans are layered over simple sweaters, teamed with pleated jersey skirts.

Simplicity This deceptively simple, British going-away outfit has geometric seams to create a pattern, pleated side panels in the skirt that allow movement but keep the straight line, and a collar facing that echoes the V-neck insert.

ensemble shows off its dynamic striped design in colored wool. The button-front closures on both garments provide an easy-fitting, versatile outfit.

KNITWEAR

The "knitted wear" available from Gorringes, the London department store, in 1926 was declared "suitable for the smartest occasions." All the styles incorporate a low waist and are patterned, some models reflecting the vogue for ornamentation based on eastern European traditional dress. While the top left model is wearing a patterned cardigan for golf, the other styles were clearly suitable for more than just sportswear.

RISING HEMS

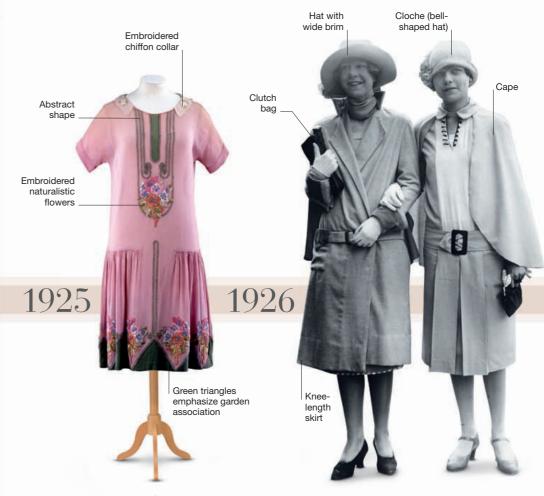

ictor Margueritte's scandalous novel La Garçonne, published in 1922, describes the transformation of a young woman into the "tomboy" of the title. The androgynous, youthful look came to represent the decade, though not every woman could carry it off. Thankfully there were several styles to choose from, as long as they had a low waist. Hemlines rose and dropped at least twice, skirts being at their shortest around 1927. The gowns' straight silhouettes were often broken up or emphasized by geometric decoration, and different colors could be used for the top and bottom halves. Fuller skirts remained in fashion, becoming more prominent when hemlines were lower. The tight, bell-shaped cloche hat with its diminishing brim became universally popular and indicated that its wearer's hair had been cut fashionably short, but hats with wide brims also remained in vogue.

LINGERIE

While women could choose from a bewildering array of undergarments, they all served one purpose: to reduce or entirely remove any curves that even vigorous dieting could not eliminate. Brassières had been introduced the previous decade but now shrank into a flattening band. Underpants remained large and could also be attached to camisoles. Artificial or real silk, crêpe de Chine, and georgette in pink, peach, apricot, or brighter colors such as cyclamen (pink) replaced white cotton. Edgings and inserts were made of lace. Corsets were still used but now often took the shape of girdles compressing the hips with and without the help of elastic.

Folk dress The shape of this short day dress is a mixture of the simple tubular silhouette and the more voluminous robe de style. The colors and style of the embroidery might have been derived from the traditional dress of eastern Europe.

Similar theme Both women sport the tubular silhouette with a low waistline and hem just below the knee. Variations are provided by the use of different outer garments, shoes with and without straps, and different hat styles.

short. Stockings were an important accessory and always had a high sheen.

metallic thread embroidery in geometric patterns imply luxury or a special occasion.

JAZZ AGE

During the Roaring Twenties women's clothes became a powerful expression of the modernist approach to all forms of art. Many old attitudes were swept away by World War I, and with them the long skirts and waist-cinching corsetry of the early 1900s. Such constrictions were unsuited to the vital, active wartime roles women took as land workers, drivers, and machine operators. By the 1920s more women could vote, and more entered the professions. They drove, smoked, drank cocktails, and worshipped screen stars such as Clara Bow. Dress became relaxed and strikingly simple.

One key aspect of the modern woman's look was pour le sport. Clothes developed for physical activity left their mark on fashion, while sport itself helped to achieve the stovepipe silhouette. Women hankered after the image of La Garçonne (Bachelor Girl or Tomboy) from the eponymous 1922 novel by Victor Margueritte. Hair was bobbed or cut into the "Eton crop" and hugged by cloches, waists abandoned or dropped to the hips, and chests flattened.

Believing that clothes should be casual and easy to wear, and borrowing from men's garments and sports and leisure fabrics, Coco Chanel and Jean Patou took a fashion lead. Their plain sweaters, short, pleated skirts (hemlines rose to the knees by the mid-1920s), and use of soft wool jerseys allowed free movement and won immediate international success. Everyday clothes featured unstructured jackets, hip-length sweaters, and simple blouses and skirts. By night, drop-waisted, full-hemmed dresses allowed flappers another important freedom—to dance the night away at jazz clubs.

Fashion is not something that exists in dresses only. Fashion is in the sky, in the street, fashion has to do with ideas, the way we live, what is happening.

COCO CHANEL

Models seated in the back of a luxury yacht showcase the fashion of the day with linen jackets, pleated skirts, and berets or cloche hats.

256

1923-1929

ROARING TWENTIES

espite the brevity of their reign, knee-length evening gowns sprinkled with beads and paillettes are probably the main garments associated with the Roaring Twenties. Hems moved upward during 1923, peaking just below the knee a few years later—only to inch toward the ground again almost immediately. As sleeves were abandoned, women invested in safety razors and tried out the new deodorants. The French designer Jean Patou remarked that it was "the taste for dancing" that determined the line of evening gowns. It also influenced their decoration —beaded fringes and feathers attached to thin crêpes and georgettes swayed to the rhythm of the Charleston and Black Bottom. For a few years everything glittered: real diamonds or rhinestones decorated tiaras, bandeaus, and detachable heels. Anticipated by pointed hems and trailing shawls attached at the waist or shoulder, the long evening gown returned by the end of the decade; the dancing was over.

Reptile English-born couturier Edward Molyneux created this unique dress. A variety of beads are used to make the fabric appear as if made from snakeskin. Long, triangular inserts emanating from the skirt underneath the hips end in beaded fringes.

ROARING TWENTIES

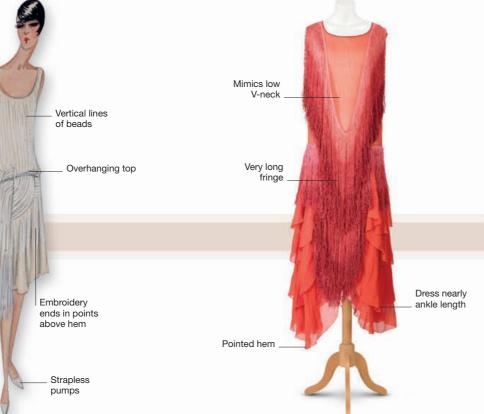

Slip-on Most evening gowns in the 1920s did not have any closures and were just slipped on. This dress is embroidered all over in gold. Its peach-colored chiffon lining is used as a decorative feature and shines through below the waist.

Dress sets

Fringed belt

1928

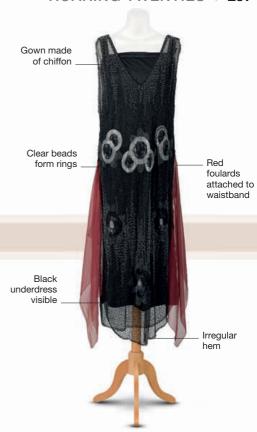

Egyptian style Popular interest in archaeology led to the use of shapes and colors that were inspired by artefacts and imagery of ancient cultures. The architectural nature of the embroidery here would have given the wearer a statuesque air.

Glow worm The name given to this design, Ver Luisant (glow worm), might allude to the iridescent beads with which it is covered. The top is embroidered with beads in vertical lines that give way to swirls below the waist, finishing in a fringed sash.

Shades of red This bright red chiffon gown has several rows of deep flounces below the hips. It is decorated with layers of two types of deep fringing in lighter to darker shades of pink and coral.

Beadwork This transparent chiffon gown is embroidered with black and clear beads. The black underdress, visible underneath, has narrow shoulder straps. Foulards (scarves) of red gauzy material attached to the waist soften the straight silhouette.

STRAPPED PUMPS

Evening dresses were worn with closed sandals or strapped pumps in a variety of materials, including fabric and metallic leathers. The quest for decoration and ornament extended to shoes: leather was tooled (stamped or painted), and fabric was embroidered with beads, spangles, and rhinestones. Some manufacturers even offered separate heels ornamented with rhinestones that were laid in geometric shapes into a celluloid base imitating mother-of-pearl. These heels could be attached to different pairs of shoes.

BEADED EVENING WEAR

Geometric motifs in embroidery, silvery beading, rhinestone dress falls straight from the shoulders and has little shaping. features were thin, fluid textiles like this cream silk chiffon, company Reville and Rossiter c. 1925–28, has all the his iconic evening gown, designed by the London deep V-necks, and a dropped waist. This tubular, slip-on hallmarks of a Jazz-era "flapper dress." Popular studs, and fringing grab the attention—elements that

Short cap sleeves showed off dancers' arms

V-neckline emphasized by embroidered and beaded band

Special Park Saching

SIDE VIEW

Silver glass bugle beads

- Triangle of black silk covered with beads draws attention to the dropped waist

△ RHINESTONE BEADS of rhinestone appears at the dropped waist with a wide band The heaviest decoration embroidery, a variety of glass beads, and silver scrollwork patterning but roundels are also studs. Most of the design comprises a feature.

movements of the time: the dress reflect the art

Machine Age.

The density of the beadwork weighs threads are covered with straight line of the dress, though it also took its created from ornate silk helped to maintain the heavily on the delicate, silk chiffon fabric. This tassels. Tightly wound beads and the ends material, especially toll on the fragile during dancing.

wrapped in silver wire. The tassels are hung at a variety of lengths to mimic feathers.

AT THE BEACH

or centuries respectable women had feared the effects of the \dashv sun, but now that fashionable clothing exposed more skin, men and women entered the "suntan era." If the real thing was elusive, sunlamps, suntan stockings, and suntan powder could be used to achieve the desired complexion. Alabaster skin once denoted a life free of outdoor work; now it signified an indoor life of office or factory drudgery. From 1922 wealthy sun seekers and those wanting to try their luck in one of the Grand Casinos could board the luxurious Blue Train in Calais at 1 pm and arrive on the Côte d'Azur the next morning. These novel pursuits provided opportunities for sartorial invention—revealing bathing suits cried out for a practical cover. The "divine sloppiness" of beach or Lido pajamas became so irresistible that in 1933 the Riviera resort of Juan-les-Pins was christened "Pajamapolis," a tag that equally could have been applied to Malibu or Palm Beach.

While at the beach, parasols provided shelter from the sun and wind, as well as being stylish accessories.

At this time bold printed fabrics were often chosen, in silk or its newly popular synthetic alternative, rayon. Asian parasols, that were made from varnished paper and decorated with exotic designs, were also Lido wear The sandy beach of the Venetian Lido island gave its name to seaside resorts and pools. as well as fashionable beachwear. These pajamas of royal blue georgette feature a collar, tie, and facings of contrasting jade satin.

Cool bathing The wealthy stockbroker E.F. Hutton, owner of the largest private sea-going yacht of the era, shows off his tanned physique in the typical, fashionably striped and belted one-piece male bathing suit of the 1920s.

Palm Beach The riotously patterned beach pajamas of Mr. Kenneth B. Van Riper of New York are a far cry from formal wear, but they do feature adorned side seams also found on tuxedo or dinner suit pants.

Summer suit Seasonal heat in the French resort of Deauville demanded a lightweight suit. Probably showing far too much cuff to be respectable, this gentleman has accessorized his soft-collared shirt with a dark tie and a tiepin.

French tennis champions René Lacoste and Suzanne Lenglen both influenced sports fashion. The turbaned Lenglen inaugurated the short, sleeveless sports dress, while Lacoste went on from his tennis career to establish La Chemise Lacoste in 1933, which sold tennis whites, as well as golf and sailing clothes, of his own design.

262

1920-1929

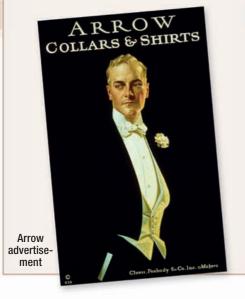

SETTING STANDARDS

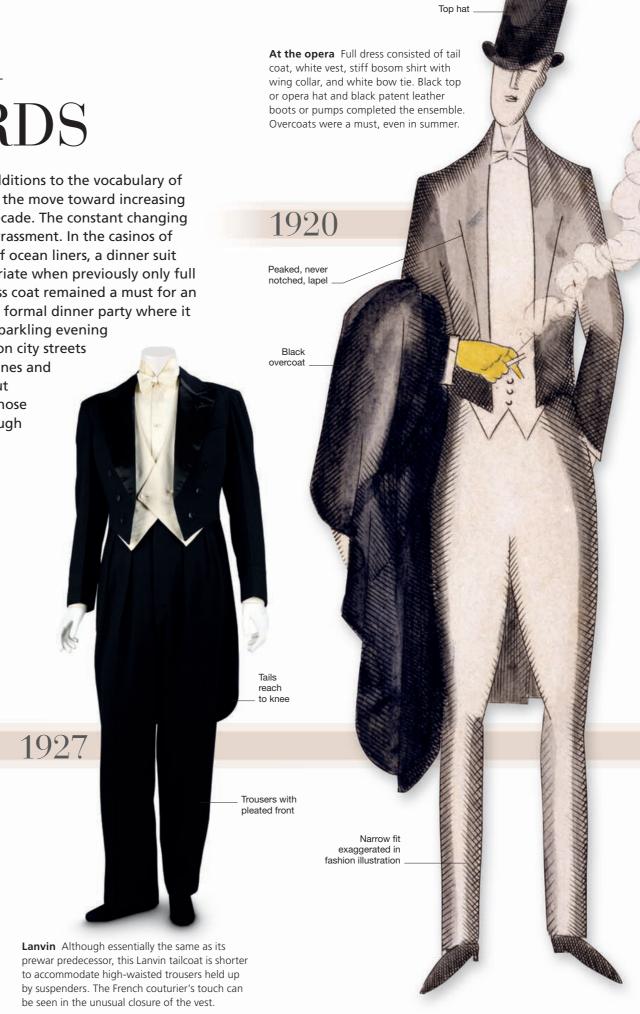

Ithough there were no major additions to the vocabulary of men's formal wear in the 1920s, the move toward increasing informality continued in that decade. The constant changing of rules could cause anxiety and embarrassment. In the casinos of French resorts or at the dinner tables of ocean liners, a dinner suit or tuxedo was now considered appropriate when previously only full dress would have done. The tail or dress coat remained a must for an evening spent at the opera, a ball, or a formal dinner party where it provided the perfect foil for colorful, sparkling evening dresses. Frock coats could still be seen on city streets but mainly worn by older men. Magazines and etiquette books were prescriptive about what was considered good form, but those wealthy, famous, or good-looking enough such as Hollywood stars were granted a certain sartorial licence.

ARROW COLLAR MAN

This advertisement for collars and shirts bearing the American Arrow label sets almost unobtainable sartorial and physical standards. The stiff, white shirt front, wing collar, and white bow tie draw the eye to the typically chiseled feature of J.C. Leyendecker's creation. White carnations were the recommended buttonhole for full dress, although gardenias were also accepted. The illustration highlights the close fit of full dress, emphasizing the chest and confining the waist.

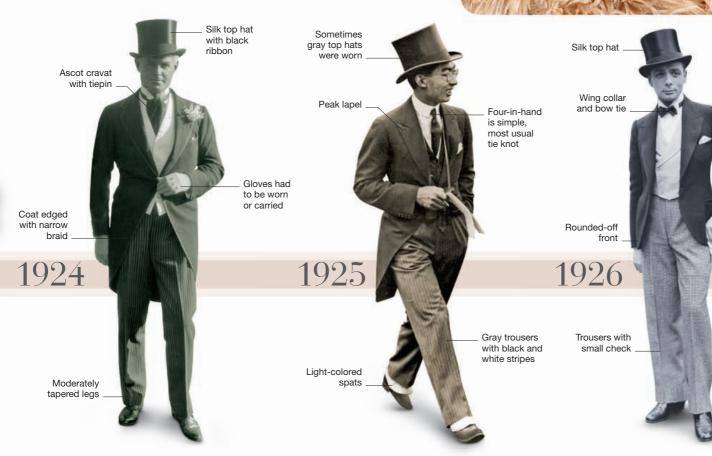

Sloping shoulder

Long cane with tasseled ribbon line

Father of the bride This cutaway coat with braided edges, white vest, and gray worsted trousers with black and white stripes are the correct attire for a Philadelphia wedding. It had to be worn with a four-in-hand, Ascot cravat, or black bow tie.

At the races Yasuhito, Prince Chichibu of Japan, sports a morning coat, matching vest, striped trousers, turn-down collar, and four-in-hand tie. According to one writer, shoes should never be worn with a top hat unless with spats.

Hollywood George K. Arthur is dressed as Madame Lucy, the flamboyant gay couturier in the 1926 film Irene. This might account for the unusual pairing of black dinner jacket with checked trousers, normally teamed with a morning coat.

Morning coat The US Secretary of the Navy, Charles Francis Adams III, wears a black morning coat with matching, single-breasted vest, and striped trousers. A top hat and stylish, leather Oxford shoes complete his formal look.

Business suit Alfred P. Sloan Jr, the president of General Motors, is in a relaxed variation of semiformal wear. After 1925 a dark, single-breasted business suit became known as a Stresemann in Germany after the country's foreign secretary.

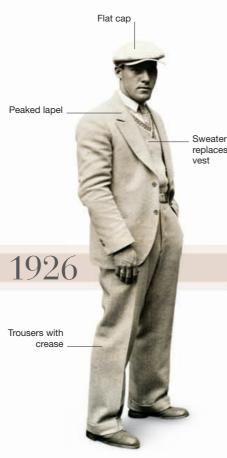

Opening of parliament What looks at first glance like a frock coat is in fact a double-breasted Chesterfield, the correct overcoat to wear with a morning coat. The matching vest is worn with a white slip just visible near the four-in-hand.

SUITS FOR ALL

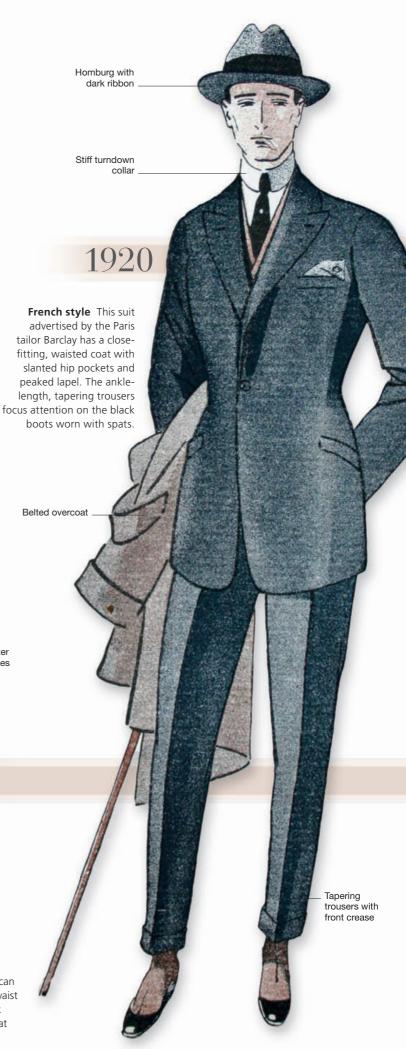

n 1922 one fashion critic declared that the lounge suit had become "the almost universal utility dress for men," but this did not mean that sartorial distinctions had become extinct. Differences in the quality as well as the quantity of suits a man owned remained. A suit could be bought readyto-wear or secondhand, but many men still "bespoke" a suit from their tailor or had it made to measure. Many appreciated the English cut promoted by London's Savile Row tailors, but others preferred the less fitted and softer American "sack suit," or the more overtly fashionable shapes provided by the French tailleur. Suit fabrics became lighter, particularly for summer—as demonstrated by the cloth used to make "Palm Beach" suits in the US. This affected male underwear and slowly undershirts worn with cotton shorts replaced the earlier "union suit" (all-in-one undergarment). Toward 1930 the high-waisted suits of the early part of the decade made way for a straighter silhouette.

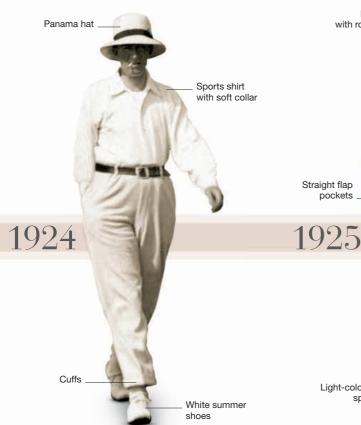

Raccoon The American football idol Harold "Red" Grange wears a comfortable-looking tweed suit with a three-button jacket. Coats made of the fur of the North American raccoon were hardwearing and recommended for driving.

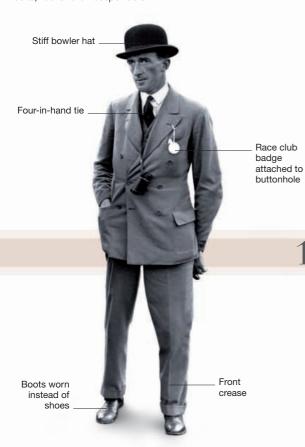

Casual "Red" Grange wears a low-cut American sack suit with little or no shaping around the waist and natural shoulders. The sportsman's V-neck sweater, tucked into his belted trousers, and flat cap denote informality.

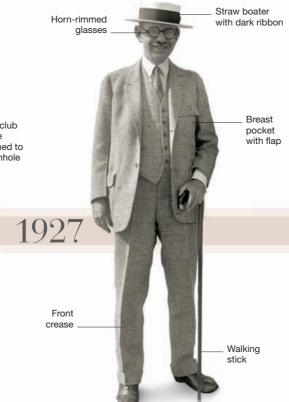

Seaside "White flannels," trousers made of light, brushed wool cloth, were recommended for summer, whether staying at the Riviera or an English seaside town. Flannels were worn with belts, rather than suspenders.

The races The meaning of a lounge suit could be transformed by the choice of hat and shirt. This Yorkshire race goer teams a light, double-breasted suit with a starched collar and a relatively formal bowler hat.

Double-breasted By mid-decade the suit was less fitted and worn with slightly wider trousers. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wears his double-breasted suit with a soft collar shirt and club tie. The light color of the homburg hat is echoed in the spats.

Florida beachwear Marcus Lowe, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures, wears a lightweight "Palm Beach" suit for a day at the beach. He sports a boater, which remained fashionable for summer wear throughout the decade

HATS AND SHOES

Men in the 1920s could choose from a variety of hat shapes that had all been introduced in the previous century. Other than the top hat, lounge suits could be worn with every hat type. The bowler, also called derby or coke, was the most formal, followed by the homburg, a stiff felt with a center crease and rolled brim. The trilby and wider-brimmed fedora, both named after literary characters, were everyday city hats, while the boater or other varieties of straw hat were for summer or the beach.

Straw boater hat

Shoes had gradually replaced boots since the turn of the century. These were mainly of the lace-up Oxford type and had to be matched to the rest of the outfit and the season. Dark business suits were worn with black or tan shoes, but in summer shoes of white leather or cotton duck accessorized white flannels or Palm Beach suits. Toward the end of the decade two-tone shoes became all the rage.

MODERNISM

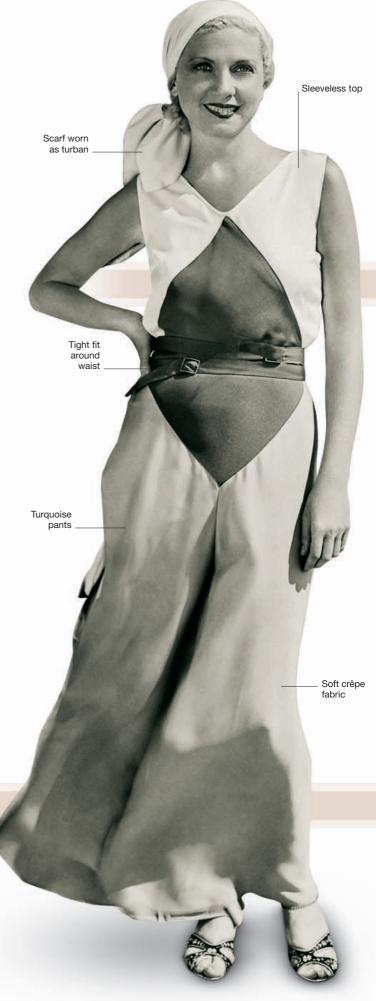

ome artists-turned-fashion creators were inspired by the past. Others, spread around Europe and in ${\cal J}$ postrevolutionary Russia, looked toward a variety of futures and created clothes for the new world. Aleksandr Rodchenko in Russia and Thayaht in Italy developed an early form of the functional overall, and Hungarian Laszlo Moholy-Nagy customized existing work wear. The Italian Futurists' love of speed and movement found expression not only in their art, but also in bright, one-off clothes with abstract patterns. Varvara Stepanova and Lyubov Popova designed textiles based on universal shapes to rationalize mass production in Russia. In Paris the Russian-born Sonia Delaunay also used geometric forms in bright colors but in the service of the moneyed few. That the straight silhouette of the 1920s lent itself to decoration with regular lines and shapes occurred to creative people besides artists, and similar designs could be found outside elite fashion.

TuTa In 1919 the artist and designer Ernesto Michahelles not only adopted the name Thayaht but also designed the TuTa, an early example of an coverall. The soft lines created by this "universal garment" followed those of the body.

Work suit Between 1923 and 1928 the Hungarian Moholy-Nagy was a teacher at the German Bauhaus school. Its aim of fusing crafts and fine arts was echoed in his Arbeitsanzug (work suit), presenting the artist as craftsman.

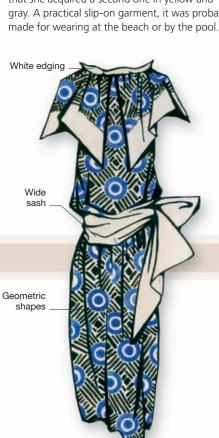

Malibu Geometric shapes were fashionable farther afield than Europe, as demonstrated by the silk crêpe beach pajamas worn by Lilyan Tashman. "Hollywood's best-dressed star" allegedly owned a million-dollar wardrobe.

MODERNISM

Large diamond

Harlequin The Standard Oil heiress Millicent Rogers liked the fabric of this creation so much that she acquired a second one in yellow and gray. A practical slip-on garment, it was probably made for wearing at the beach or by the pool.

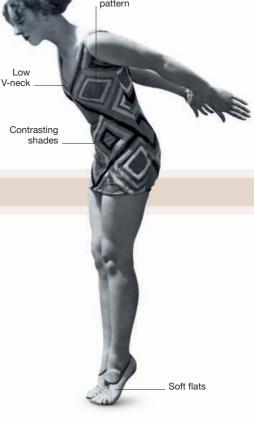

Productivism In 1921 the Russian artist Lyubov Popova turned away from the easel and focused her attention on textile design. The straight-lined geometric forms of her fabric patterns contrast with the more fluid shapes of her dress designs.

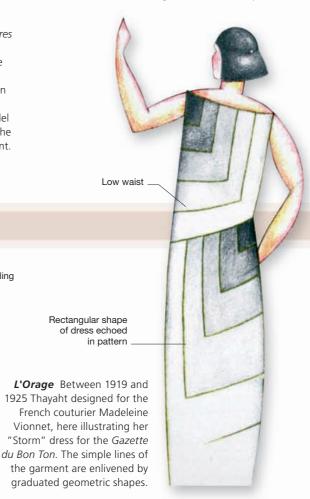

Sawtooth The decoration on the back of this linen coat by Sonia Delaunay is deliberately asymmetrical. While the coat's cut is simple, the aggressive jagged-edged shapes separating the light green central parts supply drama.

Diamonds Artist Sonia Delaunay used her bold, geometric, abstract patterns on many textiles and garments, including swimsuits. In this example, light blue silk is embroidered in red, white, and green diamond shapes.

FROMGLAMOUR TO UTILITY

1929-1946

FROM GLAMOUR TO UTILITY

The Wall Street Crash in the fall of 1929 brought the Roaring Twenties to an abrupt halt. Hemlines dropped suddenly while waistlines rose to a little above the natural waist—the reign of the youthful flapper was truly over. "Austerity day wear" for women was angled and slim fitting, with wide shoulder pads and calf-length skirts. During the day, the slimline silhouette was broken up and softened with clever seaming, belts, novelty buttons, deep cuffs, and pussy bows. In the evening, the focus shifted from legs to plunging backs with designers such as Lanvin, Mainboucher, and Chanel producing shimmering, floor-length dresses.

Fashion at the movies

During the 1930s New York ready-to-wear designers developed a new style that seemed to embody the nation's values. Their practical approach resulted in easy-to-wear pieces that could be adapted to different occasions by mixing and matching. At the opposite end of the scale, Hollywood designers Adrian, Walter Plunket, and Travis Banton created glamorous outfits for stars such as Jean Harlow, Joan Crawford, and Marlene Dietrich. These Hollywood styles were arguably the biggest influence on fashion in the 1930s. Out of reach for most, patterns and pared-down versions were available for those of less lavish means. Hollywood stars Fred Astaire, Cary Grant, and Gary Cooper set impossibly high standards for male beauty and elegance. The look became a best seller on both sides of the Atlantic, and many bought their suits in London's Savile Row.

Effects of the war

The start of World War II in 1939 brought an end to lavish, excessive designs. Many countries established a rationing system, trying to prevent the waste of scarce resources and ensure a fair distribution of garments. Decorative features such as excessive pleating and lace were abandoned, leading to simplified styles that constituted a kind of civilian uniform. Paris retained a skeletal couture industry after the invasion in 1940, but the rest of the world was cut off from French fashion dictates. New US fashions emerged and some hoped that French couture's sometimes excessive use of fabric and decorations had been banished forever, but this was not to be.

US WOMEN'S ARMY UNIFORMS, 1940s Three women model, from left to right, officer's winter uniform, officer's summer uniform, and auxiliary private's uniform.

It's no longer smart to be chic...The new mode is casual, bold, chunky and realistic.

VOGUE, 1936

heels, and gauntlet gloves

1935-36 1937-38 1939-40 1941-42 1943-44 1945-46 Italian-born Elsa Schiaparelli The Spanish designer England and France declare The Zoot Suit riots explode in opens her first designer Cristóbal Balenciaga opens war on Germany in September Los Angeles, California. White Boutique at 21 Place his couture house in Paris. 1939. Clothes have to be sailors and marines take He had had boutiques in Spain since 1918. practical. Vogue patterns are now for pants for volunteer umbrage at young Mexican-Vendôme, Paris, France. Americans wearing suits that drivers. Sweaters become the use large amounts of cloth. basis of most looks; skirts are long and full. We Can Do It! ▲ A pair of nylon stockings 1935 Nylon is invented by Wallace Carothers at DuPont's research facility. It is used as a substitute for silk in many different products. ▲ Rosie the Riveter Wartime pamphlet ▶ Edward VIII abdicates Rosie the Riveter is the star The first Paris collections after Rationing becomes severe, the throne of England. His of a song that praises the and where economies in the war foreshadow Dior's New Look of 1947. American mistress, Mrs. Wallis American women working in designs can be made, factories. Her much-admired Simpson, is dressed by they are. Fabrics are cheap Mainbocher for their wedding. practical image has her and cuts are sparing. dressed in a blue coveralls, hair concealed underneath a red spotted scarf. ▲ Gone with the Wind A highly visible, military 1939 presence provides inspiration for designers during wartime. Gone With The Wind is released, picking up Civilian fashion seeks to emulate the uniform of insecurity and emphasizing servicemen and women. a feminine, romantic note in fashion that would not be ■ Mrs. Wallis seen again until Dior's New Look in 1947. Simpson's wedding dress ▼ American Gls in Paris, 1944 Ties become wider, with bolder patterns that range from art deco designs to tropical themes. ▲ Slim-cut herringbone suit As more women take on paid employment, daytime looks are tailored and angular, with square epauletted shoulders, frogging, plumed hats, low

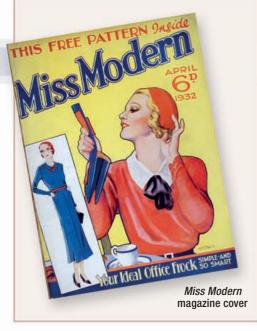

■ Hand-painted tie

AUSTERE TIMES

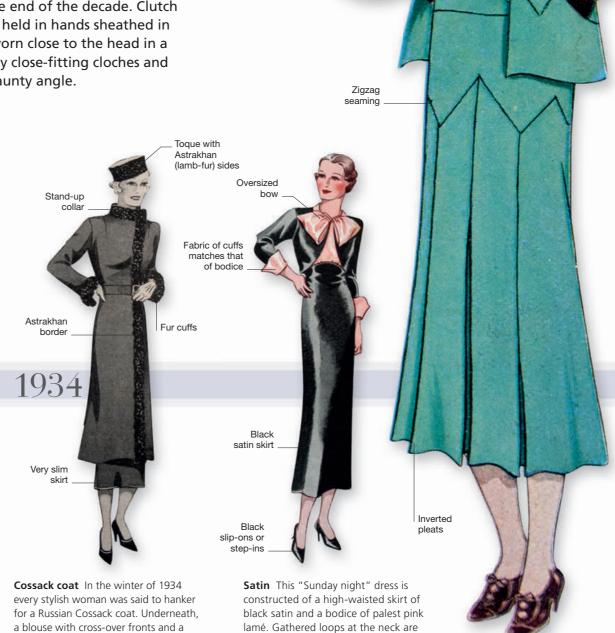

The Wall Street Crash forced the frivolous single girl of the 1920s to grow up and take life more seriously. The new silhouette was long and lean, emphasized by hemlines several inches below the knee, vertical seams, and slanting pockets. Perhaps in empathy with those actually on the breadline, anything round or full was abhorred, and women were all sharp angles and hipbones, their outlines sometimes softened by fur collars and cuffs. Linings or facings in contrasting colors, large pussy bows, belts, buttons, and deep cuffs were popular decorative features. Floral patterns were still fashionable for summer, while checks and plaids became particularly popular toward the end of the decade. Clutch bags, as slimline as their wearers, were held in hands sheathed in gloves with spiky gauntlets. Hair was worn close to the head in a permanent wave, at first still covered by close-fitting cloches and later adorned by a tiny hat worn at a jaunty angle.

MISS MODERN

Aimed at the unmarried working girl, Miss Modern was a "sixpenny," a cheap monthly British magazine first published in October 1930. Its ideal reader, shown here on the cover, was not afraid to check her makeup and adjust her hat in public using the mirror inside the flap of her fashionable clutch bag. The business girl could add to her stylish wardrobe using the free pattern for an "ideal office dress" inside the magazine.

straight skirt were recommended.

made to look like a large bow.

Collar and cuffs Astrakhan

(from a young lamb), fox, and other furs were often used for cuffs and, sometimes detachable, collars. Seams were used for decoration. Gloves and hats remained indispensable accessories for the fashionable woman.

Fur shawl collar

1931

Deep fur cuffs

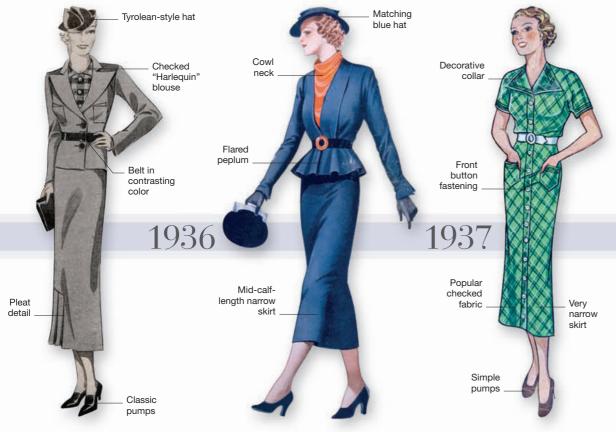

Sharp angles This modern take on the trench coat is provided with feminine touches such as metal buttons, ornamental cuffs, and contrasting lapel facings in blue leather.

Sober elegance The white facing of the lapels, pockets, and cuffs emphasize the diagonal lines and jagged edges that so often appeared in women's clothing in this decade.

Tartan Two vertical seams highlight the long lines of this dress of white wool jersey. Green and black écossais (Scottish) fabric was used for the yoke, puff sleeves, and belt.

Satin and lace The crêpe satin of this gown is draped at the waist to form a belt that turns into a small basque (skirt) on one side. Buttons above the bust and on the hips emphasize the asymmetric cut.

Versatility This suit could be made with plain or fur lapels and worn with or without its cape and vest. The blouse was worn untucked at the waist to keep the hips looking slim.

Stylish suit Gracing the front page of Spanish magazine Moda Practica, the jacket of this stylish navy suit has a full peplum, which flares over the hips to contrast with the slim line of the skirt.

Shirtdress In the 1930s many women still made their own clothes at home. The pattern for this simple, practical shirtdress came with a copy of Woman's Own magazine.

SHOES

The 1930s saw a range of shoe and heel shapes to choose from, particularly toward the end of the decade. Shoes with straps were gradually replaced with strapless opera pumps for everyday wear. "Sandals" (pumps with one or more straps) nevertheless continued to be worn in the summer and for dancing. Piping in a contrasting color or metallic leather was often used for decoration. Shoes with higher vamps, referred to as "slip-ons" or "step-ins," and lace-up styles, usually called Oxfords, were practical daytime choices. Wedge heels and open-toe styles heralded the 1940s.

SHIMMERING GOWNS

t the end of the 1920s the relatively brief reign of the short evening dress was over. The fashionable sipped cocktails in long, figure-hugging gowns that sometimes left little to the imagination. Frequently cut along the lines of swimwear, dresses were often precariously suspended from the thinnest of shoulder straps and left the backs of their wearers completely exposed. Shiny, fluid fabric—such as satin and lamé—was cut on the bias and manufactured into confections that clung to the body. If dieting did not have the desired effect, women could buy foundations made of the new "tu-way stretch" materials to achieve the all-important smooth, unbroken line. Women stepped out in whites, off-whites, silver, gold, and shades of apricot, peach, and salmon—if they were not wearing black.

Lamé dress American designer Jessie Franklin Turner used lamé to great effect in this bias-cut evening gown, making the wearer look as if sprayed with liquid metal. Unusually, the dress has long sleeves but still exposes glimpses of the upper body.

> Two wide shoulder straps

Very low back

Now slightly tarnished, fabric would have been much brighter originally 1933

Inventive piecing

of upper sleeves

Tight drapery across waist

Fashionable apricot The base color of French designer Jeanne Lanvin's evening dress is accentuated with silver sequin embroidery. The simply but elegantly cut dress is made of a synthetic material, which was used even in couture houses.

Silk fringing It looks as if widening bands of fringing have been applied to this clinging rayon dress by French designer Madeleine Vionnet. Closer inspection reveals that individual silk threads have been sewn on to the dress; each forms two drops of fringe.

Modernist pattern The relatively simple cut of American designer Elizabeth Hawes's evening dress ensures that the focus is on the modernist pattern of the fabric. The large falling leaves accentuate the movement of the flaring skirt.

Bows accentuate breasts

1939

Bows grow larger toward hem

High neckline with bow detail

at back of neck

Lamé underdress shines through

Fluid material The cut and material of this English dress would have necessitated the right kind of underwear. The gown bears no label but the simple embroidery design suggests that it might have been made by a local dressmaker.

Cap-sleeved overdress The overdress of Madeleine Vionnet's design is made of very fine black lace decorated with black bows. The shimmering silver lamé underdress, with a halter neck and very low back, could be worn on its own.

Butterfly embroidery This fine silk dress by French designer Mainbocher is embroidered with butterflies in iridescent spangles, which grow larger toward the hem. The dress would have been worn over a flesh-colored slip.

Revealing cut The cut of this dress by French designer Coco Chanel would have highlighted the wearer's fashionably bronzed back and arms. Gathered and draped in front and hugging the waist, the gown's skirt flares out below the hip.

JEAN HARLOW

When Howard Hughes's movie Hell's Angels was released in 1930, 19-year-old Jean Harlow became an international star. Harlow popularized the white evening gown, and by bleaching her hair weekly completed the look and had an indirect influence on the sale of peroxide. American designer Adrian (Gilbert Adrian) created gowns for Harlow's role in Reckless (1935, above), accentuating her body with clinging, bias-cut dresses made of light-reflecting materials.

CLASSICISM

n September 1930 the French magazine L'Officiel de la Mode observed "a tendency towards Lclassicism and pure Greek lines" in the latest collection of the Paris fashion houses, singling out Vionnet as having been "decidedly" influenced by Greek art. In the previous decade appreciation of ancient styles had found expression in the use of patterns such as the meander or the Greek key. The return to long evening gowns in the 1930s enabled couturiers to transform their clients into Greek or Roman statues. The look of original garments from the classical period had been a matter of chance coupled with the wearer's skill for drapery. Neoclassical gowns were more structured—the drapery and folds more controlled—drawing attention to the body underneath. The use of fluid fabrics such as silk jersey or satin, asymmetry, and decorative borders were trademarks of this new line. White and off-white governed this style, but black, and occasionally brighter colors, were also used.

MADAME GRÈS

1937

Slightly

In 1933 Germaine Krebs began to create clothes under the assumed name of Alix Barton. She changed her name again when she opened the House of Grès in Paris in 1942. Having trained as a sculptress, Mme Grès liked to drape her pleated evening gowns on a model or stand. She often used silk jersey, which molded itself to the wearer's body, for her neoclassical designs. Her success continued until the 1980s.

Alix Barton Silk or wool jersey was a favorite material of Alix Barton (later known as Madame Grès), which she used to create gowns reminiscent of Ancient Greek dress. The drapery is often held together by drawstrings, ties, or girdles.

Leather accents This dress's classical feel is created through very clean lines and the belt's gold and silver pattern. The scrollwork is made of metallic leather, a material French designer Lanvin experimented with in the mid-1930s.

Scarves Trailing pieces of fabric, often attached to the shoulders, were a common feature of neoclassical dresses. The statuesque silhouette of this Dove evening gown by the English company Motley is emphasized by the brooch and the model's hairstyle.

Asymmetric design

Simple drapes White and black were common colors for neoclassical dresses, but Madeleine Vionnet chose a deep orange for this pared-down design. Fabric gathered at one shoulder is draped over the bust while falling to the floor at the back.

Scrolls Unlike the evening gowns of the 1920s, neoclassical dresses were usually only sparsely embroidered so that the sculptural lines were not broken. The halter neck of this gown is reminiscent of a pectoral (crescent-shaped) necklace.

Ancient Rome The Hungarian-born American designer Eta Hentz transformed the loose and more accidental drapery of Ancient Rome into an evening gown that left little to chance. This neoclassical silhouette is supported by a decorative border.

SCULPTURES

In the short period of peace between the two world wars designers turned to the classical era of ancient Greece and Rome. To those reeling from the horrors of World War I, classical antiquity stood for a golden time of proportion, pared-back beauty, purity, and a life-affirming appreciation of the human body.

French fashion designer Madeleine Vionnet (1876–1975) created her women's wear shapes of the 1930s from the drapery and perfect body forms of classical statues. Her twin concerns were fabric and the body. Famous for her genius with the bias cut, she draped fluid materials such as silk crêpe to create simple, loosely structured day wear and dramatic evening wear with minimal sewing and embellishment and without corsetry or petticoats. Her garments clung sensuously, shocking her customers. Early 1920s dresses with pointed drapery resemble the Greek peplos, while a dress from 1918–19, which hangs from the shoulders with an uneven hemline and cowl neckline, recalls the chlamys and chiton from ancient Rome.

66

She made a Greek dress in a way the Greeks could never have imagined; there was nothing archaic about her lines. Everything Vionnet created had a cling or a flow, and women dressed by her were like moving sculptures.

CECIL BEATON

99

THE CLASSICAL MUSE ▷

This photograph by leading photographer George Hoyningen-Huene, c.1931, shows Sonia, Vionnet's favorite model, looking like a graceful dancing figure from a Greek vase in her pale silk crêpe romaine pajamas and long scarf. The model had to lie down for the photographer to achieve the desired effect.

PARED DOWN AND SPORTY

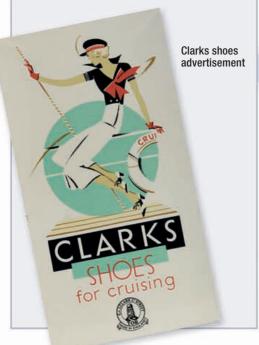

ports continued to play a part in pushing fashion forward, although women did not take up new sports during this period. "Form follows function" was the guiding principle for clothing worn for physical activities. This usually meant partial or complete abandonment of ornament, which resulted in a pared-down and modern look. Particularly in America, the term sportswear became common not just for clothes worn for tennis or golf, but also for resort wear designed for travel and leisure, and for casual but stylish clothing for town and country. The aviatrix Amelia Earhart designed a range of sportswear for American department stores. Pajamas—ensembles incorporating Pajamas—ensembles incorporating wide-legged pants—continued to be a fashionable choice for the beach and on the yacht, and provided scope for innovative designs.

FOR THE YACHT

Sailing for pleasure was a relatively new phenomenon, requiring a special set of clothing. Etiquette books and magazines advised planning so that all occasions were covered. This advertisement for Clarks shoes was probably intended to appeal to the aspirational shopper.

On the beach The English aviatrix Amy Johnson Mollison wore beach pajamas for a party in 1933. She and her husband had just flown nonstop to the US, surviving a crashlanding in Connecticut.

Air-sportswoman To keep out the cold, aviators customarily wore leather clothing. Amelia Earhart, here photographed in 1928 before crossing the Atlantic, reportedly slept in her first leather jacket for three days to make it look worn.

DRIVING GLOVES

Gloves for driving incorporated gauntlets for practical reasons but they also began to appear as a decorative feature in fashion accessories. That this hand-sewn pair was intended for driving rather than everyday wear is indicated by the strap with which the gloves could be buttoned closely around the wrist. In a period when hand signals were still used for indicating, the reflective triangle was functional. Black and white were popular colors for women's gloves in the 1930s.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

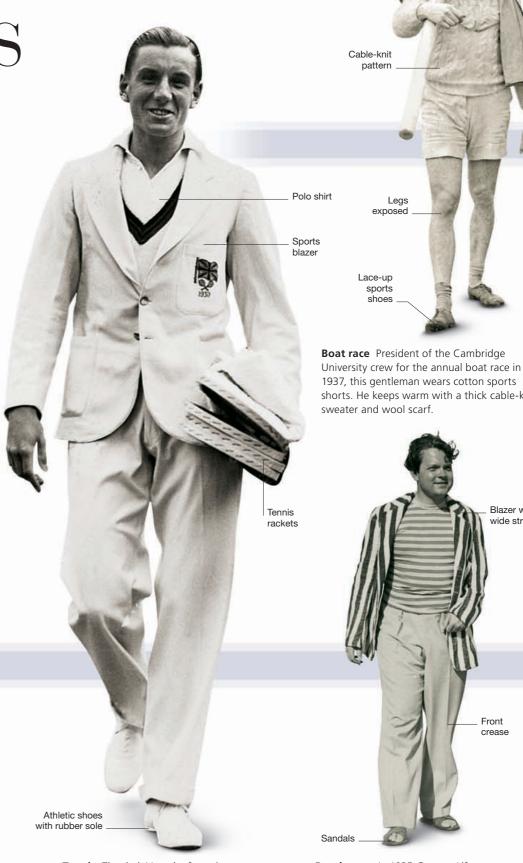

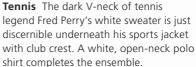

In 1930 Mary Bagot Stack founded the Women's League of Health and Beauty. Her daughter, Prunella, became the poster girl of the league with its motto "Movement is Life." The league organized several performances of exercise routines en masse—one occasion involved 5,000 women. The official exercise uniform consisted of black satin shorts and a sleeveless white "waist" (blouse). Apparently members were advised to shave their armpits and to use deodorant.

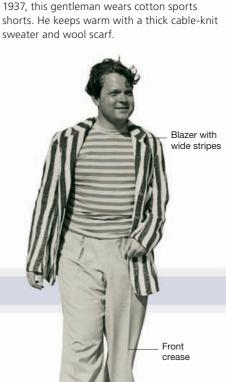

RELAXING THE RULES

n the slopes, the tennis court, and the yacht the sartorial rules governing men's clothing in the city could be stretched or even abandoned. The move toward lighter fabrics continued, increasing the emphasis on the body underneath. In summer gray, white, beige, or striped flannels (trousers made of a light wool fabric) were popular. In England their cotton or linen equivalent—white ducks were supposed to be paired with a blue blazer only. The sports jacket had emerged in the late 19th century when it could be seen in rowing clubs. Team blazers could be brightly colored, striped, or have contrasting edging, and often displayed a crest or insignia on the breast pocket. The polo shirt, despite its name, was originally worn for tennis and golf and had been around for at least a decade, but now became ubiquitous.

Long scar

Legs

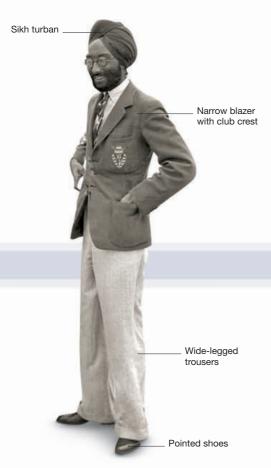

Lace-up

sports shoes

Cable-knit pattern

Beachwear In 1935 Country Life announced that "men can get away with more in the way of colorful beachwear." This thought might have been behind Orson Welles's choice of a striped blazer and jersey top, light trousers, and sandals.

RELAXING THE RULES

Punjabi prince The trousers worn by the dapper Raja Ravi-Sher Singh of Kalsia, India, at Croydon Aerodrome are almost wide enough to qualify as "Oxford bags." The Raja's slim frame is emphasized by his tight, single-breasted sports jacket.

Health and comfort The Men's Dress Reform Party (MDRP) was founded in London in 1929 to rail against restrictive clothing. During a Dress Reform competition a male model poses in a waterproof jacket and shorts.

Henley Regatta While many men used the occasion of the boat race at Henley to don blazers in colors or stripes that declared their allegiance to a club or country, this gentleman opted for white ducks and a double-breasted blue blazer.

Golf Life magazine in 1938 declared Charles Munn, who made his money from greyhound tracks, "Palm Beach's most eligible bachelor." Here, Munn replaces the more customary plus fours with wide trousers with cuffs.

JAEGER

The London company of Jaeger had promoted wool clothing since the late 19th century. After the Prince of Wales championed the distinctive Fair Isle pattern, golf pullovers became a staple of the sports wardrobe. Both men in this advertisement wear their pullovers with shirt and tie. Matching golf hose (knee-length knit socks) were also available.

S FOURS WEED THREE PIECE

Slightly sloping shoulders

knickerbockers, plus fours were respectable enough by the matches exactly at every seam, a mark of good tailoring. 1930s to be worn outside their natural environment—the checked tweed in brown, beige, and gray. The pattern ade popular in the 1920s by the British Prince of Wales (later King Edward VIII), plus fours (baggy of the century. Named for the number of inches they fell golf course. This suit by Couch & Hoskin, London, is of below the knee, and roomier than the more traditional Lbreeches) had first appeared at the beginning place the welt, or stand jackets, breast pockets In traditionally tailored the tailor has tried to △ BREAST POCKET angle. For this jacket are usually set at an

△ SLEEVE BUTTONS

Two or three buttons continued to be placed at the bottom of the coat sleeves, although they no longer served a function.

△ BELT AND SUSPENDERS

The waist could be adjusted by buckled straps at the back.
Additionally, suspenders were worn to ensure the trousers stayed in place.

FRONT PLEATS

The front of the trousers is set into two pleats on each side—here tucked vest—to create fullness.

Plus fours had to sit tightly around the knees to achieve the desired effect. Knit "cuffs" were considered more comfortable than the closure seen here.

∨EST

The front of the vest is made of tweed; the back from the same brown silk that lines the jacket. The vest is finished at the back with a small self-belt and buckle so that the garment can be adjusted to fit.

FASHION ICON

EDWARD VIII

△ STYLISH SUITING

This photograph from around 1936, the year of Edward's abdication, shows him in a draped suit with notched lapel, a tabbed shirt collar, and a boldly patterned handkerchief in his breast pocket.

GOLFING GEAR ▷

This iconic portrait, painted by William Orpen in 1927, highlights Edward's famed love of Fair Isle sweaters and large plus fours, which helped to bring casual sportswear into everyday dress.

dward VIII's reign as British monarch may have been brief, but he left a lasting imprint as a fashion icon. After abdicating in 1936 to marry US divorcée Wallis Simpson, the Duke of Windsor became one of the international leaders in men's fashion and was largely responsible for the rise of casual menswear in the 1930s.

Dressing down

Charming, youthful, good looking, and with a slight frame, the blond prince was an ideal model for a revolution in tailoring. The early 1930s saw the introduction of a new style of suit that became known as the "English drape," characterized by a loose-fitting cut in the jacket, with a full chest and a defined waist. This relaxed style was promoted by Savile Row tailor, Anderson & Sheppard, and Edward soon adopted this less stuffy approach. Many of Anderson & Sheppard's other highprofile clients, such as Fred Astaire and Gary Cooper, emulated the prince's style by sporting the pioneering casual look he popularized.

Edward's promotion of casual style also led to the rise of lounge suits, which increasingly superseded more formal attire from the 1920s. By the 1940s a sweater was often worn in place of a vest. The Fair Isle sweater, previously worn only as sportswear, was widely adopted as casual wear. He also helped to promote wearing plus fours off the golf course.

Among Edward's other style statements were tweed sports jackets; low, two-tone or brown suede shoes; chalk-striped wool fabrics; bold patterns and colors—such as checked and plaid suits (including the Prince of Wales check); and belts rather than suspenders, a practice drawn from American style.

Colors, collars, and cuffs

Edward's trendsetting role extended to evening wear. His casual style included wearing double-breasted tuxedostyle jackets rather than tailcoats. His love of midnightblue evening wear also caught on, while other jacket favorites included longer hems, and lapels that extended all the way down to the bottom buttons; he preferred four buttons to the usual six.

Edward is further credited with having popularized a number of details in men's formal attire, such as tab collars, nonstiffened shirt cuffs for evening wear, cuffs on trousers, soft collars, and striped ties. The wide "Windsor" tie knot was named after him, as was the "Prince of Wales" or "Windsor" collar, widely cut to accommodate the knot.

The face of men's fashion

Edward's impact on men's fashion spread well beyond his contemporaries. His checked and plaid suits were a likely influence on the postwar American fashions for plaid sports coats and checked shirts.

More recently, designers such as Tom Ford have been inspired by his elegance and admiration for tailoring. Other innovators emulate the way in which Edward subverted and adapted traditional styles: Hedi Slimane's emphasis on a slender silhouette, Lucas Ossendrijver's loose-fitting suits, and Thom Browne's conscious revival of 1930s style through bold prints and cropped trousers, to name just a few.

More than any other factor, however, it was Edward's questioning of conventions of male dress, along with his desire to adapt clothes to the needs of the wearer, that left a mark on men's fashion that has lasted from the 1920s to the present day.

1911 Invested as Prince of Wales at Caernarfon Castle

> 1914 Begins his service in the army at the start of World War

1918 Returns home at the end of World War I

▶ 1923 Cuts a dashing figure in riding outfit with double-breasted coat and leather boots

O 1920

1936 Ascends the throne as King Edward VIII in January. Abdicates in December the same year

> 1931 Meets Wallis Simpson for the first time at the house of Lady Furness

1937 Marries twicedivorced American Wallis Simpson

1940 Installed as Governor of the Bahamas, a post he holds

1945 Wallis and Edward return to Europe changes in royal life and fashions through history 1957 Gives a heart-shaped Cartier brooch with the ▶ 1960 Publishes his book,

A Family Album, charting the couple's initials engraved on it to Wallis on their 20th wedding anniversary

O 1950

O 1910

O 1930

O 1940

THE ELEGANT MALE

ust as the female body had become toned and tanned during the 1920s, so the male physique had also been modified into the new ideal shape of wide shoulders, prominent chest, and narrow hips. If wholehearted participation in outdoor sports had failed to produce results, then his suit might do the trick. The master of the flattering cut was the London tailor Frederick Scholte, who distilled three characteristics of the uniform of the Household Cavalry—narrow waists, wide shoulders, and roomy armholes—into what came to be known as the "London cut." First popularized in the US by the Prince of Wales, this was soon followed by Hollywood celebrities, who began to displace the British aristocracy and upper class as fashion icons. Double-breasted coats, peaked lapels, and striped suiting were popular, since they further helped to achieve the desired athletic silhouette.

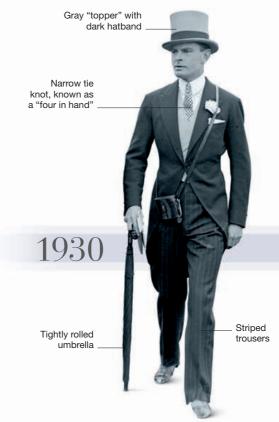

SUITS FOR WOMEN

In a famous scene from the 1930 film Morocco, Marlene Dietrich, playing a nightclub singer, performed in a black tailcoat. Dietrich also wore suits offscreen and her studio exploited her style. Publicity photos showed Dietrich in a gray suit with black turtleneck sweater and beret, and the star turned up for a film premiere in a tuxedo. Dietrich's preference was said to have started a trend, but formal trousers for women did not really catch on.

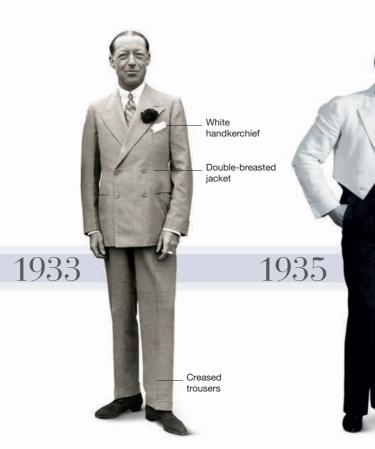

Lounge suit Conservative politician Anthony Eden was a fashion leader. His trademark outfit was a white linen waistcoat (vest) worn with a lounge suit and his favorite silk-brimmed homburg hat, which became known as the "Anthony Eden."

Derby Day In the 1930s morning coats would rarely have been seen on city streets but were still worn at the races. Here, Sir John Buchanan-Jardine has chosen a double-breasted waistcoat (vest) with a shawl collar to wear underneath his coat

White suit Born in Corsica, singer Tino Rossi performed in clubs on the French Riviera before moving to Paris in the 1930s. White suits were usually for resort wear, and were accessorized with white or tan and white shoes.

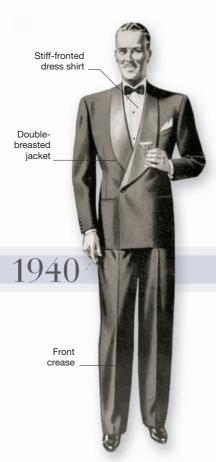

Honeymoon suit Newly wed Lord Furness is dressed for a honeymoon trip in his private airplane. He wears a stylish double-breasted jacket with peaked lapels; the black carnation buttonhole may be a symbol of mourning.

Reefer jacket Prince Arthur of Connaught, Queen Victoria's grandson, shows how to wear this jacket correctly. All three buttons should be closed when there are no "show" (purely decorative) buttons at the top.

Mess jacket For a short period during the 1930s the tailless "mess jacket" became an alternative for the white dinner jacket in hot weather. This fashion was borrowed from military "mess dress" (formal evening wear).

at top

Dinner jacket suit The double-breasted dinner jacket was considered slightly more informal than the single-breasted variety. It usually had shawl lapels that could be faced with gleaming satin instead of silk n 1929 the writer and translator Franz Hessel published observations made during walks in Berlin. He remarked that the sight of young women in "well-fitted clothes and little hats oozing a lock of hair" should be enough to convince anyone that "Berlin is well on the way to becoming an elegant city." The many Konfektion (ready-to-wear) manufacturers based in Berlin had long transformed the dictates of Paris into clothes displaying the famous Berliner chic. While the "golden twenties" lasted—from around 1923 to 1929—Berlin became a magnet for artists, writers, and performers such as Josephine Baker who appeared with La Revue Nègre in 1925. Audiences flocked to the theaters, watched productions of the Berlin-based UFA—Germany's largest movie company—in thousand-seater cinemas, and gaped at synchronized chorus lines. Entertainment of a different kind could be found in Berlin's many gay and lesbian clubs, including the Eldorado where transvestites mingled with members of Berlin's high society.

BERLINER CHIC

Kaufhaus des Westens (Department Store of the West), or KaDeWe, was and still is one of Berlin's leading retail establishments. Opened in 1907, its 120 departments housed smaller shops. The owner hoped to satisfy the desires of Berlin's high society. This poster advertises Lindener Samt (velvet from Linden)—a high-quality cotton velvet.

appeared on the stage in Vienna and also found time to appear in the silent movie Electric Café.

Here, she models a modernist day ensemble.

by a lookalike of the surrealist muse Lee Miller.

around the wearer while dancing.

Ostrich feathers dyed in a matching color floated

Dark stage makeup

Ostrich-feather fan

Asymmetrical dropped waist

Tiered skirt

The Berlin look This couple, from a 1920 sheet-music cover, is dressed in the height of fashion. She wears a long jersey top over a very short skirt, while he has belted his trench coat at just the right height and brushed his hair back aviator style.

1920

Long jersey top with hem in contrasting color

> Short pleated skirt

Dark

stockings

In 1924 Eric Charell, director of a large theater in Berlin, produced his first revue.

neckpiece

Narrow trousers

Soft

toque

Much of its success was due to the appearance of the famous Tiller Girls from London, who dazzled audiences with their synchronized movements. Troupes danced in identical costumes such as these skimpy ensembles with short hemlines, playful top hats, and tap shoes. One critic wrote that "the rhythm, the lightness, the exactness are electrifying."

Window shopping This manneguin, displayed in a draper's shop window, perfectly conveys the fashionable silhouette and showcases popular accessories of the period, such as the long pearl necklace and the ostrich-feather fan.

Ornamented

1925

Wide-skirted trench coat

Skirt lower

bandeau

Shoulder straps and belt encrusted with jewels

Fluid fabric

Lamé German actress Brigitte Helm's choice of shimmering lamé might be related to the title of the science-fiction movie Gold, in which she starred in 1934. Metallic fabrics like lamé draped over the body and caught the light on camera.

CHORUS LINE

292

1930-1944

ROMANTIC NOSTALGIA

here seems to be a limit to the amount of modernity and restraint fashion can endure. Robes de style (with loose bodices, dropped waists, and full skirts) had preserved prettiness and the traditional idea of femininity throughout the 1920s. Now diaphanous concoctions trimmed with an abundance of frills, ruffles, and lace became popular with those too young, too old, or not streamlined enough to squeeze their bodies into an unforgiving lamé or satin sheath. Adrian's design for Joan Crawford playing Letty Lynton in the eponymous 1932 film is widely credited with starting this trend. Deflated versions of the gigantic ruffled sleeves of the star's dress of white mousseline de soie (a thin fabric made of silk or rayon) remained fashionable until the end of the decade, and even crept into Walter Plunkett's costume designs for Gone with the Wind in 1939. Britain's Queen Elizabeth gave her royal seal of approval when she wore her famous "White Wardrobe," a series of romantic gowns based on Winterhalter paintings during a state visit to Paris in 1938.

Flower trail French designer Lanvin opted for a more sophisticated romanticism avoiding puff sleeves, ruffles, or lace. The prettiness of the flowers in different shades of pink that seem to be encircling the wearer's body is counteracted by the use of black for the tendrils or branches.

Nostalgia Chanel's white cotton evening dress, with its slim silhouette, puffed sleeves, and low neckline, is reminiscent of Edwardian fashion.

Narrow rows of delicate ruching add to the nostalgic feel of the 1937 design.

Debutante look This high-waisted gown of Devonshire silk net in love-in-a-mist blue would have been considered more appropriate as evening wear than a clinging dress for a young, unmarried woman.

Fragility French designer Vionnet has not only used a lingerie technique for some of the decorative seams of this gown, but also a color that was fashionable for delicate underwear. The covered décolletage, elbow-length sleeves, and wide skirt contradict this association.

Victorian This embroidered tulle gown was photographed for the high-end Texan department store Neiman Marcus in 1939. Sequins encircle the skirt to create a tiered appearance, evoking the Victorian charm of a Winterhalter painting.

Organza Made from layers of delicately printed silk organza over fine netting, this meticulously crafted evening gown by Madeleine Vionnet has an ethereal beauty. Full sleeves of translucent panels and a gently gathered collar enhance the romantic style.

Contrasting shapes American Charles James created this gown for the socialite and fashion icon Millicent Rogers. The corsetlike bodice contrasts with the diaphanous silk draped softly at the neck and gathered at the wrists.

DREAM DRESSES

urrealists tried to trick the subconscious into revealing itself by using methods influenced by the writings of Sigmund Freud: free association, dream analysis, and automatic writing. Seeking to achieve freedom from rationality, much of the output of this loose, Paris-centered group of artists, writers, and filmmakers had a dreamlike quality. Ordinary objects were taken out of their natural environments and plunged into new ones, creating a world "beyond realism." Many surrealists were fascinated with disguise and costume dress, and some were directly involved in the creation of fashionable clothes and imagery. Man Ray's fashion and advertising photographs were published in Vogue and Harper's Bazaar. Salvador Dali, Alberto Giacometti, Meret Oppenheim, and Jean Cocteau all collaborated with Elsa Schiaparelli on designs of clothes and accessories.

Startling juxtapositions and the use of motifs from other contexts could be found in the work of several couturiers in the late 1930s and early 1940s, and surrealism continues to influence fashion today.

lobster red 1937 Silk organza and horsehair Dali lobster print Lobster Salvador Dali had incorporated lobsters into his work a few years prior to his collaboration with extend from French designer Schiaparelli. Cecil Beaton photographed sleeves Wallis Simpson in one of the few copies of this dress, not long before her marriage to the Duke of Windsor. Puff sleeves Cuffs Contrasting Skirt flares out ribbon feature below hip Cross-ove drapery 1939 printed Fabric printed on fabric with masks Pants worn

Worn with underslip

Relt in

Wide

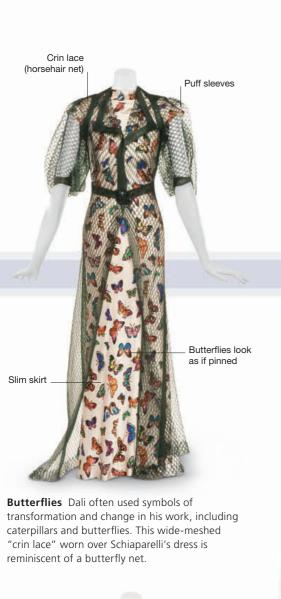

SURREALIST ACCESSORIES

Handbags and hats in particular lent themselves to the surrealist treatment, since they did not have to fit to the human body. These telephone and champagne bucket bags were made by Anne Marie of Paris, a store based in the Parisian Hotel Meurice in the late 1940s. Possibly the most famous surrealist accessory was a hat in the form of a high-heeled shoe turned upside down. It was based on a sketch by Salvador Dali and featured in Elsa Schiaparelli's 1937–38 Fall/ Winter collection.

Masks Jean Cocteau designed the fabric for this dress by US-based Charles James, incorporating portraits of himself and his lover—actor Jean Marais. Cocteau denied the influence of surrealism on his work, but his movies, in particular, have surrealist qualities.

Horses Lounging pajamas were in some ways the successors of the tea gown and could be worn for receiving guests at home. The rearing horses give a fantasy flourish to this witty example by the American designer Elizabeth Hawes.

Wide shoulders

Feathers The French House of Lanvin is not generally associated with surrealism. But the pattern of the fabric of this evening gown featuring outsize feathers tumbling to the hem, as well as the surprising name Fusée (Rocket), give it a dreamlike quality.

1938

Exaggerated shoulders

Decoration ends at elbow

Silk crêpe fabric

Some feathers are embroidered in red

Very narrow skirt

Skeleton Part of Schiaparelli's 1938 Circus collection, this dress is the result of another collaboration with Dali. Trapunto (stuffed technique) quilting is used to create raised shapes, resembling a human spine, ribs, and leg bones.

Fine cartridge

pleats

Elephant Jo Copeland's dinner dress with its appliquéd elephant and turbaned rider is faintly reminiscent of Schiaparelli's 1938 Circus collection. Copeland also made reference to fellow-American Adrian in this design.

Printed

Stallion Hollywood designer Adrian was a fan of Schiaparelli. He used textiles by Dali in some of his creations and transformed this simple black column of a gown with a menacing-looking Roan Stallion.

DESIGNER

SCHIAPARELLI

♦ ourageous and highly original, Italian-born Elsa Schiaparelli was one of the leading designers of the 1930s. Like her rival Coco Chanel, "Schiap" did not have any couture training, which seems to have made it easier for her to disregard sartorial conventions. Observing the trend toward sportswear while living in the US in the early 1920s, Schiaparelli started off with practical knitwear that already displayed her determination to inject humor into fashion. The sign outside her first establishment at 4 Rue de la Paix in Paris displayed Pour le Sport underneath her name, later to be joined by Pour la Ville and Pour le Soir—for the city and the evening.

Art and inventions

Schiaparelli was interested in art from a young age and published a selection of poetry as a teenager. She was not the only designer to work with artists but her collections seem to bear a more obvious trace of the influence of collaborators such as Jean Cocteau and Salvador Dali.

Like the surrealists, Schiaparelli enjoyed shaking up tradition and introduced fabric and other items into new and unexpected contexts: she used tweed for evening wear, waterproofed taffeta for raincoats, and fashioned hats into the shape of shoes and lamb cutlets. Buttons brought out particular spurts of inventiveness, and they appeared in the shape of animals, such as fish and butterflies, as well as chessmen, lollipops, and even miniature trapeze artists.

Excited by anything new, Schiaparelli worked with enterprising fabric manufacturers such as Charles Colcombet and was happy to use synthetic textiles such as rayon and nylon, and even cellophane and Rhodophane, a transparent plastic. At the same time the designer had a long-standing working relation with Lesage, the famous Paris embroidery firm dating back to the mid-19th century. Schiaparelli was one of the first fashion designers to realize the creative potential of zippers, although, as she admitted, "King Button still reigned without fear at Schiap's," at least before World War I.

Stars of the stage and screen loved this mixture of practicality and flamboyance, and Schiaparelli counted Katherine Hepburn, Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, and Marlene Dietrich among her clients, not forgetting Wallis Simpson, the future Duchess of Windsor.

Daring to be different

Schiaparelli delighted in wearing head-turning creations herself, remembering in her 1954 autobiography that before World War II, "People were not afraid of being different." Her clients had to have a similar attitude. When tennis star Lily d'Alvarez appeared at the Wimbledon tournament in 1931 wearing a Schiaparelli divided skirt, there was a public outcry.

Schiaparelli's signature color was a shade of magenta which she called "shocking pink," and in 1937 her perfume Shocking was packaged in a bottle shaped like the film star Mae West's torso. Schiaparelli introduced themed collections and in the late 1930s was inspired by music, the circus, astrology, and even shopping. Her Cash and Carry collection for the spring of 1940 featured large pockets.

After World War II ended, the "hard chic" look of the 1930s was replaced by ultrafeminine styles, which did not suit Schiaparelli's particular brand of creativity. While her star no longer shines as brightly as in her own lifetime, Schiaparelli's irreverent take on fashion was later emulated by Moschino and Jean Paul Gaultier.

△ THE DIVIDED SKIRT, 1935

Schianarelli models one of her own creations, a jupe-culotte (pants-skirt), in London's Hyde Park. Considered appropriate resort wear, this kind of garment probably raised eyebrows being paraded on city streets.

⊲ THE TEARS DRESS

Designed in collaboration with Dali for the Circus Collection in 1938, the textile for this evening dress and matching veil was printed to look as if it was torn, apparently revealing the shocking pink lining

1890 Born in Rome into a conservative family of aristocrats and intellectuals

> 1913 En route to London, attends her first ball in Paris in a blue and orange ballgown she made herself

1919 Moves to New York

1922 Returns to Paris

her to design clothes

where Poiret encourages where she mixes with an arty crowd including Man Ray, Marcel Duchamp. Francis Picabia, and his wife Gaby

1932 Wears slim evening dress of white crêpe with red velvet bolero in Saint Moritz, further popularizing the short evening jacket

1927 Launches her first collection of hand-knit sweaters and opens her first store at 4 Rue de la Paix a year later

▶ 1941 Moves to New York for duration of World War II. Returns to Paris in 1945 and continues to shock with new twists on evening wear

< 1935 Moves business to 21 Place Vendome (the "Schian Shop"). Collaborates with artists Salvador Dali, Alberto Giacometti, and, for this piece. Jean Cocteau

1954 Stops designing and publishes her autobiography Shocking Life

> 1973 Dies in Paris

O 1970

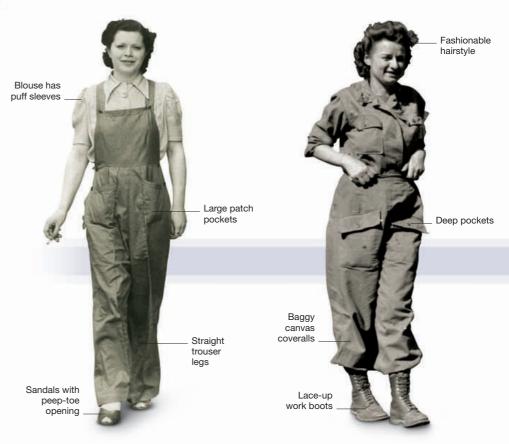

O 1890

O 1920

O 1930

WOMEN IN WARTIME

uring World War II about 400,000 women joined the US army and nearly half a million women served in the British armed forces; an even greater number was involved in voluntary services. An attractive uniform could work as a recruiting tool and the blue double-breasted jacket and skirt of the British Women's Royal Naval Service (WRENS) was considered especially becoming. In contrast, Life magazine remarked that the "Women's Land Army is unpopular because of the drab costume." Ladies of means had uniforms made to measure at Austin Reed and Moss Bros; others had to alter and adjust the standard issue. Regulations not only governed dress—members of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force had to ensure that their hair was cut or coiffed so that it did not touch their jackets. Some services tried in vain to ban makeup, but this proved difficult to enforce.

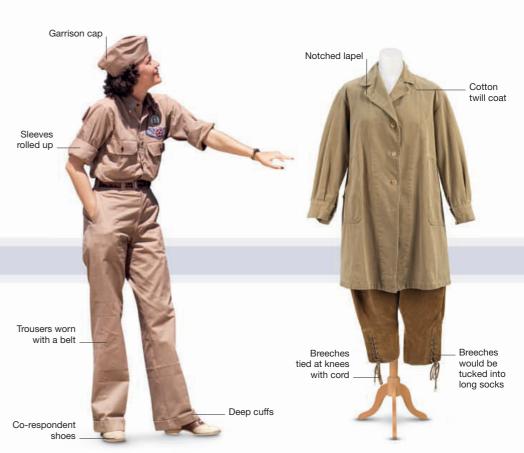

Overalls This young woman might have chosen her outfit because cotton overalls did not use up any of her rationing coupons. She has swapped her work shoes for peep-toe sandals.

Coveralls Going about her wartime occupation, this woman sports heavy-duty coveralls and solid leather boots. Despite the masculine clothing, she maintains her femininity with her carefully styled hairdo.

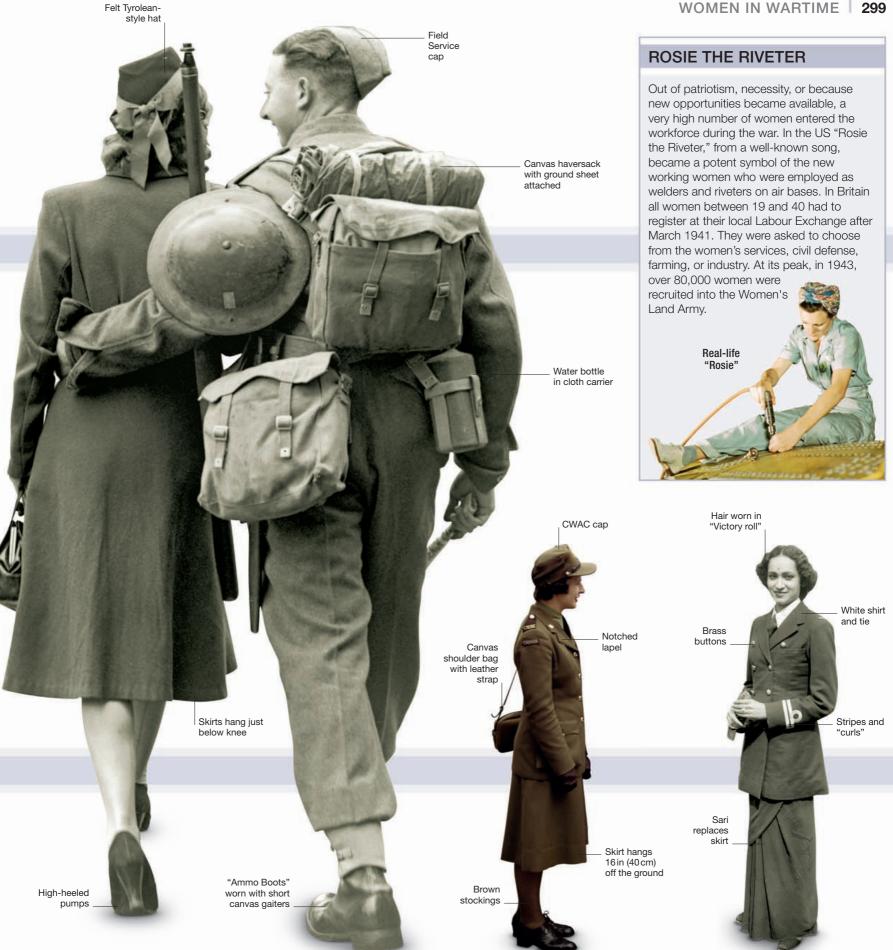

Women were urged to assist in the war effort by knitting gloves, scarves, gum-boot stockings, knee caps, and chest protectors for "our boys in the forces." The scarcity of wool meant that knitters were encouraged to unpick their old garments. In the US the Red Cross issued pamphlets with patterns and instructions, and was responsible for the distribution of the knit items. America's first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt, addressed a "Knit for Defense" tea in New York, and was frequently photographed knitting.

Summer uniform This woman working in a US Naval Base in Texas wears a uniform similar to that of a US army private. The outfit is made from cotton khaki. Women's trousers usually closed at the side.

Land Army The Women's Land Army uniform included corduroy or whipcord breeches and long-sleeved, cotton twill coveralls worn with brown brogues and tan knee-length socks. Recruits also wore a green V-neck sweater, tan shirt, and tie.

Soldier's sweetheart The man is in his British Army combat uniform (P-37 or pattern 37). The pattern was based on skiwear of the time. His girlfriend's coat has fashionably wide shoulders and a swing skirt. She wears a small-brimmed hat—hats did not require coupons.

Army corps The uniform of the Canadian Women's Army Corps (CWAC) consisted of a drab-colored barathea (fine wool) jacket and skirt worn with a khaki drill shirt, brown necktie, and canvas bag.

WRINS The Women's Royal Indian Naval Service based its uniform on that of the WRENS, their British equivalent. However, instead of a skirt, they wore a sari with a slightly longer jacket, white shirt, and tie.

KHAKI TUNIC AND SKIRT

continued to act as drivers for the military and run canteens The corps was founded by the Marchioness of Londonderry Women's Legion, working alongside ARP (Air Raid members working directly with the army in catering and This khaki uniform was worn by a volunteer in the during World War I and at its peak had more than 6,000 Precaution) wardens in England in World War II. and support victims in the aftermath of bombing raids. transportation. During World War II Legion members

△ BUTTONS

The World War I design bearing the Legion letters was retained for buttons on the epaulettes and pockets, and closing the tunic or jacket.

△ SHIRT AND TIE

Civilian coupons were needed for the shirt permitted and only a minimum of makeup and tie. Jewelry and handbags were not was allowed.

△ POCKETS

slouching with hands in pockets was forbidden. Notebook pockets had to be worn flat; equipment loops and a stud and keeper to hold the end in position. ♥ LEATHER BELTThe broad belt has corps, and to maintain a "smart alert bearing" at all times. were required to wear movement. Members full uniform correctly when working in the Side and back vents shape the tunic and allow freedom of merican General Limitation Order L-85 and Britain's austerity regulations had a greater effect on women's fashion than on men's. Menswear features such as patch pockets, "fancy backs," pants cuffs, and the buckles on vest adjusters were abandoned, but this did not make much difference to the wide-legged, long-coated silhouette. More important were wartime shortages, which played their part in the demise of different suit types for different occasions. Even before the war, an ample wardrobe had been beyond the reach of most men. Now demobilized servicemen were issued with one "civvy" suit only, and opinion differed on whether the, usually, good-quality cloth made up for the poor fit. Clothes-conscious youth cultures began to emerge—the male Latinos of Los Angeles and the Petits Swings or Zazous of occupied Paris used fabric-consuming drape shapes, wide peg trousers, and low-slung key chains to signal their disaffection.

SMART TAILORING

MENSWEAR ON CIVVY STREET

SPIVS AND WIDE BOYS

The origin of the word "spiv" applied to a salesman is unknown, but the similar term "wide boy" could come from a penchant for thickly striped suits, generous lapels, or wide, showy ties. A British phenomenon, spivs waited on street corners, especially in London's East End, for business that would come their way. The spiv of wartime cartoons wore his suits double-breasted, his soft hat angled, and his mustache neatly trimmed.

Parisian casual The flat cap and slightly ill-fitting suit, worn with a sweater instead of a vest, by this young French civilian in the first year of the war suggest that he is a man of slender means.

Sports suit The checked fabric used for this single-breasted suit signals its suitability for informal occasions only. It was recommended in the English gentleman's magazine Pall Mall Fashions for Fall/Winter 1940.

Only center fastened

Snap brim, porkpie hat

Tattersall

MENSWEAR ON CIVVY STREET

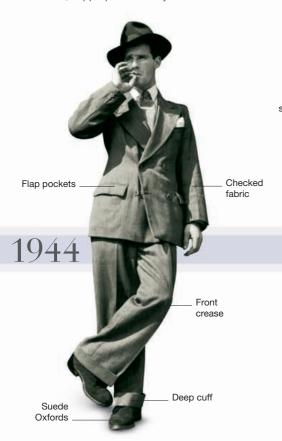

In town English tailors traditionally called a single-breasted jacket a lounge coat and a double-breasted jacket a reefer coat. This example was described as a "two-button (show three) D.B. Reefer Suit," appropriate for city wear.

Muted elegance The always dapper Eduard Beneš, President of Czechoslovakia in exile, arrived at his London offices wearing a long-coated, three-piece lounge suit underneath a trench coat.

Sultan of swoon Frank Sinatra is photographed without a tie in a soft sports shirt, wide-cuffed peg trousers, and corespondent shoes. For suits, he favored big knots when wearing four-in-hand ties.

Wide boy The clothes and the attitude of this young Londoner nonchalantly smoking display several "wide-boy" characteristics: a double-breasted suit, a hat worn at a rakish angle, and a wide tie.

Demob suit When a British soldier had completed his wartime service he had to report to a demobilization center to be processed for civilian life. His gear was exchanged for a three-piece, single-breasted or two-piece, double-breasted suit.

Ulster "Demob" boxes contained a coat usually of the raincoat variety. This belted Ulster, a sporty take on a traditional style, was popular in the 1940s. Double-breasted versions required more fabric than utility coats.

FASHION ON RATION

n March 1941 the British government imposed austerity regulations limiting the amount of materials as well as features such as pleats and Lbuttons that could be used in a garment's production. In June of the same year rationing was introduced to ensure clothes were allocated fairly. Ration books were issued, and set numbers of coupons had to be presented when buying clothing, cloth, footwear, and yarn for knitting. More specific guidelines were applied to garments produced as part of the Utility Clothing Scheme. Clothes marked with the distinctive CC41 (Civilian Clothing 1941) label had to adhere to government-set quality standards and were price controlled.

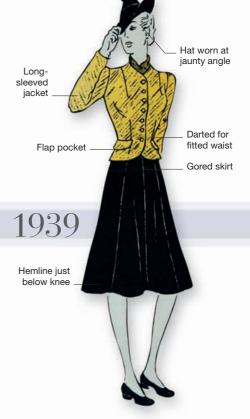

Fashion Designers were asked by the Board of Trade to contribute designs to a utility range to persuade women that austerity could be chic. British Voque declared that the new silhouette, "straighter, trim and businesslike," was the only one to follow.

In May 1942 members of the Incorporated Society of London

shoulder

Moygashel Crease-resistant moygashel, an artificial fiber made from a viscose/polyester blend, was used for this dress. Patterned knitwear made use of many short lengths of wool, obtained by unraveling old garments.

Short and full This Voque pattern was published just as Britain declared war against Germany. The shortness of the skirt remained a feature of wartime clothing but its fullness was soon to become a thing of the past.

Ready-to-wear When first asked to design for the ready-to-wear company Berketex, London couturier Norman Hartnell refused, believing it would harm his status. He later changed his mind and designed stylish utility dresses.

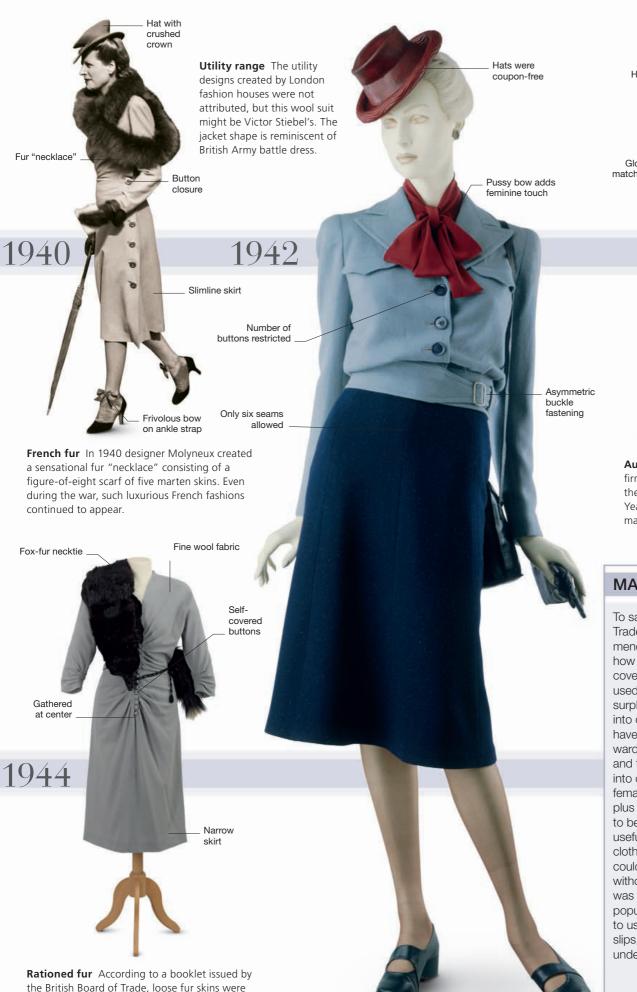

AUSTERITY SHOES

Leather was needed for army purposes, so an alternative material for shoe soles had to be found. Wood soles could be bought coupon-free, but were disliked because they were stiff and noisy to walk in. Split wooden soles attached by a leather hinge were an attempt to solve the problems. The traditional Bavarian walking shoe, the Haferlschuh, provided the inspiration for a widely produced style that incorporated side lacing and piping in contrasting colors. On the footwear front, women were seen to be at a disadvantage since their shoes tended to wear out more quickly than men's. There were complaints that women were using all the family's coupons.

Hinged wooden sole not rationed but a fur skin made into a "tie" required five coupons. If several skins were used for a tie, each skin required five coupons.

August 1942 A print dress by the London firm Rahvia appeared in Picture Post under the heading "Austerity Clothes For The Fourth Year of The War." Small prints could be easily matched at the seams, reducing waste.

MAKE DO AND MEND

To save materials, the British Board of Trade advised housewives to "make do and mend" and issued pamphlets explaining how this could best be done. Holes were covered with embroidery, shirt tails were used to replace frayed collars, and cheap, surplus army blankets were dyed and made into coats. Many a serviceman was said to have returned from the front to find his wardrobe raided and transformed into clothes for his female relatives — plus fours proving to be particularly useful. Blackout cloth, which could be bought without coupons, was another popular material to use for slacks, slips, and underwear.

Wartime pamphlet

HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood became a big fashion influence in the 1930s. Movie-going was a major hobby and alluring movie outfits provided escapism from the Depression and the war in Europe. Animal prints flourished after the Tarzan movies; while bias-cut, satin, Jean Harlow-style evening wear and Katharine Hepburn's casual look found numerous admirers.

A white cotton organdie confection stole the show in the 1932 movie Letty Lynton. Worn by Joan Crawford, the gown's huge sleeves helped popularize the padded-shoulder line, promoted by Schiaparelli, of the 1930s and 40s. New York department store Macy's was said to have sold thousands of copies. The Letty Lynton gown was designed by legendary Hollywood costumier Adrian (Gilbert Adrian, 1903–59); other influential contemporary Hollywood designers included Edith Head, Travis Banton, and Walter Plunkett. For The Women (1939), a hit movie about Manhattan socialites (shown here), Adrian gave each central character a distinct look. The movie was shot in black and white but with a short Technicolor fashion-show sequence featuring avant-garde Adrian designs that caused a stir. Small, jauntily angled hats like those worn by the cast became very popular in the US at this time, while Adrian's pill box, slouch, and trenchcoat styles were already much copied from Garbo movies. His square-shouldered look for Crawford (right) became a popular 1930s and 40s silhouette.

Hollywood's ascent in the fashion industry was helped because designers had to create outfits that looked ahead of the trend by the time the movie was released. The fashions were then copied by retailers and American design started to move away from Paris—"historical" couture styles of the 1930s, for example, borrowed from Hollywood costume.

We, the couturiers, can no longer live without the cinema any more than the cinema can live without us. We corroborate each other's instinct.

LUCIEN LELONG, 1935

99

MOVIE FASHION PARADE ▷

In this still from The Women (1939), cast members, including Norma Shearer (seated, white hat), Joan Crawford (standing, extravagant plumes), and Rosalind Russell (knitting), are shown outfits at a high-end fashion house.

AMERICAN READY-TO-WEAR

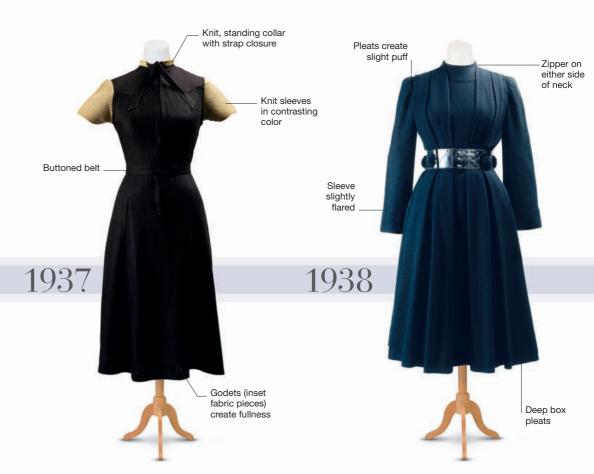

ollowing the invasion of Paris in June 1940, the rest of Europe and the United States were cut off from French couture for four years. During the previous decade, American fashion designers had begun to develop a distinctive style, focusing on easy-to-wear, modern clothing as opposed to the elaborate and elite confections of Paris. Practicality was one prominent characteristic, and resulted in the use of easy-care fabrics, adaptable styles, and capsule wardrobes with elements that could be interchanged. The need for simplicity required by mass production was not seen as a hindrance but was used to advantage. The work of New York-based, ready-to-wear designers was promoted as symbolic of American values such as democracy, pioneer spirit, and a pragmatic approach to life. The creations of made-tomeasure designers such as Valentina and Adrian, who continued in the couture tradition, were less aligned with national identity.

ON FIFTH AVENUE

The recognition of home-grown design talent in America depended heavily on the Fifth Avenue department store Lord & Taylor, particularly the promotional activities of Dorothy Shaver, who became the store's vice president in 1931. In 1932, at the height of the Great Depression, a series of window displays featured the work of New York designers rather than the manufacturers they worked for. A year later a press release extolled the output of what was called "The American Designers' Movement," and in 1938 the store inaugurated the annual $1,000 Lord & Taylor American Design awards. In 1945 the store launched another campaign to promote "The American Look," a phrase they also copyrighted.

Contrasts This witty design by Claire Potter incorporates a knit collar and sleeves. Although Potter was known as a great colorist, she used a pared-down palette for this dress. Her designs emphasised the figure.

Slip-on style This pleated version of one of Claire McCardell's most famous designs, the "Monastic" is made of open-weave wool. Zippers on either side of the neck allow the dress to be slipped on; a wide belt provides the shape.

AMERICAN READY-TO-WEAR

Halter neck (cut

low at back)

Simple lines Designer Helen Cookman produced good-quality, ready-to-wear lines and was known for her tailored clothes and tweeds. The simple line of this ensemble is underlined by the use of velvet trim in strategic places.

Coordinating separates This 1942 ensemble by Vera Maxwell includes a bloomer playsuit, skirt, vest, and tailored coat, all made from artificially produced fabrics developed by American companies

Vacation clothes Claire McCardell designed this practical resort-wear ensemble for Townley Frocks. The skirt and halter top could be interchanged with shorts and a slip-on blouse. McCardell liked to use practical, easy-care fabrics like "everfast cotton."

Smart casual The simple design of this green knit dress is enlivened by the metallic fastening at the collar and the belt. Described as a "sports dress," it would have been regarded as stylish casual wear for town and country.

FOOTWEAR TRENDS

Before the war Paris not only dictated fashionable silhouettes but was the source of inspiration for accessories. American shoe manufacturer Delman-founder of one of the top footwear brands in the USopened a design studio in Paris, so that he could keep up with the latest trends in shoes. The designs he brought back to sell in America during the 1930s had the added fashion credibility of being Paris models.

Parisian influence was lost during the war, but made a comeback toward the late 1940s. At this time Italian shoe design also started to gain fashion credence with the production of light, elegant sandals with slimmed-down heels. The two pairs of American shoes illustrated below show the influence of the new European designs, featuring cutaway sections that reveal more of the foot, and higher, slimmer heels than in previous years.

COMPETITIVE COUTURE

ommenting on the Paris Spring Collections of 1945, American Vogue noted "a very slight tendency toward the longer skirts, Balenciaga, Lelong, and Rochas showing them a bit more below the knee." The supremacy of French couture had been challenged during World War II, with Norman Hartnell claiming that London fashion designers had given "the home product a stability and elegance which hitherto was possessed by Paris alone." After the Liberation of Paris in August 1944, the fight for the place at the top of the fashion tree and the search for a new silhouette began. French designers did not waste time and soon dispatched their latest outfits to cities in Europe and the US. In London, the 1946 Britain Can Make It exhibition showcased 5,000 goods destined for export, including ready-to-wear and couture clothing, which were seen by almost 1.5 million visitors. In October 1945, Life magazine declared that "New York custom dresses are high fashion." But could the US and Britain resist the lure of Paris chic?

Austerity Regulations, which had simplified the female silhouette, were lifted in England in 1946, but clothes rationing continued for another three years. Utility clothing had ensured that good-quality garments were available to all at modest and regulated prices, and was not phased out until 1952. This 1944 advertisement for the utility range of the London ready-to-wear company Jaeger shows the wide shoulders and short skirts typical of the war years; the narrowing waists and the slight flare of the skirt on the right are pointers to the future.

Spring fashions Despite being part of the Spring Utility collection, this dress shows a more balanced and feminine silhouette than earlier in the decade. The slight gathering into the skirt increases emphasis on the waist and hips.

V-necks Despite cloth shortages, very wide shoulders became fashionable toward the end of the war. These two outfits are variations on a theme: V-necks, narrow waists, skirts with pleats on either side of a flat front, and dark accessories.

Simple, black

Belted waistband

headscarf

Extremely wide padded shoulders

Doublebreasted

1943

American style This soft wool coat by ready-to-wear designer Monte-Sano strikes a bold silhouette. The width of fabric over the shoulder pads is gathered into deep folds at

COMPETITIVE COUTURE

Charles James The complex seams of this herringbone wool suit by US-based Charles James emphasize the outfit's silhouette and accentuate the nipped-in waist by approaching it from the sleeves. The central button draws further attention to the waistline.

Balenciaga The straight shoulders and boxy silhouette seen in England in the war years were not so prominent in Paris. The narrow waist and the full upper sleeves of Balenciaga's wool coat, plus a large hat, introduce drama.

Wide shoulders Having made the first transcontinental rail trip from Los Angeles to New York, this passenger disembarks in style in a wide-shouldered jacket with a narrow waist, slim skirt, and a spotted veil.

THEATER DE LA MODE

In 1945, French couturiers staged what Harpers Bazaar called "a luxurious puppet show" to collect funds for war survivors and to revive the French fashion industry. Each house donated up to five outfits, as well as accessories, to dress more than 170 fashion dolls. After a debut in Paris in March 1945, shows followed in London, Leeds, Copenhagen, Stockholm, and Vienna before the mannequins arrived in New York in May 1946, now clad in the latest spring/summer collection. While they had been traveling a fashion revolution had occurred.

Balmain The first postwar Paris shows caused both indignation and admiration. Luxuriously full skirts, as seen in Pierre Balmain's coat and candy-striped dress, stood in contrast to the dire circumstances in which many Parisians still lived.

OPTIVISM AND YOUTH

1947-1963

OPTIMISM AND YOUTH

ost of Europe faced a long period of recovery following World War II, but France's fashion industry resurfaced quickly, with the Chambre Syndicale ensuring that the Paris couture houses could open and show collections. On a cold February day in 1947 Christian Dior showed his La Corolle collection, sowing the seeds of glamour and creating the basic shape of fashion for the next decade. In Britain clothes rationing lasted until 1950, but Mayfair couturiers such as Hardy Amies produced their version of Dior's "New Look" for English women eager for new styles in a drab postwar world.

Europe and America

Buyers from North America traveled to Paris to secure toiles (mock-ups of garments) to reproduce "Paris Fashions" in the major department stores back home. In Hollywood, costume designers including Helen Rose and Edith Head were inspired by the styles coming from Paris, and produced their own versions, including the ice-cool, elegant clothes worn by stars like Grace Kelly in Hitchcock's Rear Window. There was a connection between Italian style, traditionally excellent for knitwear and printed silk, and American fashion, perhaps through the GIs stationed in Italy during the war, perhaps through mass emigration to the US. Designers in both countries, such as Tina Leser and Claire McCardell in America and Emilio Pucci in Italy, produced stylishly casual clothes, as opposed to the more formal feel of French and British fashion. This easier approach to dressing struck a chord, particularly with younger women.

New consumers

Against the backdrop of an uncertain world haunted by the Cold War and an insidious nuclear threat, young people developed their own culture. A new term was coined—"the teenager"—and they wanted clothes just for themselves. There was a new breed too of cultural hero or role model, men like Elvis Presley who wore leather flight jackets and other military surplus, and young men wanted to look like him. Work wear and denim blue jeans also crossed boundaries and became fashion wear for both young men and young women.

COSTUME DESIGNER

Edith Head designed costumes for movie stars including Gloria Swanson, Janet Leigh, and Grace Kelly. She won the Oscar for Best Costume Design eight times.

1947

1948–50 1951–52

BOAC

▲ Christian Dior

fashion map.

Dior shows his first collection, immediately named "The New Look" by American fashion editor Carmel Snow, putting Paris back on the of Great Britain marries Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten; her Norman Hartnell wedding dress is the main topic of conversation

The 21st academy awards introduces an award for Best Costume Design.

Academy award

1951

American disc jockey Alan Freed popularizes the term "rock 'n' roll." New teen styles emerge linked to the music. such as "Teddy boys" and prom dresses

Dorothy Shaver, president of Lord and Taylor department store, launches a line of casual but elegant sportswear dubbed "The American Look." It is based on an earlier advertising campaign featuring designs by Claire McCardell, Clare Potter, and Bonnie Cashin.

▲ Rock-'n'-roll-style, poodle skirt

Father of the Bride, starring Spencer Tracy and Elizabeth Taylor, is released. The lace wedding dress worn by Taylor in the movie is considered one of her most iconic looks.

▼ Elizabeth Taylor in Father of Jack Kerouac publishes On the Road, which inspires a generation of beatniks who wear slim-fitting, black clothes, berets, and dark glasses. Audrey Hepburn's Funny Face in 1957 further popularizes the style.

► Original scroll manuscript for On the Road

Balenciaga shows the sack dress, an early stylistic move toward looser-fitting garments, which appear in the late 1950s and 60s, and include cocoon coats and shift dresses.

Fashion is not frivolous. It is part of being alive today.

MARY QUANT, FASHION DESIGNER, 1960s

1953-54 1955-56 1957-58 1959-60 1953 Coronation of Queen Rebel Without a Cause is Elizabeth II, and London released, launching its star, couturiers including John James Dean, as a style icon Cavanagh, Victor Stiebel, and Mattli make ball gowns for the rising youth culture. His death a year later for guests at coronation cements his legendary status. balls and dances. ■ Rebel Without a Cause poster ▲ John F. Kennedy is sworn in The Wild One is released; while Jackie Kennedy, wearing a gray coat by Oleg Cassini teamed with a pillbox hat and fur muff, Marlon Brando's representation of disaffected youth popularizes blue jeans and leather jackets. ▲ Brunette Barbie with brocade Jailhouse Rock, starring Elvis dress and coat (available 1959-64) John F. Kennedy becomes Presley, marks the spread of president. His wife, first lady Jacqueline Kennedy, Pierre Cardin shows his rock-and-roll style. Debut of Barbie doll, marketed as a "Teen-age Fashion Model." first collection in Paris. soon becomes a fashion ▼ Scene from Jailhouse Rock The Beatles make their first Easy-to-wash and easy-Stiletto heels are popular Fur coats are much sought by the mid-1950s aided by national TV appearance. to-dry nylon twinsets after because they are seen new technology. Ultrathin, ultrahigh steel heels could advertised in British Vogue as a status symbol. Their identical haircuts fashion magazine. Movements in the following became a popular look sustain great pressure in decades protest vigorously among young men on both comparison to wood heels. against the wearing of fur. sides of the Atlantic. ▼ "Beatlemania" takes hold and ■ Full-length fur coat with shawl collar and wide cocoon shape the group's look is widely copied Mary Quant opens her The Sidney Janis Gallery in influential store. Bazaar. New York exhibits works by contemporary American pop artists and the "Nouveau" Réalisme" movement in a groundbreaking show called the "International Exhibition of the New Realists." ■ Mary Quant's store 1956 The youthful Yves Saint Movie star Grace Kelly Lvcra, also known as marries Prince Rainier of Laurent shows his first spandex or elastane, is Monaco in a religious collection at Dior-Trapezeinvented. It revolutionizes ceremony, wearing a lace after Dior's death in 1957 performance sportswear and wedding dress designed by then fashionable dress. Helen Rose wo years after the end of World War II, French haute couture designer Christian Dior introduced the New Look. The silhouette he defined had had _ its beginnings in the late 1930s, but during the war its development was put on hold until couturiers started showing again in 1944. Other designers were also working on similar skirt shapes but the fashion media credited Dior with the inception of the New Look. Dior's collection—his first—marked a change from the shapes of the previous decade. Before and during the war a square-shouldered and boxy utility suit, which saved on fabrics during rationing, was prominent. The New Look collection, launched in February 1947, included rounded or sloped shoulders; a tiny, nipped-in waist (achieved via a short corset and other undergarments); padded and rounded hips; and a very full skirt with heavy pleating. Extra fabric and a slip helped to create the skirt's fullness.

THE NEW LOOK

Demure dressing

French couturier Jacques Heim designed this New Look-inspired dress in 1950. Less flamboyant than his colleagues, Heim designed couture that was both utilitarian and ladylike for clients. He also launched a line aimed specifically at a younger clientele.

> Box pleats for fullness

> > 1950

Accentuated

Matching

Round red buttons

NEW LOOK UNDERWEAR

Those re-creating the New Look style utilized separate undergarments to create the ideal silhouette. Short corsets, girdles, brassieres, or waist cinchers proved to be the basis of fashions during this period and helped women to achieve this hyperfeminine look.

The Spencer "Spen-support"

American day wear This 1950s shirtwaist day dress from Los Angeles was like those typically worn by the American housewife. It is of simple red and white cotton gingham, and includes a plastic belt and a necktie of matching fabric.

shoulder Nipped-in Padded hips 1947 Pleated full skirt

Rounded

New Look defined The design that started it all, this Bar Suit of 1947 by Dior defined the silhouette of the 1950s. Carmel Snow, American editor of Harper's Bazaar, called the collection the "New Look" and the name stuck.

Luxury fabric Dior's New Look collection of 1947 also included Chérie, this blue silk taffeta dinner dress. The skirt is made of a full width of fabric, from selvage to selvage, much of which is used to pad the hips.

the narrow-waisted jacket has off-center buttons.

such as this wedding dress from 1955.

beautiful floral-print party dress in 1955.

DESIGNER

CHRISTIAN DIOR

rench designer Christian Dior's revolutionary "New Look" dominated women's wear from the late 1940s to the mid-1950s. Suddenly, waists were cinched in and tiny, busts high and prominent, shoulders soft and sloping, and skirts longer than before and voluminous. Dior's hourglass look revived stiffened bodices and crinolines, and used lavish quantities of heavy, expensive fabric. After the plain, boxier styles of World War II, this return to extravagance and the femininity of the past was perplexing to some, but others found it refreshing and alluring.

In his earlier years Dior had studied political science and had also helped to run an art gallery, but in 1935 he began selling fashion illustrations to newspapers and to designers such as Robert Piguet. By 1938 he was Piguet's assistant designer. At Piguet's Dior produced round-hipped, narrowing "amphora" dresses, which reappeared later. He attracted much attention with a Café Anglais outfit for Spring 1939, featuring a houndstooth wool dress with a tight-fitting top and full skirt.

Looking to the past

Dior's next fashion post (1941–46) was at the House of Lucien Lelong—first alongside fellow assistant Balmain, then as principal designer. Here, while making costumes for the film Le Lit à Colonnes (1942), set in the later 1800s, Dior's research into period fashions and tailoring techniques fired his imagination.

Dior opened his own house in 1946, thanks to the backing of textile producer Marcel Boussac. His first collection, for spring 1947—named Corolle after its inverted petal shape and featuring the iconic Bar suit—was called the "New Look" by Harper's Bazaar editor

Carmel Snow. So began ten years in which the diligent, fastidious, and shyly modest Dior was at the fashion world's pinnacle, bringing Paris-centered haute couture back after a period of US-style ascendancy. Rita Hayworth, Margot Fonteyn, and Princess Margaret were among many glittering devotees, and in 1957 Dior accounted for over half of all Paris haute-couture sales.

Changing shapes

After Corolle came Spring 1953's Tulip collection of flowery colors and patterns, and a series of looser silhouettes. The "H" shape (1954) narrowed and flattened with an accent across the hips, while spring 1955 saw "A-line" suits influenced by men's tailoring and flaring from the shoulder; fall's "Y-line" brought tapered skirts and emphasis on shoulders. Other style-setting trademarks included sumptuous evening dresses, dramatic "coolie" and

"cartwheel" hats, ropes of pearls, standaway collars, princess-seamed dresses, half-belts on jackets and coats, and stoles. Navy blue, black, and white were favorite colors. Eastern touches were seen in tunic dresses and cheongsams (straight dresses with stand-up collars and a side split). Dior's styles later loosened into forms such as the vareuse (pea coat).

After Dior died in 1957, his young assistant, Yves St. Laurent, took the reins, followed by Marc Bohan, Gianfranco Ferré, John Galliano, and Raf Simons. Dior's success stemmed in part from his brilliance at what today is known as marketing, and that flair for product promotion is as much his legacy as his New Look. While at the top for only about a decade, the influence of his still-thriving, multiproduct global brand has been enormous, and he has been a major inspiration to designers from Christian Lacroix to the Marchesa label.

\triangle Trademark Style

Dior was kind, conscientious, and loved by his employees. He is seen here in 1957 with one of his models, who wears a superbly styled Dior suit.

☐ DIOR FOR EVENING

A stunning take on the hobble skirt in gleaming satin, this model was presented at Dior's Fall/Winter 1959 show.
Self-fabric roses clutch the dress above the knees, creating a full, bloused effect.

ANTIQUE LACE

WEDDING DRESS

here was a vogue for ballerinalength wedding dresses in the mid- to late 1950s, often made of or incorporating lace. This dress, created for an English wedding in 1960, shows an evolution in style from one fashion icon to the next. In the heady optimism of the 1950s, Grace Kelly-style dresses like this one—with tiny waists, luxurious full skirts, and copious lace—were copied widely. Lace production stopped during World War II, and afterward it was sought after obsessively. The neat tailoring reflects the style of an emerging fashion icon, Jacqueline Kennedy, who became the first lady in 1960. Made of heavy ivory silk, the gown was designed by Christina Ciapella working with the bride, Margaret Carter. Ivory was a sophisticated color choice in the 1960s, and the scooped neckline showcases the antique lace collar.

The bride's accessories included cream leather shoes and a tiny brown

IN DETAIL

⊲ BACK CLOSURE

A fashionable long zipper runs down the back of the dress from the deep, curved V of the neckline. The plunging V of antique lace, and the inverted V of the dropped waistline at the back, mirror the shape to gorgeous effect. The back of a wedding dress is particularly important since this is what the guests see during the ceremony.

□ LACE COLLAR

The front of the dress is completely plain other than the embellishment of a deep band of 19th-century lace, thought to be a type of Brussels lace called "Duchesse." It was donated to the bride by an elderly friend. Reusing lace and other fabrics has a long tradition to do with the expense of textiles as well as the sentiment attached to them.

⊲ BOAT NECKLINE

The stiffened lace at shoulder height is cut wide to flatter the neck and shoulders, and creates the illusion of a cap sleeve, popular on wedding dresses at the time.

SIDE SEAMS

A perfect hourglass shape is produced using two sets of princess seams at each side of the bodice, running from the waist to the bust and armholes, with another two seams at the back ending at shoulder-blade height. The dropped waist lengthens the body.

□ BOX-PLEATED SKIRT

The skirt falls just below the knee, its width gathered into wide box pleats. Petticoats with Vilene (a synthetic stiffener) help to create the shape.

THE COCKTAIL HOUR

ith the hard times of World War II behind them, the growing middle class of the 1950s started to respond to the dawn of a new age and live their lives in different ways. Cocktail parties, often held at home, were part of the changing world. The appropriately named cocktail dress, along with a veiled cocktail hat and gloves, were the requisite attire for such gatherings. The formal, mid-calf length dresses of luxurious materials such as velvets and brocades were meant to be worn between the hours of six and eight in the evening. French designer Christian Dior first coined the term "cocktail dress," and his New Look silhouette defined its romantic style with a tight bodice and full skirt emphasizing the waist. But cocktail dresses were not restricted to the bouffant skirt, and many designers experimented with the narrower sheath style.

Brown and purple-lilac

Little black dress For this 1955 dress, Madame Grès—a French couture house headed by Germaine Émilie Krebs (also known as Alix Barton)—was inspired by the veiled cocktail hat. Spotted net is draped into an elegant side bustle.

Dior's A-line Dior was inspired by intersecting diagonals for his 1955

Spring/Summer collection, and he aptly named it the A-line. This short evening dress from that collection includes a cross-over drape bustier with a gathered skirt creating a bowknot.

Dresses. It is an example of an alternative skirt shape acceptable for the cocktail hour.

Black net with white felt spots covers layers of silk taffeta, net, and gauze.

The taffeta and tulle are edged with satin ribbon.

POSTVAR PERFECTION

Cecil Beaton's 1948 photograph of stunning evening gowns by leading American couturier Charles James encapsulates the heady optimism and return to glamour of postwar New York. Wartime closures of French maisons and tight postwar travel budgets had turned influential US magazine editors toward homegrown design. A vibrant scene of high society and fashionable clubs, along with a rapidly strengthening economy, gave American designers a further boost. New York had become a rising fashion location.

Evening wear in the late 1940s and 1950s by designers such as Dior, Balenciaga, and Balmain reveled in copious fabric and the glamorized, old-fashioned feminine ideal. Englishborn James, widely considered the only true US couturier, was said to have inspired Dior's New Look silhouette, the ultimate antidote to wartime utility.

James was an obsessive perfectionist, best known for dressing socialites in fabulously expensive, dramatic gowns. These intricately constructed sculptures, fabricating a perfect postwar woman, were art forms in their own right. James used boning and multiple layers of silk, satin, taffeta, and tulle to build 19th-century-influenced gowns with expressive shapes and complex seaming, spiral draping and wrapping, asymmetric features, light-catching materials, and differently colored layers that flashed as the wearer glided across a room. Totally self-supporting, these hourglass garments tightly molded and defined the torso, before exploding into vast skirts reminiscent of butterfly and swans' wings or four-leaved clovers.

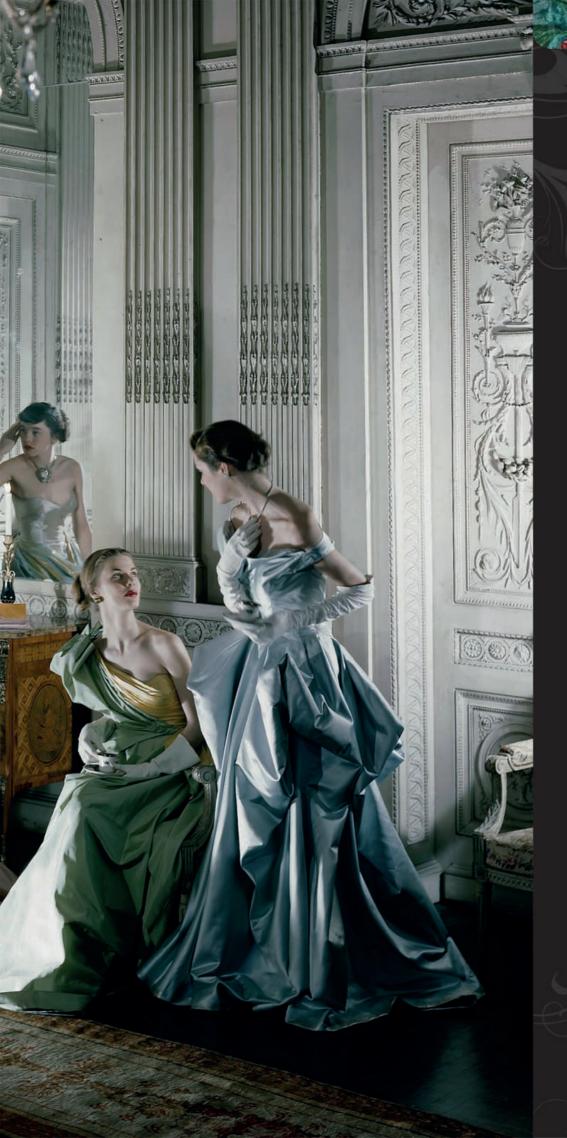

America's greatest couturier, the world's best and only dressmaker who has raised it from an applied art to a pure art form.

CRISTOBAL BALENCIAGA ON CHARLES JAMES

99

□ "HIGH-SOCIETY" TABLEAU

Poised Vogue models imitate a high-society scene in an elegant, neoclassical New York interior. Narcissistically checking themselves in mirrors or touching their fashionably showy jewelry, they are more like statues than real women, representing subtle variations of a feminine ideal.

COUTURE GOWNS

Typically worn to balls and grand occasions by the wealthy elite, haute couture evening gowns were the ultimate expression of couture house art. They were bold and dramatic, and intended to draw attention to the wearer. Designers used the finest fabrics and the most intricate techniques to create them. Best known were French designers Christian Dior, Pierre Balmain, and Hubert de Givenchy; Spanish designer Cristóbal Balenciaga; and the American-

Cowl neckline

Fullness

at back

based Charles James. While based on a runway model, a gown could be customized to the needs of a client for a specific event. The New Look silhouette emphasized the hourglass figure, with its narrow waist. Married women wore strapless gowns but young unmarried women wore gowns with straps or capped sleeves. Skirts were usually full, though the columnar sheath also grew popular.

Covered shoulders

Slightly flattened

1955

Ankle-length

Heavy brocade Hubert de Givenchy, who trained under Balenciaga, designed this evening dress. Using a heavy silk matelassé brocade in emerald green, Givenchy's design elements include a draped cowl neckline and a slightly dropped, sloping waistline.

18th-century inspiration Titled Antonia and designed by Pierre Balmain, this gown was inspired by 18th-century structure and trimmings. It includes heavy embroidery work, pearl beading, gold scrolls, green foliage, and red chiffon roses.

Taffeta gown Cuban-born American designer Luis Estevez created this gown. After training in Paris at the House of Patou, Estevez returned to the US to start his own label, which sold at department stores such as Bergdorf Goodman.

COUTURE GOWNS

Reveal and conceal This strapless black gown uses a peekaboo bodice treatment, further emphasizing the décolletage. Made of silk taffeta, the full skirt reveals a section of light pink underskirt below a see-through net panel.

Clover gown Charles James created his Four-Leaf Clover gown for Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Jr. to wear to the Eisenhower Inaugural Ball. His background in architecture and his tendency toward sculptural, highly controlled silhouettes are evident here. Custom couture Christian Dior designed this gown, La Ligne Muguet, based on his runway model Belle de Nuit for socialite Gloria Guinness. Intricate handwork, including beading, metallic embroidery, and ribbon work, emphasizes the luxury of his couture work.

Flounces and bustles Victor Stiebel, a South African-born British designer, referenced historical elements with this gown. The blue and white striped silk taffeta underskirt includes a knee-high flounce and the draped overskirt has a slight bustle.

Stripes Frank Usher, an important ready-to-wear design firm in the UK during the 1950s, created this extravagant strapless evening gown in 1957. Horizontal stripes in a delicate pink accentuate the high-waisted bodice and daring décolletage.

Women who could afford to buy expensive couture gowns usually had real jewels—including diamonds, emeralds, and rubies—to go with them. Pearls were popular too, either in single strands, or combined with other elements in statement pieces such as the 1959 pearl necklace and earrings seen here. For those without real gems, there was costume jewelry. Manufacturers such as Vendôme created striking costume jewelry using artificial stones and imitation metals. The bracelet shown above is embedded with rhinestones in emerald-green, ruby-red, and clear crystal.

DESIGNER

BALENCIAGA

private man, monastically dedicated to the pursuit of perfection, Cristóbal Balenciaga let his dramatic, fluid clothes speak for him. Although lauded less than Dior, he anticipated aspects of the New Look, headed the most exclusive Paris maison in the immediate postwar era through the 1950s, helped create 1960s garment shapes, and most importantly invented a totally new silhouette for women.

Balenciaga had a legendary talent for cut, seaming, and finish. He understood how fabric draped and how the stiff materials he loved dictated sculptural shapes. Born in a fishing village in Basque Spain, the young Balenciaga absorbed a great deal from his mother, a dressmaker to local wealthy women. In his early teens, a local aristocrat, who later became both patron and client, helped him secure a superior tailoring apprenticeship.

The move to Paris

By his early 20s, Balenciaga had a boutique in the fashionable Spanish seaside resort of San Sebastián. Branches in Madrid and Barcelona followed as he became Spain's leading couturier. The Spanish Civil War triggered a move to Paris, where by 1937 he established himself in style at avenue Georges V. Soon after Balenciaga arrived in Paris, the city hailed him as a major presence. He created a series of distinctive shapes, often waistless and loose, that magically seemed both independent of the body and in harmony with the female form. The mature women who made up a large part of his wealthy clientele found his clothes especially flattering.

His first runway show referred to the Spanish Renaissance, and his collections drew on his country's culture and past. He put bustles on evening gowns. The 1939 hourglass Infanta gown sprang from Velázquez's paintings. The traditional female dress and religious vestments of Spain, and other Spanish artists such as Zurbarán, inspired dramatic dark garments. Bolero jackets and capes echoed toreadors' outfits, while short-fronted, long-backed garments recalled flamenco dresses.

Down to essentials

Balenciaga pared down his elegant lines in the 1950s. His partly tight, partly loose garments, such as jackets with a fitted front and billowing back, introduced around 1951, created a revolution in fashion. His straight, loose sack dress (1957) prefigured simple 1960s shapes. There were also flounced, trapezoid baby doll dresses with wide waists (1957 and 58), balloon jackets and skirts, cocoon coats, and empire-line gowns. Standaway collars lengthened the neck, big buttons added bold detail, and seven-eighthslength sleeves revealed women's bracelets. Sleeves were an obsession. Balenciaga remade any, sometimes on the wearer, that did not lie perfectly. He was adept at tricky dolman-style sleeves, cut as a piece with the garment body.

The 1960s brought bold experiments with fabric. Balenciaga developed a stiff silk called silk Gazaar with Abraham's fabric house and also used transparent materials and plastic rainwear. He further refined the linearity that now dominated fashion. Despite producing some of his most exciting work in this decade, Balenciaga was perhaps out of step with new mass-market values and he closed his couture house in 1968. After a stagnant period and acquisition by Gucci, his love of shape lives on with Nicolas Ghesquière's designs for the Balenciaga brand.

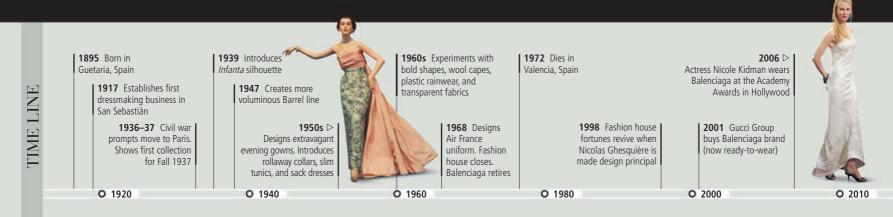

Courrèges and Ungaro, both Balenciaga apprentices, and Givenchy, were all influenced by their mentor. So were Mila Schön, with her expert tailoring, and Oscar de la Renta, with details like sash bows on evening gowns.

△ CRISTOBAL BALENCIAGA 1927
Dubbed the "Picasso of fashion" for his artistic innovations with shape and form, Balenciaga was among few couturiers capable of making a haute couture garment from scratch himself.

⊲ EVENING DRESS 1946

Balenciaga loved and understood material—hence his cleverly draped gowns like this one, reminiscent of flamenco costume. Aside from black, red and pink were favorite colors.

330

1948-1954

either pencil slim or very full.

FEMININE FORM

ailoring for women was one of the strongest trends in 1950s fashion. Stylish two-piece suits with architectural shapes and sculpted lines reflected the sophistication and modern aspirations of the times. From the mid-1930s tailoring had become an important part of the female wardrobe, partly inspired by military wear and partly dictated by a need for practical garb for women who worked outside the home. In the 1950s designers exploited tailor's techniques to help create an idealized feminine form. Innovators such as US-based Charles James and Spanish Cristóbal Balenciaga injected fresh ideas into suiting and framing the body. Jackets were typically rounded at the shoulder, rather than square and padded, and were tightly fitted through the bodice to shape a small waist before flaring out to accentuate the hips. Skirts hit mid-calf and were

In the 1950s the mark of a well-dressed woman was her hat. For day and evening, small hats were in vogue, especially pillbox, cloche, or beret styles, although cartwheel shapes were also worn. The popularity of the cocktail hour led to fanciful creations that added drama to an outfit. These often sat toward the back of the head to prevent flattening the carefully coiffed hair. Hats were almost always adorned with veils, feathers, birds, fruit, flowers, or other whimsy.

Black buttons match braid detail

Understated tailoring

Toffee-colored wool

Precision tailoring This suit by British designer Charles Creed is simple but exact in cut and construction. Decoration is kept restrained with inset bands of black braid and small loops, repeated at the back of the skirt.

Neat pleats This gray worsted suit by British designer Hardy Amies retains the influence of Dior's 1947 New Look silhouette. Amies adapts the full-skirted shape into a sharp tailored suit with the use of a panel of narrow pleats.

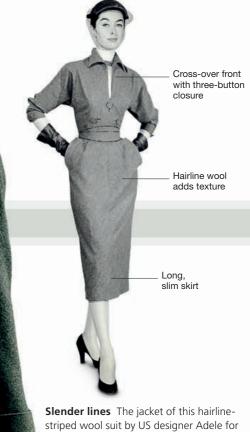

Lightweight wool suit US designer Norman Norell partnered with Anthony Traina to set up the Norell-Traina label. Their designs were elegant yet relaxed, like this 1954 ensemble of a slim, straight skirt and half-sleeve jacket.

Chic gray Christian Dior displays both his dressmaking and tailoring skills in this gray wool ensemble, in which the focus is entirely on the upper body. An intricately paneled and draped jacket is set off against a plain, slim skirt.

the body

Fall/Winter 1952 is cut short to reveal the tiny

Hand-

embroidered

Narrow. nipped-in waist

silk blouse

waist. Dolman sleeves and diagonally set hip

Parisian chic Despite the rise of fashion houses outside Paris, the city held on to its fashion credibility. Here, Audrey Hepburn starring in the 1954 film Sabrina plays a girl transformed into elegance by two years spent in the capital.

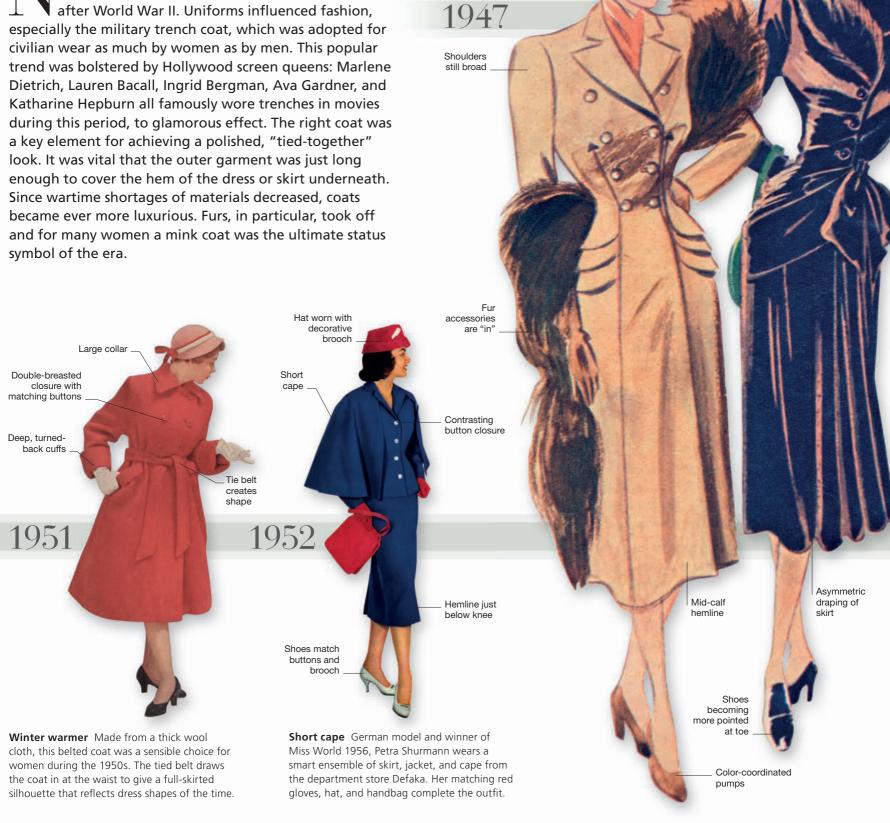

pockets emphasize the model's shape. Neat collar extends into scarflike flourish

> Straight skirt has kick pleats at back

> > Curves This beautifully tailored wool suit by British designer Lachasse demonstrates an eye for detail. Following the line of the darts, flared panels sewn into the jacket bodice fall in layers over the hips to emphasize the sculpted curve.

A GOOD COAT

ot for several decades had the coat been as important for women as it was in the years after World War II. Uniforms influenced fashion, especially the military trench coat, which was adopted for civilian wear as much by women as by men. This popular Dietrich, Lauren Bacall, Ingrid Bergman, Ava Gardner, and Katharine Hepburn all famously wore trenches in movies a key element for achieving a polished, "tied-together" look. It was vital that the outer garment was just long Since wartime shortages of materials decreased, coats became ever more luxurious. Furs, in particular, took off and for many women a mink coat was the ultimate status symbol of the era.

Hourglass shape Following made the same year. They are sculpted to fit the body and sharply define the waist.

Christian Dior's New Look of 1947, there wasa change in the female silhouette, seen to some extent in these coats

Turban-style

WIVES AND MOTHERS

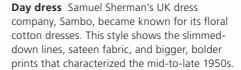

he postwar era saw advances in textiles and technology. Wash-and-wear fabrics appeared in the early 1950s, reducing time-consuming laundering. Mass manufacturing, and the end of rationing in the UK, made a wider range of clothes available. At the same time, women were plunged back into traditional roles as homemakers. Glossy magazines advocated that women should look well turned out at all times, even when doing the housework. The housedress was especially significant since so much time was devoted to tasks in the home, at least for the majority of women who were not in paid employment. A typical day might include three hours of housework and an hour making the evening meal. For daily shopping trips into town, a more stylish, fitted, dress was recommended.

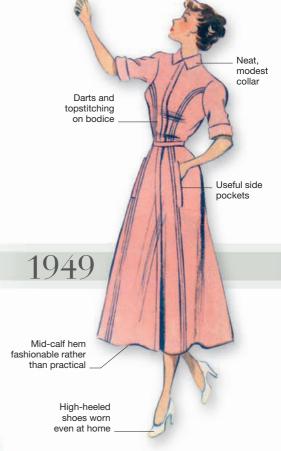

A neat, boxy handbag was one of the most desirable accessories a woman could own. It was usually carried in the hand or in the crook of the arm so that it would not interfere with the line of a dress or suit. The bag generally held a wallet, compact and lipstick, handkerchief, small notebook and pencil, and possibly a pair of sunglasses, and had inside pockets for accessories such as gloves.

The height of luxury was a handbag that matched the shoes, though in reality few could afford more than one good bag. Handbags were engineered with a frame and gold-tone clasps at the top to enable a firm and secure closure that also looked stylish.

Pretty in pink Doing housework did not have to mean looking dowdy. As this illustration from French magazine Votre Mode shows, the aim was to look stylish and feminine in the home. "A housedress for elegant and practical women," the caption noted.

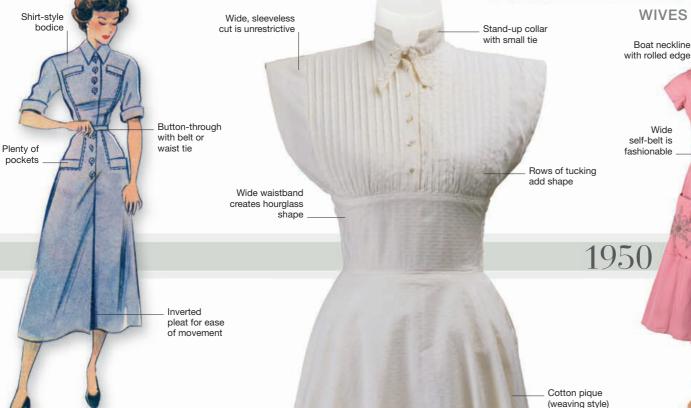

Abstract prints The talking point of the 1950s was the new art movement, abstract expressionism. Jackson Pollock in particular influenced fashion and interiors. Fabric designers created prints for uses from dresses to curtains.

Big patch pockets serve to replace

apron

Metallic embroidery lifts plain dress

Tidy housewife A shirtdress, also called a shirtwaister, was a wardrobe staple. Practical enough to wear for doing heavy housework, it helped home-makers feel both comfortable and neat.

Stylish day out A dress from British readyto-wear maker Horrockses was considered the ultimate in daytime chic in the 1940s and 50s. The brand, known for its fine-quality cottons and cheerful prints, was famously worn by Queen Elizabeth II. Style and comfort American sportswear designer Claire McCardell is remembered for her beautifully made, practical clothes, which filled a gap in the market for stylish, comfortable day wear. This ivory cotton summer dress displays the purity of line for which she was known.

is crisp and cool

CHAIN-STORE CHIC

In the US, department stores such as J.C. Penney had spread to the new suburban shopping malls by the mid-1950s. These dresses from the company's 1959 catalogue were made from a new cotton-rayon called cotron.

RESORT WEAR

The prosperity of the 1950s brought the concept of leisure to the mainstream. It was no longer just the wealthy who had _ time and money to take vacations; and since air travel became less exclusive, more people ventured abroad. The upper class had mastered the art of dressing for travel and leisure long ago, and now the middle class embraced the idea. Responding to a burgeoning market, the fashion industry produced a new category of clothing known as resort wear, comprising diverse ranges of vacation clothes and accessories. Although "resort" implied a casual look, people dressed up, if in more colorful and revealing clothes than for everyday life. That meant playsuits, beach dresses, bathing suits, and coordinating cover-ups for women, and matching swim shorts and short-sleeved shirts for men. Vivid fabrics, including Hawaiian florals, Indonesian batik, and animal prints, were widely used. Tropical-themed accessories were Matching beach coat Abstract fabrics were big news in fashion from the late 1940s through to the 1950s, and this pairing uses them to great effect. An elastic cotton swimsuit is partnered with a terry-cloth robe in a complementary print.

Underwiring and padding shape

at bustline

Support in tummy flat bottom keeps

Swimsuit construction creates hourglass figure

Patch pockets

Sun top

Separate

MEN ON VACATION

1950s advertisement

an important part of the look.

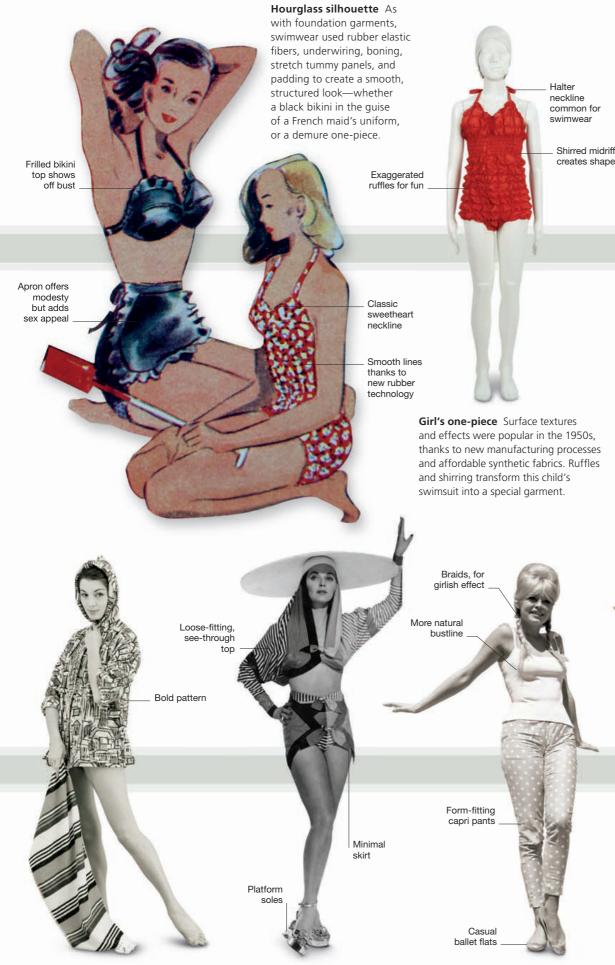

It was not only women who liked colorful leisure clothes. When men took time off, they usually opted to break out of the conservative attire of the 1950s workplace and embrace flamboyance. Men's short-sleeved shirts and coordinating swim shorts were sold in an array of patterns and colors, often with a tropical motif.

High-waisted bikini Brigitte Bardot helped to make the bikini popular when she posed in one at the Cannes Film Festival in 1953. This design, in a charming foliage and floral print, is typical of the era, with plenty of support built into the bikini top.

Practical cut combined with pretty print

Separates Summer wear comprising matching separates—such as skirts, sun tops, blouses, and shorts—was fashionable on the beach. The various elements of this 1956 striped outfit could be bought one piece at a time.

Hooded top Then, as now, summer weather was unpredictable. This hooded beach top from the mid-1950s provided a quick cover-up for swimmers and sunbathers if the weather turned chilly.

Head turning Confidence would have been needed to parade on the beach in this striking outfit, modeled in 1952. Both the top and the tiny matching skirt, worn over a bikini, are see through.

All about sex By 1961, when this photo of Brigitte Bardot was taken, resort clothes were more relaxed. The emphasis was now on youthfulness, freedom, and raw sex appeal.

ACCESSORIES

Maintaining a polished appearance was a priority for the 1950s woman, so fashion companies produced resort accessories. For sunseekers there were cover-ups, costume jewelry, raffia, straw and cotton beach bags, hats, shoes, and sunglasses to coordinate with their outfits. Because hairdos were carefully coiffed, a bathing cap was de rigueur; designers had fun with it, turning a mundane piece of sports gear into a decorative display adorned with rubber petals, spikes, scalloping, and ruffles.

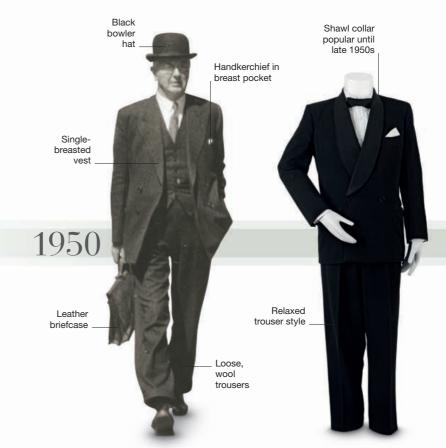

Peep-toe mule

Out of the water, women wore large straw hats, especially lamp-shade styles, often decorated with embroidered raffia flowers and fruit. Sunglasses had been massproduced since the late 1920s, but after World War II, when UV technology improved and air force pilots made the aviator style sexy, they were sold in a variety of novel shapes. Pointed and winged frames were especially popular. When it came to footwear, there were espadrilles (part of a craze for all things Spanish), Japanese-style wooden slides, carved mules inspired by Polynesian crafts, and rubber flip-flops, which really took off after the Korean War when returning soldiers brought them back as souvenirs.

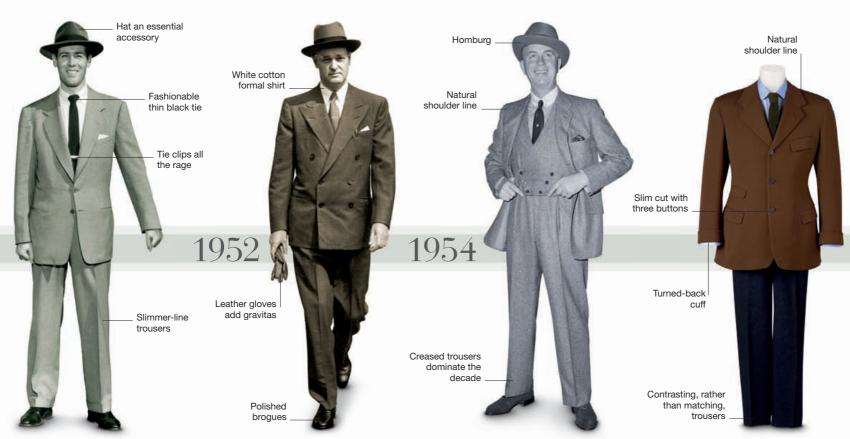

CASUAL AND POLISHED

fter years in military uniform, men were back in civilian clothes, and now wanted to indulge themselves a little and dress in a more relaxed. style. Clothing makers adapted to the new mood. From the late 1940s generously cut, double-breasted jackets were teamed with wide-leg trousers, often pleated and with a center crease and cuffs. In Britain tailors in London's prestigious Savile Row launched a Neo-Edwardian look that harkened back to a time of luxury. Shoulders followed a more natural line, rather than being padded, and jackets in expensive fabrics were cut for a slimmer fit. Italian menswear makers pioneered lightweight suiting using fine fabrics such as silk—the perfect balance between casual and polished. The shorter, sportier-looking continental jacket was very popular in the late 1950s. All shades of gray were fashionable, especially in flannel pinstripe.

Business suit In the city of London, menswear retained formal dress codes. This gentleman wears a tailored, dark wool three-piece suit and bowler hat a look little changed from the 1850s.

Dressing up The tuxedo, or dinner suit, first worn in the late 1800s, was very much in vogue during the 1950s, when men's clothing included formal wear for most evening occasions.

Work style On the West Coast of the US and in Europe, suits became less formal, even for the businessman. A softer, slimmer jacket was preferred, along with a slightly tapered trouser leg.

Executive US ambassador to Moscow George Frost Kennan, wears a finely pin-striped, double-breasted gray flannel suit—typical attire for the prudent, mature "company man."

Old and new A debut design from Christian Dior's menswear line, launched in 1954, this suit harkens back to the Edwardian era, but details such as the cropped vest give it a fresh spin.

Neo-Edwardian This jacket and trouser ensemble typifies the New Edwardian tailoring of the 1950s. The brown wool jacket is cut on a long line, with a slightly waisted effect.

a more sober, double-breasted, pinstripe look.

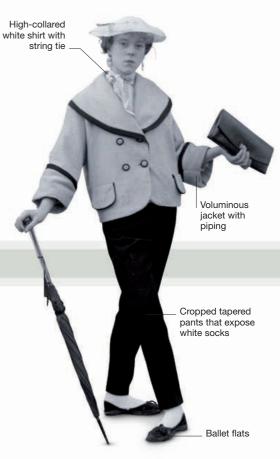

HIPSTERS AND TEDDY BOYS

wo distinct, mainly male, style tribes, hipsters and teddy boys both dressed in ostentatious suits to rebel against the social order. The original hipsters were African-Americans who emulated the lifestyle and clothing of "bebop" jazz musicians of the late 1930s and early 1940s. Their fashion uniform was the zoot suit, consisting of high-waisted trousers with a baggy leg that tapered dramatically to a narrow cuff, and a long, generously cut jacket with a wide lapel and padded shoulders. It was usually worn with a gold watch chain, a broad-brimmed felt hat, and two-tone or pointed shoes. Across the Atlantic, teddy boys were working-class London teenagers, listening to American rock 'n' roll but usurping the Edwardian suit revival on Savile Row to invent their own style. They wore flamboyant, Edwardian-cut jackets with vests, string ties, and pegged trousers. Teddy girls mixed these masculine elements with feminine accessories.

Duster coat The teddy boy style spread across Britain, drawing on what was available locally. This young man, photographed in Derbyshire in 1957, wears a simple coat more suggestive of working-class utility than Savile Row tailoring.

Style mix A 17-year-old teddy girl poses in 1955. Teddy girls were British adopters of American teen basics such as jeans and ballet flats. They mixed them with clothing styles from the Edwardian and Victorian eras.

HIPSTERS AND TEDDY BOYS

Satin

handkerchief

West Indian style The zoot suit spread from the US to the Caribbean, where the local men interpreted it in brightly colored cloth. West Indian migrants to Britain in the 1950s brought the style with them. This modern re-creation recalls the snappy fashion of that time.

Accessorized This teddy girl wears a jacket borrowed from the teddy boys with its loose shape and velvet collar. She carries the signature teddy girl accessories of a clutch bag and an umbrella.

Suspenders hold trousers under ribs

Exaggerated shape This sharp zoot suit is inspired by the exuberant jazz singer Cab Calloway in the 1943 movie Stormy Weather. Political activist Malcolm X once described this look as "a killer-diller coat with a drape shape, reat-pleats, and shoulders padded like a lunatic's cell."

Fingertip jacket The drape was a more conservative version of the zoot suit. It had a shorter jacket, as in this 1994 reproduction by Chris Ruocco Tailors, London. Suspenders or a thin leather belt held the trousers high on the waist.

Crêpe-soled brothel creepers

Hipsters wore spiffy, thick-soled shoes that were often shiny, made of exotic skins, or two-tone, harkening back to the jaunty, off-duty style worn by the wealthy man of leisure in the 1920s. Pointed shoes, historically a sign of status, were also popular. Shoes were worn to attract attention, never to blend with the suit. Teddy boys adopted chunky, crêpe-soled, suede "brothel creepers" to ground their look. Alternatively, they sported stylish leather Derbys with thick soles.

THE YOUTH REVOLUTION

This iconic image from the movie The Wild One (1953) turned the brooding Marlon Brando into a poster boy for young people feeding off postwar restlessness and aching to escape the polite conventions of 1950s society. His blue denim jeans and zipped black leather jacket would become universal casual wear. In the movie, Brando plays the leader of a motorcycle gang. When asked what he's rebelling against, he drawls, "Whaddya got?" The movie caused a scandal.

Two years later James Dean, playing a troubled young man in Rebel Without a Cause (1955), created a similar look blue jeans, white T-shirt, boots, and a leather or windbreaker jacket (including the red Harrington windbreaker in Rebel)—that continues across the decades. Such looks were subversive not just because they were associated with "working" clothes or hoodlums, but because they were social levelers—these were styles worn by movie stars that most people could afford.

Brando became an identity-marker for the teenager—a notion that had barely existed prewar—and for teenage fashions. Increased 1950s prosperity, and the rise of advertising and mass consumerism, helped to celebrate youth while also giving teenagers something to rebel against.

He pulled on his big leather motorcycing jacket and went out to his bike. They met at a café called Nick's. It was a working men's café in the daytime, quite ordinary, but at night it was different. It acquired for them at least an excitement and glamour.

GILLIAN FREEMAN, THE LEATHER BOYS, 1961

99

□ A REBEL WITH MANY CAUSES

Seminal youth-culture movie The Wild One (1953), starring Marlon Brando, spawned many biker movies and biker-influenced looks.

BIRTH OF THE TEENAGER

p until the late 1940s most young people left school before the age of 16 to start work or join the military. In the 1950s families were better off, and young people stayed at home longer, but this new generation looked for a way to assert their independence—by dressing differently. Denim companies targeted teens with the new drainpipe jeans, and rock 'n' roll stars such as Eddie Cochran and Elvis Presley fueled demand. When Marlon Brando wore jeans and a leather jacket in The Wild One in 1953, teens found a new fashion uniform in which to rebel. Many youth style tribes originated in the US, including bobby-soxers in poodle skirts, and Beats in bohemian black. But there were also teddy boys, teddy girls, and rockers in the UK; the Kaminari zoku (Thunder Tribe) in Japan; and bodgies and widgies in Australia, to name a few.

SILHOUETTE SHAPERS

After the slender silhouette of the 1930s, Christian Dior's New Look of 1947 brought back the bouffant petticoat. Interestingly, what began as a high fashion look was appropriated by teenage girls in the 1950s. Layers of tulle underpinned cinched circle skirts, which were paired with a fitted cardigan, ankle socks, and flat shoes. Dance was the catalyst for the obsession with starched petticoats (crinolines). As girls danced the jive and jitterbug, crinolines showed off their moves, and also preserved their modesty. The newly invented bustier was equally important in creating an alluring silhouette.

Starched to achieve full shape

Petticoat with bustier

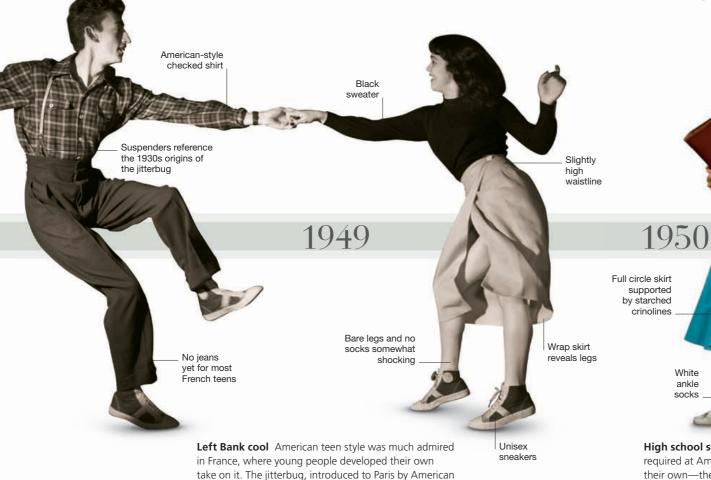

Sweater girl The cardigan, preferably in mohair or angora, was a must-have item. It was often worn buttoned at the back, which emphasized the bust and created the sweater-girl effect made famous by Hollywood sex symbols.

Scoop or square neckline Belted to emphasize waist 1951 Metallic. pointed-toe Cotton dance dress For girls in the 1950s the Cotton dance dress For girls in the 1950s the highlight of the social calendar was going to a dance, whether a prom or an informal event held by the school or community. New music styles and dance crazes made these occasions constantly exciting.

BIRTH OF THE TEENAGER

Hair tied back with scarf

Three-quarter sleeve blouse

1950

Full circle skirt supported by starched crinolines

White ankle socks

High school style Although uniforms were not required at American schools, teen girls developed their own—the skirt, either full or pencil shaped finishing just below the knee, and sweater or fitted top. Pants and jeans were forbidden.

Long, swept back hair show off their moves in a Paris nightclub in 1949. Flattop Casual plaids Turned-up are popula collar Patterned, short-sleeve shirts are everyday wear Red jacket symbolizes protest and passion 1955 1958 Jeans with cuffs Worn-out, Westernstyle jeans Heavy, black Biker look tough soldiers in 1945, became a dance craze. These students

Rebel role model James Dean's portayal of an anguished teen in Rebel Without a Cause was an enormous influence on fashion. His jeans, boots, and form-fitting, white T-shirt with slightly rolled sleeves became a uniform for disaffected youth worldwide.

Denim revolution Teen style revolved around dressing down, and attracted the disapproval of adults. These boys wear jeans, which were not allowed in school. Like denim, short-sleeved shirts and plaids were popular because they appeared ultracasual.

WRANGLER

Seeking out a mainstream market, workwear maker Blue Bell Overall Company launched the Wrangler brand in 1947 with jeans tested and endorsed by professional rodeo cowboys. This tough yet glamorous association was part of the Wrangler appeal to teens. Designed to look good, as opposed to simply being functional, Wrangler's slim "body fit" jeans were a hit. Eventually adults and children were wearing them too—the start of America's love affair with all things denim.

SPORTS STYLE

n the 1950s more and more people became involved in all types of sports activities, whether it was tennis L and bowling, baseball and skiing or golf at the country club. Even if they were not participating in physical pursuits, people wanted to look as though they were aspiring to a wholesome image. Hollywood reflected the mood: when Katharine Hepburn starred in Pat and Mike (1952) as a champion athlete, she created a sensation with her athletic figure and stylish, sporty wardrobe. After wearing pants and shorts out of necessity during wartime, post-war women adopted casual wear that offered slimmer, feminine designs in new stretch fabrics. Clam diggers, capris, stirrup pants, jodhpurs, and culottes gradually replaced mannish slacks.

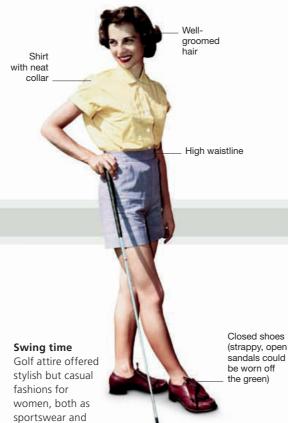

Equestrian elegance Olympic rider Mary Marshall wears formal riding attire here. Even those who had never ridden copied the equestrian look, lured by the lean lines and aristocratic associations. Avid horsewoman Grace Kelly helped set the trend.

Skating style New synthetic fibers developed during the decade allowed for practical, comfortable sportswear. This young figure-skater's outfit follows the fashionable silhouette, while giving greater ease of movement.

leisure wear. However, this golfer of the 1950s would not have been allowed to wear such brief shorts

while she was on the green.

Stylish, all-white ensemble

Track pants replace traditional breeches

Glamorous pursuit Fencing, with its skillful, balletic moves and dashing, pants-wearing women, has long inspired fashion and sportswear designers. Here, Bress Aboularia models her practice wear for the French women's fencing team in the 1950s.

CHEERLEADING GLAMOUR

Cheerleading is an American phenomenon that began in the late 1800s as an activity for boys, but by the 1950s had become dominated by girls. In an era that prized athleticism, cheerleading provided an outlet for girls, who had limited choices when it came to school and college sports. The uniforms were considered the height of teen glamour—knee-length skirts (that had crept shorter by the 1960s), letter sweaters, bobby sox with saddle shoes, and the all-important pom-poms, originally made of crepe paper and then of water-resistant vinyl in the mid-1960s.

SVINGING SIXTESTO GLAM ROCK

1964-1979

SWINGING SIXTIES TO GLAM ROCK

he fashion revolution of the 1960s changed the way that women dressed. There was a seismic shift toward youth—dubbed a "youthquake"—and women were no longer expected to dress in middle-aged, tweedy suits as soon as they grew up. Young London designers led the way and took their funky fashions to the US. "Paraphernalia," a new boutique in New York, sold British modes, with branches opening across the country. Society was becoming less formal with the invention of the contraceptive pill as reflected in the phrase "The Permissive Society." The new mood in fashion was slowly changing the more traditional areas of society: famously, model Jean Shrimpton attended the Gold Cup horse race in Australia in 1965, an annual society event, wearing a skirt 5 in (12.5 cm) above the knee.

Bright new future

The swinging sixties was a time of optimism and belief in the future—with the development of Concorde in Britain and France airplanes traveled faster than the speed of sound, and the space race between the US and the USSR reached a climax when US astronauts stepped onto the surface of the moon. This dynamism and modernity were mirrored in fashion at all levels, from the energetic action shots of new British fashion photographers such as John Cowan and David Bailey to the metallic and plastic fabrics used by French designers including Michele Rosier and Paco Rabanne.

Counterculture

With the continuing war in Vietnam, the Watergate scandal in Washington, DC, and the three-day week to conserve electricity in Britain, the bright optimism fizzled out as the sixties became the seventies. An impetus to go "back to nature" was reflected in the nostalgic romanticism of Laura Ashley printed-cotton dresses and colorful, hand-knit garments by designers such as Kaffe Fassett. Fashion entered a fantasy era from glam rock through to ethnically inspired collections such as Yves Saint Laurent's Chinese and Russian collections and Kenzo Takada's bright prints. Opting out became most extreme toward the end of the 1970s when entrepreneur Malcolm McLaren, inspired by American groups such as the New York Dolls, formed British punk band the Sex Pistols. The group wore ripped and torn T-shirts with curt slogans such as "Destroy" and "Anarchy."

The fashionable woman wears clothes. The clothes don't wear her.

MARY QUANT, FASHION DESIGNER, 1960s

1967-68 1969-70 1971-72 1973-75 1976-77 1978-79 1971 1975 1976 Halston, considered by Italian designer Giorgio The comedy crime drama Charlie's Angels makes its debut on US television. American socialites as Armani founds his own label. the best evening wear designer, is given the "Winnie" (women's wear The three female leads are celebrated for their award) at the Coty American hairstyles and individual Fashion Critics' Awards fashion choices. ► Charlie's Angels: Kate Jackson, Farrah Fawcett, and Jaclyn Smith 1967 American fashion designer Japanese designer Geoffrey Beene presents his sequined football jersey Kansai Yamamoto designs costumes evening gowns, following his for David Bowie's Ziggy Stardust tour. ball gowns in gray flannel and wool jersey shown the previous year. ► Bowie's Ziggy Stardust stage costume ▲ Concert-goer at Woodstock Ralph Lauren styles Diane The rock musical Hair opens British designer Bill Gibb on Broadway and in London's holds his debut fashion show Keaton's wardrobe in Woody West End, making Marsha Allen's film Annie Hall, 1969 at the Oriental Club, London. Hunt a star and proclaiming The Woodstock festival His romantic clothes include launching numerous copycat "black is beautiful." takes place in New York printed leather skirts and looks of baggy linen pants state, and is seen as a . colorful knits. and crisp white shirts and ties defining moment of the for women ▼ Recording of Hair with "hippie era" and the counterculture of original Broadway cast the 1960s. ▲ Plaque honoring Perry Ellis on New York's Seventh Avenue The US lands the first men London punk band the Sex on the Moon, after space Pistols play their first gig at Saint Martin's College of Art. 1978 exploration earlier in the decade, which inspires Perry Ellis founds his own space-age fashion looks. line, showing American sportswear, clothes with loose tailoring, long lines, and oversized sweaters. ▼ Astronaut Pete Conrad stands on the surface of the Moon beside ► The Sex Pistols' Johnny Rotten in concert The first Ossie Clark for Radley collection is shown at Chelsea Town Hall.

MINI MAGIC

The miniskirt spearheaded a fashion revolution, and the minidress came along hot on its heels. This one-piece was easy and versatile for young women to wear, with the basic A-line design flattering all shapes and sizes. Its very simplicity meant it could be dressed up or down. From minimal cuts and block colors to powerful patterns and pop-art prints, the dress could be as everyday or daring as the wearer wanted. Real trendsetters experimented with bold fabrics, such as metallic PVC and shiny rayon. The straight lines of the minidress silhouette left room for accessories to share the limelight. Matching handbags and shoes became a popular way to enhance and accentuate outfits. With the invention of tights, women were able to wear shorter hemlines while maintaining their modesty.

Pretty in pink Similar to a minidress but sleeveless and slightly longer, the shift dress—an unwaisted design that grew out of Balenciaga's sack style of the 1950s—was also favored during the 1960s. This classic shift dress is made from a vibrantly dyed linen, with a printed, backed collar.

British belter This oufit by Mary Quant demonstrates her creativity as a designer. Half-dress, half-skirt, the deep cutaway sides and large buckle fastening at the halter neck are both innovative and playful.

All in white This striking minidress from the 1960s boasts a crisp cut and a neat finish. The collar and hem detail breaks up the block white that was popular at the time. Long sleeves and a loose-fitting waistline present a casual, youthful look.

Polka-dot dress Worn with shiny white go-go boots, sleeveless minidresses were a hit on the dance floor, because they gave women freedom to move. The basic shape of this minidress lets the polka-dot pattern take center stage.

POP ART

During the 1950s a new artistic movement called pop art took off in the US and Britain. Using images from advertising and popular culture, artists and designers made statements on the fleeting and disposable nature of postwar society. American artist Andy Warhol led the pop-art revolution, creating designs inspired by iconic products and famous faces.

This Souper Dress pays homage to Warhol's Campbell's Soup prints, with the distinctive label multiplied into a repeating silk-screen design. The simple shape of the minidress was an ideal blank canvas to showcase Warhol's prints. And fashion provided the perfect medium for discussing themes of capitalism and commerce, art and the everyday.

FASHION ICON

TWIGGY

△ MOD HAIRCUT

Few women could carry off hairdresser Vidal Sassoon's severe five-point cut as well as gamine-faced Twiggy. Her crop hairstyle became an integral part of the mod look of the 1960s.

ANDROGYNOUS TREND 1968 ▷

Twiggy is best known for modeling ultra-feminine baby-doll dresses. But she was equally at ease in traditional menswear adapted for women's fashion.

ondon model Twiggy, born Lesley Hornby, shot to fame in 1966, her face imprinted on the decade. London youth fashions dominated the world and Twiggy was the ideal international ambassador and one of the first supermodels. The teenager's girlish, twiglike figure, short hair, wide, darkly lined and long-lashed eyes (with extra lower lashes painted on her skin), freckles, and innocent expression added up to a waiflike gamine look that spoke to ordinary young women.

The mini-girl in the mini-era

Twiggy—from her existing nickname Twigs—was an unlikely icon at just 16 years of age. She was short for a model, at 5 ft 6 in (1.68 m), with a silhouette and appearance totally different from the curvier, sophisticated models of the day. Her look was a striking version of the mod—a crucial youth-cult link.

Admiring a photograph of the young girl sporting a striking crop on the walls of a London hair salon, Daily Express journalist Deirdre McSharry asked to meet her. Soon Twiggy was splashed across the paper as "The Face of '66."

That same year saw her in a Vogue shoot and, by the following year, she had her own line of dresses and was a top international model, managed by boyfriend Justin de Villeneuve.

Throughout 1966 and 67 she was featured in magazines such as Vogue and Elle, in France, the UK, and the US. Legendary US Vogue editor Diana Vreeland championed Twiggy and gave her career a powerful boost.

Much has been said about Twiggy starting the trend for superthin models. But she has countered that she was very young when she began modeling, ate heartily, was naturally skinny, and disapproves of size zero. Twiggy's status as one of the era's most photographed people helped to promote many of the main fashion trends of the 1960s. Her short hair and underdeveloped figure made her perfect for the little boy/little girl look that revolutionized fashion from Europe to North America and through to Australasia. The look included the babydoll style and pale stockings of London designers such as Jean Varon and Gina Fratini, and the work of younger Parisian designers such as Pierre Cardin and Emmanuelle Khanh. Twiggy modeled countless variations of the all-important simple 60s mini-shift, including Yves Saint Laurent's landmark 1967 African collection, which featured revealing shift dresses made from raffia, shells, and wood beads. She was the first model to design her own range of clothing, and her line included dresses in trendy psychedelic coloring.

Twiggy's big-eyed innocence was echoed in fashion illustration, particularly in the catalogues for Biba, whose clothes she modeled. And her cropped, boyish look brought back 1920s and 30s influences—such as flapper dresses and male-style suiting—in the 1960s and 70s. All this took just four years. She retired from modeling in 1970 to focus on acting and singing, reinforcing 1920s fashions further by appearing in Ken Russell's movie The Boy Friend, released in 1971.

Promoting the mature woman

While following a varied subsequent career in music, acting, and TV, Twiggy maintained links with the fashion world, including designing clothes. Later modeling included a key role in a high-profile Marks & Spencer women's wear campaign from 2005 onward, as well as a broader role as an advocate of stylish clothes for mature women.

1949 Born Lesley Hornby in Neasden, northwest London

1965 Meets hairdresser Nigel Davies, who renames himself Justin de Villeneuve and becomes her manager

 □ 1966 Launches modeling career and advertises her Twiggy Dresses clothes line for teenage market. Voted British Woman of the Year

1967 The Twiggy Phenomenon causes a stir in New York and Twiggy appears on cover of US Vogue ► 1969 Cast in Ken Russell's movie, The Boy Friend, released in 1971 campaign featuring women of different ages. Becomes a judge on TV's America's Next Top Model

2005 Takes part in the first

Marks and Spencer women's wear ad

1970 Retires from modeling

0 1970

2009 Featured in exhibition The Model as Muse: Embodying Fashion at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art

O 1960

O 2010

MINICOATS AND SKIRTS

ith the fast-paced social scene of the swinging sixties came daring developments in fashion. The introduction of the mini mid-decade saw women wearing skirts that finished above the knee for the first time since the 1920s. Hemlines continued to rise, encouraged by the designs of Mary Quant and John Bates at Jean Varon, reaching a high of the mega-micro, 8 in (20 cm) above the knee. This controversially skimpy style was greeted by the older generation with raised eyebrows, but for young fashionistas the leggy look was an expression of a new freedom. Skirts were simple and neat but in bright, head-turning colors. Coats were similarly thigh skimming, challenging the established notion that women should cover up their bodies. The iconic miniskirt left a lasting legacy, with designers returning to the shape again and again, beyond the 20th century and into the 21st.

Block color In 1964 French designer André Courrèges included the new short style in his collection. This minidress and matching jacket in bright orange wool typifies the minimalist cut of his designs.

Asymmetric detail This simple wool coat, from 1967, shows Courrèges's flair for subtle subversion of a traditional cut. The design features large patch pockets on the diagonal, and a metallic leather belt and buttons.

Asymmetric

front button

MARY QUANT

British designer Mary Quant (1934–) launched her "London look" for the youth culture emerging in the capital. She created unique designs for the teenage market, including the micromini, and showcased them in the windows of her famous Chelsea boutique, Bazaar. The style was soon popularized and became mass produced, with sales spreading across Europe.

In Vogue This bright floral print coatdress by New York's Originala fashion house was photographed for Vogue in 1968. The design features doublebreasted button details, a large collar, and a contrasting belt in the style of a raincoat.

Belted raincoat This waterproof coat by US company Weatherbee put a modern twist on the traditional raincoat, first produced in the 1820s. Here, it is worn with white knee-high socks and Mary Jane shoes.

ANYTHING

The sixties were optimistic, upbeat, and occasionally turbulent. The new mood of freedom and rampant individualism was reflected in fashion. Younger designers in Britain such as Mary Quant and John Bates, Marion Foale and Sally Tuffin, Caroline Charles and Jean Muir, and also those in France, including André Courrèges, Emanuel Ungaro, and Pierre Cardin, had all been experimenting with more youthful styles for young women who no longer accepted that they had to dress like their mothers. From such beginnings the miniskirt was born in 1964. Hems rose swiftly, until by 1967 styles were thigh high. Stockings with garters could no longer be worn, and so manufacturers developed all-in-one tights, or pantyhose as they were then known.

In fashion once an extreme is reached then a reaction sets in. The miniskirt could get no higher, so designers brought out new skirt lengths: first of all the midi, followed by the more enduring maxi. At the same time the miniskirt still survived, and pantsuits, turtleneck sweaters, and hipster jeans—part of a "unisex" trend—were being worn. By the end of the decade it was a case of anything goes.

Once only the Rich, the Establishment set the fashion. Now it is the inexpensive little dress seen on the girls in the High Street. These girls...are alive...looking, listening, ready to try anything new...they represent the whole new spirit...

GEORGE MELLY, REVOLT INTO STYLE, 1972

99

□ CHANGING TIMES

Fashion in the 1960s was evolving at breakneck speed, as demonstrated by the breadth of styles modeled at the opening of Just Looking, one of the numerous boutiques that mushroomed on Carnaby Street and the King's Road, London.

INTO THE SPACE AGE

he 1960s was the decade of space exploration, sparking vivid imaginings about what the future might be like. Fashion was quick to take up the themes—Pierre Cardin's Space-Age collection in 1964 began the trend—which continued into the 1970s—with Paco Rabanne, André Courrèges, and Rudi Gernreich soon following suit. The look included metallic or shiny cloth along with synthetic fabrics such as clear and colored plastics, PVC, vinyl, and acrylic. Simple geometric shapes, A-line silhouettes, miniskirts, unisex styles, and bright colors created futuristic ensembles that appealed to the growing youth market.

Metallic plastics Englishman John Bates, an early proponent of the miniskirt, designed this wedding ensemble for fashion journalist Marit Allen in 1966. Bates created the double-breasted coat with wide lapels, using shiny metallic polyester and PVC.

Modern geometry Designed in 1967 by Italian-born French designer Pierre Cardin, this black and blue plastic ensemble paired with a visor is modeled by actress Raquel Welch. An instigator of space-age fashion, Cardin often focused on circular, and other geometric cutouts, and straps.

 Tights in various colors were popular, as well as black

The new armor Spanish-born French designer Paco Rabanne applied his love of jewelry design to dressmaking. He became well known for chain-mail dresses, which linked plastic or metal geometric pieces together. Model Karin Jensen wears this example from 1968.

Matching

chain-mail headdress Short-sleeved dresses appealed to young generation

Built-in booties

Space-age luxury This Lurex minidress epitomizes the use of new materials and the glamorous effect they produced. Lurex yarn creates a woven fabric made with aluminium, gold, or silver, producing a shiny, manageable surface with a touch of luxury.

Laurent, André Courrèges, and Pierre Cardin frequently used highly reflective sequins in contrasting geometric patterns, producing evening dresses that sparkled under the lights.

Practical design A red PVC, wet-look raincoat of simple design fits well within the new disposable consumer society, where plastic items were not made to last. Pierre Cardin and Mary Quant created similar designs, for the needs of futuristic women.

While older women continued to wear precious and semiprecious jewelry, younger women often opted for plastic or acrylic jewelry and accessories. Bright colors and bold geometric shapes, such as jewelry by the French design house Lanvin, complemented the mod style, while mass production made them affordable. Couture designers created innovative and clever accessories from new materials, too, such as these sunglasses (above) of soft, lightweight plastic.

(shown). Costume designer

Jacques Fonteray and fashion designer Paco Rabanne made good use of futuristic-looking materials and sex appeal.

Youthful look This pair of two-piece suits designed by Frenchman André Courrèges in 1969 illustrates his forward-thinking designs. The A-line miniskirts paired with both square and rounded jackets show his use of structure as a focal point.

EVENING SELECTION

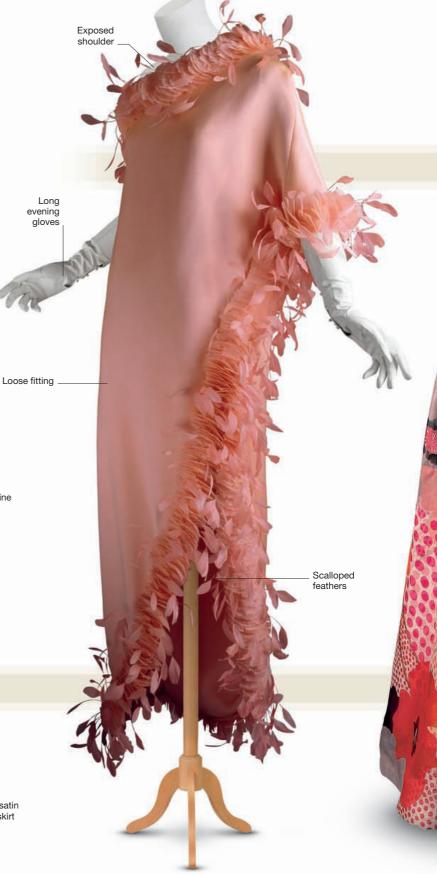

n contrast to the rigid social constructs of 1950s evening attire, the 1960s offered a variety of elegant Lchoices for going out. Gowns could be long or short, even mini for the young and hip. They could be highly trimmed and decorated, or plain—solid or print. Pants were worn as formal evening wear by the daring. For gowns, A-line silhouettes, empire waists, and undefined bodices were popular, though some soft shaping was also in use. Materials for elaborate surface decoration ranged from feathers and jewels to beads and faux fur. Many designers created evening clothesin bright colors or black and white patterns. Popular designers of the decade included French designers Hubert de Givenchy and Yves Saint Laurent, as well as the youthful British designer Jean Muir of Jane and Jane, and Italian designers Emilio Pucci and Valentino.

Pants dress The end of the 1960s saw an increasing interest in pants. This 1968 evening pants dress by Italian designer Emilio Pucci, in one of his signature bold patterns, references maxi dresses—also popular at the time.

Coq skirt This 1968 cocktail dress by French designer Givenchy has focused volume on the skirt, created by layers of dyed-black coq feathers. This gives a unique texture and shape to the otherwise monochromatic design.

Feathered trim This salmon-colored silk evening gown from Givenchy's Fall/Winter 1968–69 collection is trimmed along each hem with feathers. They give the dress an added sense of movement and flow, and also a touch of drama.

Floral print This beautiful silk chiffon evening gown, created by American designer Geoffrey Beene in 1969, demonstrates the move away from sharp tailored fashions, toward a softer, more romantic, silhouette at the end of the decade.

Bird of paradise In 1969 French designer Yves Saint Laurent created this confection of bird-of-paradise feathers and beige silk organza. The feathers are untreated and make the dress uniquely airy and dramatic.

bag

Cocktail dress Designed for Princess Stanislaus Radziwill in 1969 by Italian designer Valentino, this short, velvet cocktail dress features heavy rhinestones embroidery and openwork braid on the cap sleeves and waistband.

bag

evening bag

DESIGNER

BIBA

△ BOUTIQUE QUEEN Barbara Hulanicki, the genius behind Biba, listened closely to her customers' needs and personally chose every item sold in her shop.

FASHION ON A SHOESTRING ▷

ess a label, more a way of life, the influential Biba brand of the 1960s and 70s blazed a trail for $m{l}$ young, hip fashion and the affordable boutique. Biba's 1960s stores were a major democratizing force in a fashion world where the options were haute couture, trendy but pricey stores like Mary Quant's, or somewhat dull "grown-up" wear.

Mail-order origins

Biba was a marriage of Polish-born fashion illustrator Barbara Hulanicki's design genius and her husband Stephen Fitz-Simon's business savvy. In 1963 the couple started a mail-order clothes catalogue of Hulanicki designs that became the Biba Postal Boutique—named after Hulanicki's sister. After a pink gingham dress and headscarf was featured in the Daily Mirror they sold 17,000 units.

In 1964 the first Biba shop opened in Kensington, West London, and expanded rapidly, moving twice into bigger premises by 1969. Biba was a new kind of oasis, where friends met and shopped amid a unique, faded Victoriana created by low lighting and eclectic clothes hung from hatstands and piled on to antique furniture. Vibrantly patterned minidresses rubbed shoulders with feather boas, hats, lingerie, and accessories. All garments were originals, and were cheap and creative; limited runs ensured enormous lines to snap up the latest offerings.

Personal vision

Hulanicki's visionary mix of Victoriana, art nouveau, 1920s-30s art deco. Hollywood decadence, and pop culture ensured that Biba quickly gained an international reputation. Biba girls were independent and spirited but looked like big-eyed "dolls," with long, thin limbs and a flat chest. The distinctive Biba garment was cut with narrow, inset shoulders and high, body-lengthening armholes, with tight, narrow sleeves. Nostalgic "granny" prints and somber berry, plum, and rust tones became signatures, as did smocks, huge floppy felt hats, and the skinny, chunky-heeled, squarish-toed "Biba boot" in canvas or suede—loyal fans bought several pairs in different colors.

Sophisticated styles were appearing by the late 1960s, including bias-cut, silky 30s-style dresses, cowl necklines, and pants with panel features. Biba added children's and men's clothes, evening wear, and household goods.

Moving up and out

In 1973 the "Big Biba" department store—seven opulent floors selling Biba-branded goods ranging from furniture to baked beans—opened in the suitably art deco premises of a defunct department store on Kensington High Street. Here, celebrities such as David Bowie sipped tea on a roof garden complete with pink flamingoes, as comfortable as the student crowd. Big Biba attracted a million visitors a week, but a gathering British recession hastened its closure after just over two years, and the dream came to an end.

Biba changes hands

The Fitz-Simons moved on to other ventures abroad and the Biba name was sold, the brand resurfacing in other hands. In 2006 Bella Freud designed a shortlived collection, and in 2009/10 Biba lines were launched in two mainstream chain stores. Items included a rose-print mini-shift with bell sleeves and a vampish feather cape—true to Biba's origins, but at higher-end prices.

For originality at budget prices, Biba led the way for a decade. This dress-and-pants combination is from a 1967 collection.

> 1936 Barbara Hulanicki born in Warsaw, Poland, and raised in Palestine

then the UK

< 1964 First Riba shop selling clothes and headto-toe accessories, opens on Abingdon Road Kensington, London 1963 Launch of mailorder catalogue that become Biba Postal Boutique O 1960

√ 1970 Riba cosmetics rolled out nationally; become Hulanicki's most successful line

1973-76 Short life of the "Big Biba" department store: Riba business declared bankrupt

1971 Menswear introduced

2006-10 Riba relaunched, out of Hulanicki's hands stores feature new Biba collections

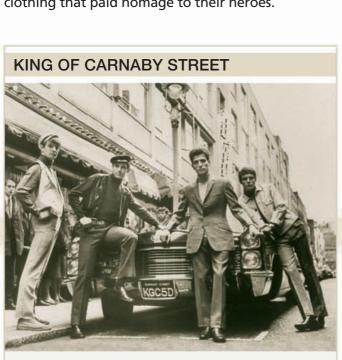

O 2000

O 1930

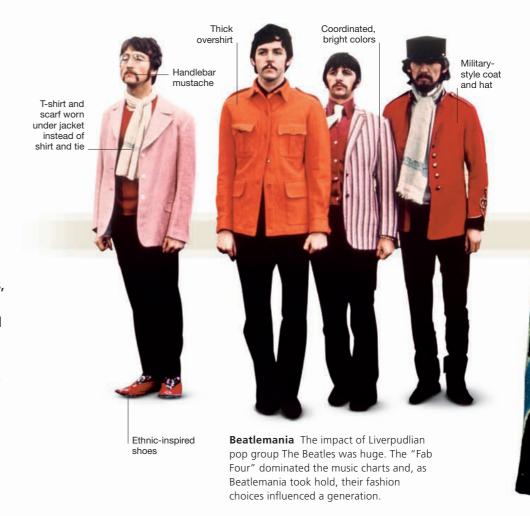

MENSWEAR GOES POP

overs and shakers from the pop charts took the fashion world by storm in the 1960s. Designers used famous faces and fleeting fads to influence and inspire their clothing collections, with the result that music and menswear went hand in hand. Top of the charts was British band The Beatles, the ultimate mods of music. Their revolutionary style, including longer hair and matching suits, was reflected in the fashions adopted enthusiastically by young men on both sides of the Atlantic. Clothing lines grew at the same rapid rate as fan bases. Continental creations favored by well-known actors and models were also manufactured for the mass market. The admiration and adulation that greeted the arrival of new style icons on the music scene, including the Rolling Stones, The Who, and The Animals, was unprecedented. More and more mainstream stores opened, encouraging young men to spend their hard-earned cash on replica clothing that paid homage to their heroes.

In 1957 John Stephen (1934–2004) arrived in London from Glasgow and started work as an assistant in Carnaby Street's Vince boutique, the first men's clothing store to open in this trendy area. Here, he was inspired to build on the growing demand for modern menswear and also unisex styles, which resulted in his chain of influential stores opening across the capital. Stephen is seen here (second right) posing with models on his beloved Carnaby Street.

Fontenoy's flares A low waist and flared legs were popular developments in men's trousers at the end of the 1960s. This on-trend pair made of synthetic jersey was produced by French fashion house Fontenoy.

Velvet cords This cotton velvet corduroy suit is made from a furnishing fabric produced by the American manufacturer Hexter. Lined with silk, it pairs a doublebreasted jacket with hipster trousers.

THE NEW DANDIES

fter World War II, the accepted norm for menswear was a double-breasted, three-piece suit, heavy in fabric and loose in fit. With dark blue, gray, or brown as the usual options, and pinstripe the only pattern around, young men simply followed suit. But by the 1960s it was not only women who were revolutionizing their wardrobes. As popular culture took over music and fashion, men also discovered a whole new range of style options. Suits sharpened up their act in subtle ways that had major aesthetic impact. Collars became longer and larger, while belts and ties grew wider. Slimmer fits were now popular, as tailored, single-breasted jackets and tighter pants showcased the male form. Color and pattern came in to the alarm of the more conservative. But for a generation of gentlemen finding their fashion feet, it was time to get suited and booted, and ultimately to suit themselves.

Fresh with finesse Designed by tailor Blades, this suit is an example of what happened when the freshness of Carnaby Street's clothing met the finesse of Savile Row's tailoring. Roy Strong wore it while he was director of the National Portrait Gallery.

Relaxing the rules The 1960s saw the arrival of more informal dress codes. Teamed here with a silk turtleneck shirt, this casual suit by H. Huntsman & Sons has a noticeably slimmer fit in the pants and modern tailoring on the jacket.

Stylish suit Double-breasted suits, with tight-fitting sleeves and lower legs, made in fabric that was light in both color and weight, such as this brought traditional menswear up to date.

Dapper delight This suit is a classic from Carnaby Street, London's fashion center during the 1960s. The long frock coat, tall "highwayman" collar, and striking bow tie result in a truly dapper design that pays homage to 19th-century dandyism.

Mismatched suit This young London mod experiments with color and pattern in his combination of oversized tweed jacket and bright red drainpipe pants. A pale shirt and white shoes keep the look casual.

Lighter stripes Trained on Savile Row, British tailor Tommy Nutter produced high-end fashion suits in the late 1960s for big names including the Beatles. This bespoke suit was designed by Nutter in the same year he opened his own shop.

SETTING UP SHOP

As trendy boutiques such as Hung On You started opening up around London in the 1960s, shopping became a popular pastime for young men. Savile Row was too expensive for most followers of fashion, and these smaller stores sold cheaper and often funkier alternatives. With male models posing inside the stores, wearing the latest creations from up-and-coming designers, trends were set and styles explored in the brave new world of men's fashion.

DESIGNER

VES ST LAURENT

giant of 20th-century international fashion, French designer Yves Saint Laurent dominated the 1960s and 70s. He deftly juggled street style and traditional tailoring, revolutionized the female wardrobe by popularizing women's pants, and raised the status of ready-to-wear clothes.

After winning an international fashion competition, a teenaged Saint Laurent studied fashion in Paris. Having seen some of his sketches, leading legend Christian Dior hired the prodigy as an assistant.

Fashion's enfant terrible

When Dior died, in 1957, Saint Laurent became Dior's creative head, and at 21 the world's youngest couturier. His first solo collection was Trapeze (1958) —short, trapezoid dresses that swung from narrow shoulders and echoed his mentor's A-lines. However, his rebellious "beatnik" collection (1960), inspired by a love of Paris's Left Bank clubs and jazz bars, sparked criticism. Appalled by the collection's streetwise black turtlenecks and leather biker-style jackets, Dior acted swiftly when Saint Laurent was drafted into the army in 1960 and replaced him with Marc Bohan. After his discharge from the army, Saint Laurent successfully sued Dior for unfair dismissal and set up his own maison, showing his first collection in 1962.

Early collections featured peacoats and smocks —more high-end reinventions of street style. The 1960s brought the shock of the cross-gender Le smoking tuxedo suit for evening wear, as well as making pantsuits a daily womens' wear staple; variants included knickerbockers and culottes. Saint Laurent's love of art exploded in the mid 1960s: color-block dresses (1965–66) inspired by Mondrian's paintings and the Pop Art collection (1966).

From hippies to disco

By the late 1960s Saint Laurent had shown his famous safari jackets and suits for women (and men), thighhigh boots, controversial see-through blouses, and an African collection (1967) inspired by ethnic motifs. He pioneered the referencing of other cultures and was the first designer to feature African and Asian runway models, his multicultural interests greatly influencing hippie fashions. There were dresses featuring exotic feathers (1969–70), and patchwork fur coats, alongside glamorous evening gowns. His 1940s-inspired, square-shouldered Libération collection (1971) offended some with its reminders of German occupation but made a huge mark on the 1970s. The watershed Opéra-Ballets Russes collection (1976) offered "peasant chic." Mixing larger shapes and gemlike colors, its luxurious notes chimed with the growing hedonistic US disco scene and helped define 1980s couture.

The empire changes

Through the 1980s and 90s Saint Laurent consolidated both his classic styles and an empire embracing fragrances, cosmetics, home linens, accessories, the all-important ready-towear lines and stores, and stylish menswear. In 1999 Gucci bought the YSL ready-to-wear line and made Tom Ford its designer (1999-2004). Ford paid homage to many YSL classics, while his successor, Stefano Pilati, favored a sharp chic. Hedi Slimane, former designer at Dior Homme, took over in 2012.

Saint Laurent closed the couture business and retired in 2002. His promotion of the timeless classic remains a major legacy, while YSL motifs crop up constantly in the collections of younger designers, such as the tuxedo styles of Stella McCartney.

△ YSL Yves Saint Laurent outside his first London boutique in the late 1960s. Couture's "bad boy" was much influenced by Paris's Left Bank scene and used the name Rive Gauche for all his boutiques and ready-to-wear collections

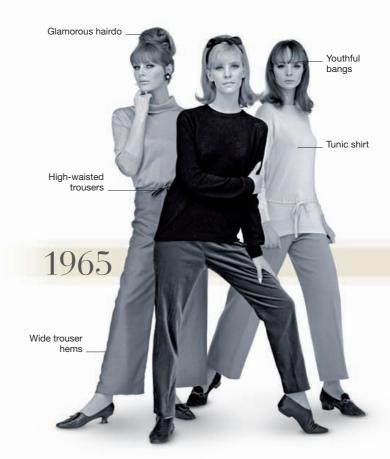

□ PANTS REVOLUTION

Until Saint Laurent dared to change everything, women were sometimes refused entry to restaurants for wearing pants. This glamorous suit featured in his 1979 Spring/Summer collection.

WOMEN WEAR THE PANTS

temming from the unisex fashions by futuristic designers such as Pierre Cardin and André Courrèges, fashionable women began wearing pants in the 1960s and 70s. The sexual revolution and "women's lib" meant that women were taking greater strides to enter the workforce, and as a result they borrowed more from men's fashion. French designer Yves Saint Laurent (YSL) first created his sleek but controversial Le Smoking tuxedo suit for women in 1966, and continued to create androgynous styles each season. The look slowly became more widely accepted as an alternative to skirts and dresses. In 1971 YSL was inspired by 1940s clothing, incorporating this look into pantsuits and jumpsuits alike. Other designers quickly followed his example. The hippie flower power movement brought in faded denim jeans with wide hems, and the advent of disco encouraged sleek, figure-hugging suits with wide, bell-bottomed pants for both men and women.

Tapered to bell-bottoms From the beginning, pants were worn by younger women as a part of the growing youth culture. This group from 1965 shows the variety of styles. As the decade progressed, pants evolved, including more fitted styles and more flared pairs.

AND MEN WEAR THE HEELS

Starting in 1967 designers began to bring back the platform shoe for both men and women, a look that had last been popular in the 1940s. British musical performers such as Elton John and David Bowie quickly adopted the look as a part of a new "male peacock" and psychedelic movement in men's fashion. The examples here are of modest leather styles and heel height, but some platforms were as high as 6-7 in (15-18 cm) and made of wildly imaginative materials and textures such as cork, textured fabric, rope, and even leather-covered plastics or wood. Platform shoes and boots went well with a pair of bell-bottoms.

The acid test Bright colors and simple motifs bridged the gap between 1960s and 70s design. Marimekko, a Finnish design firm, led the way by creating bold floral prints similar to this stylized daisy-print jacket with acid-yellow trousers.

Floral motif British designer Janice Wainwright created this black pantsuit embroidered with floral Art Deco motifs—a typical detail of her work from this period. She continued to focus on simple silver-thread embroidery through the 1970s.

Dramatic cat's-eye makeup Jabot blouse and black silk bow tie Alpaca dinner spencer jacket 1967 Sleek tailored leg Slight flare tailored jacket

Modern

Romantic textile design

High-fashion trousers French designer YSL presented the women's tuxedo suit, Le Smoking, and it soon became the signature piece of his collection. YSL became well known for empowering women with the option to wear men's styles.

Jump into the future Continuing the interest in outer space and the future that began in the 1960s, the 70s jumpsuit had ties to futurism and popular science fiction of the era. It became the ultimate in stylish leisurewear, due to its utilitarian functionality.

turn-up

Similar to upholstery

fabric

JEANS

Levi's had been around for 100 years but, by the 1960s, they had become the uniform of youth. Hippies wore faded and bellbottomed jeans, often customizing them as a part of the antifashion movement. "Second skin" or figure-hugging jeans were high waisted to emphasize long legs. The first "branded" jeans were introduced by Gloria Vanderbilt and Calvin Klein and were widely worn by the fashionable elite, such as Bianca Jagger and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

War influence This gray tweed jumpsuit from Stirling Cooper is a variation on the boiler suit worn by women factory workers during World War II. Inspired by 1940s style, the suit's wide lapels and bell-bottomed trousers are typical of the 1970s.

FLOWER POWER

Preaching love, peace, and freedom, the hippie movement was a vocal and articulate subculture. Hippies first emerged in 1967 in San Francisco's Haight—Ashbury district, but the trend was soon adopted around the world. They not only took issue with the lifestyle of their parents, but also with racial inequality, sexual discrimination, and civil rights. Protest was at the heart of the movement, in particular against the US involvement in the Vietnam War (1965–73).

Hippie dress conveyed new beliefs: peace, interest in other cultures, and experimentation—especially with psychedelic drugs; bright clothing patterns attempted to reflect the LSD experience. The trend was antifashion and individuality was the key. Clothing, often secondhand, was customized with patchwork, embroidery, and appliquéd designs. Rustic imagery and celestial symbols reflected the strong pacifist and back-to-nature sentiments. The ethnic look dominated: shaggy Afghan coats, fringed suede jackets, caftans, head scarves, and lots of beads. Patterns were psychedelic, and where possible fabrics were natural. Skirt lengths dropped to the floor in swaying maxis, though the mini was still worn, and flares and bell bottoms were in style for pants. American blue jeans were no longer the preserve of the working class, and denim was worn by nearly everyone. The clothes and hairstyles of Indian and African-American communities were also incorporated. The fashion for unisex blossomed, and clothes were gender neutral with couples often wearing the same outfits.

Today, nothing is out, because everything is in. Every costume from every era is now available to everyone.

MARSHALL MCLUHAN, HARPER'S BAZAAR, 1968

99

BIRTH OF THE HIPPIE >

Hippies spreading flower power in Haight-Ashbury, San Francisco, CA, in 1968. Bright, patterned dresses were influenced by Indian fabrics and psychedelic experimentation.

LONG PRINTED DRESSES

n the 1970s short skirts were replaced by long, loose A-line dresses. Reminiscent of dress lengths in Victorian times, these L "floor-skimmers" wowed with flower power patterns, paisley prints, feminine fabrics, and softer shades. The new decade saw young women embracing peace, love, and freedom in a clear rejection of the warring nations and corrupt capitalist societies dominating the news around the world. The shift toward idealistic notions of harmonious living was best reflected in carefree, natural attire. The ethnic styles of non-Western cultures, especially Indian clothing and fabrics, visibly influenced the dresses of the hippie movement. Styles also reflected a romantic, nostalgic view of the past, recalling the countryside or Victorian aesthetics. Many women opted for tie-dyed creations or floral patterns, personalizing their dresses and jewelry with decorative beads and tassels, and adding printed head scarves and turbans. In the 21st century maxi dresses made another appearance, as long lengths became fashionable again.

Floral leather motifs

Leather streamers with plastic tubing

Full-length

Pop star production Made

Clark's creations Flamboyant British designer Ossie Clark was renowned for his flowing dresses in beautifully soft fabrics. Looking Platform open-toed sandals to Hollywood's glamour girls for inspiration, his lavish designs flattered the female form.

Fabric of choice Silk was another popular fabric during the 1970s. This striking ensemble consisting of a shirt, skirt, and turban in matching silk was crafted by Italian designer Pancaldi & B. in 1976

Skirt of Fitted shirt

WEDGES AND PLATFORMS

While many hippies preferred to pair their long dresses with bare feet for an entirely natural look, designers were stepping up a gear with ever more exciting shoe styles. From bulky boots to strappy sandals, young women and men had an abundance of choice with the variety of shoes both available and on trend in the 1970s. For practical purposes, heels stayed low, but when dressing to impress, wedges or platforms were the chunky choice, adding inches to leg lines. Despite medical advice that these high heels were dangerous, young women put their best foot forward, creating more statuesque silhouettes

Wedge-heeled cloas

Low-heeled

lace-up boots

Floaty florals When Welsh designer Laura Ashley shifted from furniture coverings to feminine clothing, her signature style was defined. Pretty floral prints in natural cotton or pinwale corduroy resulted in classic romantic dresses.

Stitching satin British designer Zandra Rhodes produced a series of textiles, called Knitted Circles, with motifs taken from knitting and embroidery stitches The distinctive motifs are seen on this silk screened caftan-style dress.

Halter-neck hit Empire-line halter-neck dresses were the ultimate in hippie chic. This 1974 example has a deep scoop at the back, but it is the pattern that catches the eye. The floral print has contrasting paisley panels sewn into the handkerchief skirt.

Berry best Inspired by Ossie Clark, this strawberry-print dress flatters the female form while showing just a hint of flesh around the neck and bodice. The wraparound skirt ties at the back with a matching sash waistband.

SOFT SUEDE DAY DRESS

Topstitching adds subtle detail

Soft frill across the top of the bodice_ has a beaded tassel decoration and a belt that can be tied at rows of hand-punched eyelets in a dot and teardrop pattern the front or back. In trademark Muir style, the skirt has two shape, its construction enhancing the wearer's movements. knee-length, navy, suede dress is typical of her fluid, timeless clothes: subtly detailed and made from a natural Unlined, the dress is gathered at the neck in a soft frill. It (1928–1995) was at the height of her success. This fabric that hangs beautifully to emphasize the female that is repeated around the armhole and on the belt. y the mid-1970s, British designer Jean Muir

△ DRESS LABEL

Belt sits naturally on the waist

1

Muir launched her own label in 1966. From the beginning her ageless classics, always flattering, and beautifully feminine. name was associated with like woven or knit fabric, the intricately constructed dress is gently gathered at the top of the With the unlined suede worked bodice to create a soft neckline.

△ FRILLED NECKLINE

△ TASSEL DECORATION

Being particularly careful with her use of accessories and decoration, suede tassel with beads—a small on this dress Muir has added a nod to 1970s fashion.

△ BACK BUTTONING

Muir loved beautiful buttons and a four-button placket on the rear used handcrafted ones on many of her clothes. Here, she places of the dress to close the bodice.

$\vartriangleleft \text{ TIE BELT}$ tied loosely at waist level, either at The butter-soft suede belt can be the front or back. Small, punched eyelets, matching those on the dress, add subtle decoration.

detailing, used on the skirt, was dubbed "brogueing" by the press. Muir's trademark, hand-punched The heaviness of the suede gives the dress a sculptural quality.

STYLISH CASUALS

ven dressing down involved staying stylish in the 1970s. Simple cotton, versatile polyester, and comfortable jersey were ideal fabrics for everyday wear, but it was handcrafted knitwear that had the fashion-conscious in a tizzy. Knit and crochet garments in bright colors and geometric patterns not only kept women warm but also meant they were in fashion. At this time, color coordination became possible as mix-and-match collections of separates grew to be commonplace in boutiques and stores. In these one-stop shops customers could get entirely matching outfits without having to rummage around for similar pieces. Those on a tight budget could buy balls of wool and knit or crotchet a whole new wardrobe for themselves. For winter days, women opted for chunky cardigans, wool skirts, jersey tops, and pinafore dresses to look impressively in style with the very minimum of effort. But it was not only fashion designers coming up with the goods—anyone could follow a crochet or knit pattern and create their own clothing.

Lacy confection This crocheted outfit by British knitwear designer Mary Farrin comprises a stylish matching skirt and blouse. Both are crafted from a slub-textured yarn, including intricate, heavy lace detailing around the sleeves, buttons, and hemline.

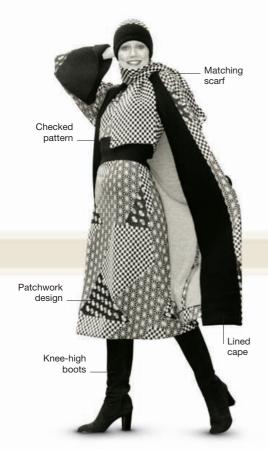

Maxi skirt Legendary British designer Mary Quant was the creator of this popular look. The pale blue blouse with an oversized bow is coupled with a silky blue, pleated maxi skirt. The hat and platforms set the 1970s seal.

Chorister costume Designed in 1971 by British designer John Bates, this ensemble was named for its similarity to choirboy dress. The tweed maxi dress was worn with a plain-weave rayon blouse, with stiffened, circular collar and cuffs.

Princely pinafore The pinafore dress was easy to wear because of its apron style and full skirt. The example from 1972 (left) by John Bates uses a Prince of Wales check. The choice of blouse worn underneath influenced the overall look.

Check it out Checked and patterned fabrics brought casual wear to life, as seen in this 1975 outfit. Though the everyday styles prioritized being warm and comfortable, eye-catching prints breathed new life into the basic designs.

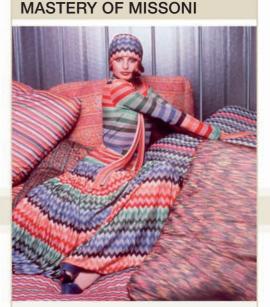

Bus Stop top A classic miniskirt was a versatile wardrobe staple, making the top the focus. This crêpe de Chine blouse by popular British 1970s fashion chain Bus Stop combines distinctive colors with a flattering, feminine fit.

Sharp stripes London Fashion Week in 1975 featured a range of on-trend knitwear designs. The latest winter warmers introduced powerful patterns and contrasting colors, such as this striped knit jacket and matching skirt.

America's Beverly Johnson is seen here in 1974 working a cotton-knit cardigan, matching button-front tank top, and pleated wool skirt by American designer Bill Blass.

Model knits One of the first black models,

Founded in 1953, Italian fashion house Missoni was the center of knitwear, designing everyday clothing in cotton, linen, rayon, silk, and wool. Bright, colorful patterns were the company's trademark, reflected in this outfit from 1975, which consisted of a herringbone weave head scarf, striped top, and maxi skirt. Even the bed linen around the model in this image is made from Missoni's distinctive fabric.

STAGE, DANCE, AND PARTY

The 1970s was about fantasy, escapism, and new fabrics, expressed in exuberant colors and prints and experimentation with style. Big stars were shining bright in outfits that went all out to impress. Chart toppers and celebrities donned the finest fabrics to create luxurious looks that were a photographer's dream. Classy, full-length figure huggers battled with short, sparkly halter necks and hot pants for center stage. Lycra, satin, and velvet were the fabrics of choice, while feathers and sequins added extra sparkle. Designers went to town creating showstoppers, knowing that an outfit could make or break an up-and-coming artist. As innovative styles were worn, new fashion icons were born. Young people copied their idols, putting on the glitz in cheaper imitations.

AGE OF ACCESSORIES

Dresses and suits were set off by a variety of on-trend accessories. With the penchant for luxurious soft fabrics, many were made of suede, velvet, and fake fur, including hats and handbags. Belts were also tightening their fashion grip as unusual chain versions cinched in waists and accentuated outfits.

Hot pants and chain belt

Long-strapped shoulder bags in materials such as sleek satins, crushed velvets, and colored leather were a must-have for young women. Art Deco inspired bags were styled with ornate decorations and artificial jewels. Straps ranged from narrow chains to chunky leather, while buckle and zipper closures finished the look.

Gold bag by Judith Leiber

Decorative bag

Feathered detail makes shoulders appear padded

Fancy feathers Theatrical influences turned some clothing into costumes. British designer Carol McNicoll here mixes fine fabrics, using feathers to showcase the shoulders, flared satin to add originality, and a colorful vest to break up the black.

Matching

Heart-shaped décolleté

Half navv bright red

turban

Rainbow dress African-American designer Stephen Burrows's passion for both strong colors and comfortable, jersey-style materials are seen in this evening dress from 1973. Bands of colors are seamed carefully around a white, oval center.

All white In 1974 Bianca Jagger, then wife of Rolling Stones front man Mick Jagger, wore a dazzling white satin pantsuit by US designer Roy Halston Frowick. Halstoninspired outfits were popular at Studio 54 in New York and parties in 1970s London.

Stage suit Rod Stewart wore this slinky, white suit in 1975 while on a US tour with his band the Faces. The legendary rock star has a fashionable, mullet hairstyle and wears bell-bottoms and a blouselike shirt in shimmering satin.

Flared,

satin pants

Starman's stripes Pop star David Bowie was fearless when it came to fashion. He experimented with makeup, hair dye, hairstyles, and clothing throughout the 1970s to the delight of his fans. This unisex, striped top and pants pushed fashion boundaries.

Shorter-length

pants

Supreme style A passion for purple was evident in singer Diana Ross's choice of gown here. Worn in 1975 for a photoshoot, the elegant shape and feminine fit of this design by Mahogany ensured she looked every inch the star.

THE DESIGNER DE CADES

1980 ONWARD

THE DESIGNER DECADES

In the modern age, fashion designers have become celebrities and runway shows are major events. Late in the 20th century creativity reached new heights, and designers began to use the runway show as theater, as in Alexander McQueen's Spring/Summer 1999 collection, where machines spray painted the models' dresses in front of the audience. The London Designer Collections were established in the 1980s, and fashion journalists and buyers traveled to New York, London, Milan, and Paris every spring and fall to view the collection for the following season. The power of the brand, from Armani to Burberry, became international—designers' names sold products. Calvin Klein's fragrances, for example, sold an aspirational lifestyle, and his underwear line in the 1990s was so famous that the garment became known simply by the designer's name.

Street style

For the first time, fashions emerged from the street not the design studio. Toward the end of the 20th century the dress of subculture groups from goths to surfers became increasingly mainstream. The fresh and authentic feel to street style seized the imagination of designers, and the styles themselves became more complex as designers adapted and reworked them. Parisian designers were particularly engaged with street style: Jean-Paul Gaultier famously said he was inspired by London club wear in the 1980s, and Karl Lagerfeld showed stretch denim and baseball caps combined with classic Chanel jackets in the early 1990s. A particularly popular street style during the 1990s was the phenomenon that came to be known as "bling." Popularized by hip-hop culture, wearing expensive-looking clothing and in particular lots of light-reflecting jewelry became a dominant fashion trend through the 1990s and 2000s.

Globalization

Communication became truly global with the invention of the internet and social media, and a sense of worldwide consciousness developed as a result. Fashion, too, became more international, and production moved away from Europe and America to China and Asia. The cycle of increased production and consumption from the 1990s onward led to the success of mainstream, mass-market stores such as Zara and Victoria's Secret. Supermarkets and budget clothes retailers such as Walmart in the US and Primark in the UK also experienced booms in business following the economic crisis of the late 2000s. In the late 1990s international fashion weeks began to crop up all over the globe. Though traditional fashion hubs such as Paris remained key, Mexico, New Zealand, and Pakistan host their own style events.

1980-81 1982-84 1985-88

Lady Diana Spencer marries Prince Charles. She wears an ivory silk wedding dress designed by David and Elizabeth Emanuel. It sets the fashion for wedding dresses for at least the next 10 years

> Diana's wedding dress had puffed sleeves and 25-ft (7.5-m) train

1981

Music Television (MTV) is born and brings pop-star syles to a global audience.

▲ MTV brought star style to popular consciousness

The first episode of the US TV series Dynasty airs and helps to popularize power dressing and shoulder pads.

▼ The cast of Dynasty set 1980s

With her jangling jewelry, lace, black mesh vest, and hair bows, Madonna in Desperately Seeking Susan becomes a style icon for many women throughout Dolce and Gabbana's first women's collection is presented in Milan.

John-Paul Gautier launches his Dadaiste collection, which includes his signature corset.

Donna Karan International is established.

Polo Ralph Lauren flagship store is built in New York City.

Anna Wintour becomes editor-in-chief at American Vogue.

Power dressing now is designed to let the woman inside us come through.

DONNA KARAN, 2006

99

1989-90 1991-92 1993-96 1997-2000 2001-07 2008> The first season of reality Prada launches its women's Vivienne Westwood wins the First Lady Michelle Obama ready-to-wear collection, British Fashion Award for contest America's Next wears a dress by Jason Top Model premieres on bringing its designs to a wider Designer of the Year. Wu at the inaugural ball US television. for President Barack Obama. ➤ Vivienne Westwood with her muse, model Sara Stockbridge ► Jason Wu's white ball gown Rifat Ozbek's all-white New Tom Ford becomes creative The group Designers Against Age collection is launched. director of Gucci Aids is launched to promote It is viewed as a backlash awareness of the disease. against the 1980s and a Designer Marc Jacobs and clothes store H&M go on to spiritual new dawn for fashion at the beginning of a new decade. ■ The red ribbon symbolizes AIDS solidarity The Fendi Baguette Bag The Istanbul Cevahir Kate Middleton and Prince Nirvana releases its "Smells Like Teen emerges. It is the first of the designer "it bags" and becomes an Shopping Centre opens. William announce their engagement. She wears an Issa London sapphire Spirit" single, which It is the largest mall in is a big influence on Europe, and the sixth "grunge" style. overnight sensation. largest in the world. dress, which sells out within minutes. The following year she marries Prince William in a bridal dress designed ➤ Nirvana's single, from by Sarah Burton for the album Nevermind, remained high on the Álexander McQueen. charts during 1991 ▲ Madonna's conical "bullet bra" Marc Jacobs wins the is an enduring fashion icon Friends actress Jennifer Italian fashion designer Gianni Aniston debuts "the Rachel haircut." It is copied around Council of Fashion Designers 1990 of America's award for

1000

Vera Wang opens her own design salon in New York, featuring her trademark bridal gowns.

Madonna creates a fashion sensation when she wears the notorious Jean Paul Gaultier corset during her Blonde Ambition World Tour.

1990

Fashion models become increasingly successful and recognizable; the age of the supermodel begins.

John Galliano is head designer at the House of Dior.

Women's Designer of the Year. He is later dismissed a "grunge" collection.

from Perry Ellis for designing

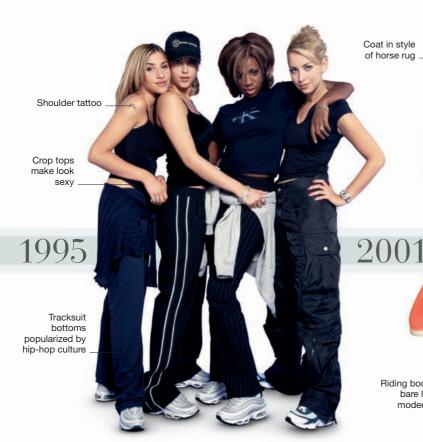

Italian fashion designer Giann Versace is murdered outside his Miami Beach home; his sister Donatella Versace becomes head of design at Versace.

▼ Visitors flock to the Chanel exhibition in China

FITNESS IN FASHION

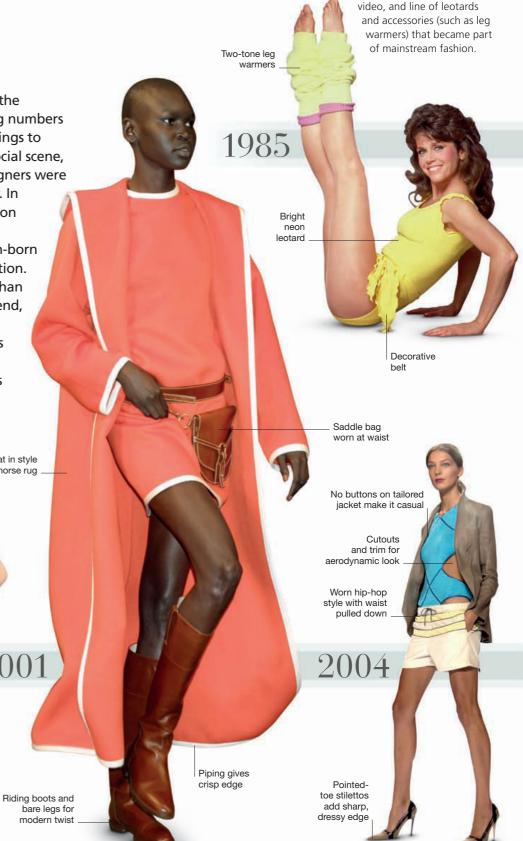

The fitness boom of the 1980s was the catalyst for the crossover of sportswear into fashion. As increasing numbers of women donned gym shorts, leotards, and leggings to attend aerobics classes or workout, the gym became a social scene, and exercise garb became stylish. At the same time, designers were experimenting with fabrics normally used for activewear. In 1980 American designer Norma Kamali created a collection entirely in gray fleece jersey; in 1984 Donna Karan, also American, popularized the stretch bodysuit; and Tunisian-born Azzedine Alaia designed Lycra dresses—a fashion revolution. Women's bodies were now shaping the clothes, rather than clothes shaping the body. Beyond the body-conscious trend, other sportswear styles have infiltrated fashion over the past few decades. The celebrity status of athletes, such as basketball players, coupled with a trend toward casual dress, has made athletic gear, especially footwear such as sneakers, desirable and prestigious.

Track stars Pop stars adapted designer sportswear and took it to a wider audience. British group All Saints wore tracksuit bottoms and sneakers as a kind of uniform in the mid-1990s, and girls around the nation copied their style.

Equestrian chic Riding clothes are a recurring source of inspiration. American designer Michael Kors' Fall/Winter 2001 collection included jodhpurstyle pants and quilted field skirts, creating a new way of dressing based on active sportswear.

Deluxe sportswear Paired with a tailored jacket and high heels, a swimsuit and gym shorts become idiosyncratically luxurious. This look, by New York-based Proenza Schouler, turns sportswear into high fashion.

Jane Fonda's workout lane Fonda was the idea of exercise clothes. She released a bestselling book, one of the personalities credited with spreading the aerobics craze and changing

FITNESS IN FASHION

Antifashion A rap star in the late 1980s and early 90s, Will Smith (right) reflected the antifashion mood of the times in his clothing. Oversized casual wear, stonewashed jeans, and pristine sneakers indicated street credibility, in contrast with the central figure above.

When Jennifer Beals leapt across cinema screens in the 1983 movie Flashdance as steelworker-cum-dancer Alex Owens, she sparked a passion for dance-wear-inspired fashions. Slouchy, off-the-shoulder gym sweats, and ripped T-shirts are still referred to as "the Flashdance look."

Revival of sun visor

Built-in support

Basketball stars Converse basketball sneakers were first manufactured around 1908, and helped popularize the sport. From the 1980s Converse sneakers became a fashion item, worn by hip-hop and rap stars, including Snoop Dogg who used them as his trademark style.

Juicy tracksuit Juicy Couture's hooded tracksuit launched in 2001 made casual clothes sexy. By 2003 it had become ubiquitous. Sales soared when Madonna was photographed wearing a customized version.

stretch materials for peak performance, but adds her own desirable details.

DESIGNER

VIVIENNE WESTWOOD

 \triangle FASHION REVOLUTION Rebel fashion visionary Vivienne Westwood wears a signature plaid bondage suit in 1977. Working alongside Malcolm McLaren, her look became the uniform of the punk movement.

GLAMOROUS ANARCHY ▷

Westwood's Spring/Summer 2012 collection, inspired by China, mixed in corsets, lace, brocade, and ticking-stripe bedspread fabrics, and dramatic make-up to glorious effect.

ne of the most admired British fashion designers, Vivienne Westwood has played a key role on the British and international fashion stage for over three decades. Westwood began designing in 1971 when she opened her first store, Let It Rock, on the King's Road, London, with partner Malcolm McLaren (1946–2010). She looked to the past for inspiration and sold teddy boy clothes reflecting delinquent youth culture, moving on to bikerinspired gear with black leather and zippers. Rebranding their store Sex (1975), they advertised their ambition to bring sexual experimentation and fetish to London streets. The store soon became synonymous with punk, heavily promoted by McLaren's new band, the Sex Pistols. The look was aggressive and anarchistic. Sweaters had holes in them, and safety pins pierced cheeks and lips. T-shirts were slashed, and emblazoned with provocative images, studs, and slogans. The bondage look became integral to the punk genre, using leather and rubber. In particular, pants

The romantic look

As punk fashion became absorbed into the mainstream, Westwood explored the essence of Englishness and sexual politics. Drawing again on historical costumes, she devised a new range of clothes that formed the basis of her first runway collection (1981) were adorned with bondage straps and chains.

The Pirate range was adopted by musicians labeled the New Romantics, who embraced the baggy pants, frills, billowing shirts, and lavish colors that were inspired by 18th-century men's clothing. The Savage collection (1982) gravitated toward a tribal look, with rough, distressed fabrics and exposed seams, while Buffalo Girls (also known as Nostalgia of Mud) garments of 1982–83 were made from combinations of twisted, oversized asymmetrical cuts of layered material, inspired by Third World cultures.

Body-shaping design

The corset emerged as a key element, along with other body-shaping pieces such as the crinoline, bustle, and towering shoe. While in Italy in the mid-80s Westwood developed the Mini-Crini, featuring shortened 19th-centurystyle crinolines teamed with tailored jackets—the antithesis of 1980s masculine power dressing. She later combined the style with traditional British fabrics such as Harris Tweed and Scottish tartans. Her Anglomania collection (1993–94) ran with the theme with mini kilts, gowns, newly created tartans, and tweeds. Westwood said, "I am never more happy than when I parody the British in the context of a classical perspective." Designs constricted posture and movement and emphasized the hips. Underwear became outerwear, with bras worn over dresses.

Westwood's Café Society collection (1994) was a new take on the hourglass silhouette. Collaborating with her partner Andreas Kronthaler, bustles were made from cushions and cages, voluminous dresses had long trains, and busts were padded. Famously, platform shoes were extremely high. She later became inspired by the costumes in paintings by French artist Jean-Antoine Watteau (1684–1721), creating sumptuous, strapless gowns made of silk taffeta.

By the end of the 1990s Westwood was firmly established as one of the most important designers in the world. She launched a fragrance line and opened new labels. Despite being made a Dame of the British Empire in 2006, her clothes are still subversive. Rooted in the classics, Westwood remains unflinchingly cutting edge.

1971 Westwood and partner, Malcolm McLaren open their London store Let It Rock

1981 Her first runway show, Pirate, borrows heavily from history and inspires the look of the New Romantics

1976 The Sex Pistols play their first gig wearing Westwood designs

1989-91 Appointed Professor of Fashion at Vienna Academy of Applied Arts. Shows first menswear collection in Florence

1982-83 Buffalo and Punkature are shown in Paris to critical acclaim. Her innovative designs are widely copied

1993 Designs her own tartan and tweed for Analomania collection. Includes staggeringly high platform shoes

1996 Vivienne Westwood Man is launched, and she opens stores in London, New York, Tokyo, and Milan

1994 The British Fashion Council names Westwood designer of the year as she launches her new Red Label

Spring Summe menswear collection sets the trend for a relaxed nformal style with plaid trousers

2011 The

O 1970

O 1980

O 1985

O 1990

O 1995

O 2000

MUST-HAVE LABELS

fter the antifashion 1970s, when casual and street clothes gained prominence, it seemed inevitable that the role of the designer would stage a revival. During the 1980s not only was interest focused increasingly on high fashion, but also on the designer as a personality. The names of some designers became synonymous with their iconic pieces: Italian Gianni Versace for his perfectly fitting cocktail dresses in metallic colors; Frenchmen Christian Lacroix for his puffball skirt and rose prints, and Jean Paul Gaultier for his cone bra; and the German Karl Lagerfeld for the classic Chanel suit updated in jewel colors with a flamboyant dash. Some of the influential 1980s designers continue to the present day.

History After the furor of punk designs Vivienne Westwood produced a number of inventive collections in the early 1980s that established her as a mainstream force. This piece is part of her Savage collection.

New look French designer Thierry Mugler created a new way of dressing for women in the 1980s, using a strict cut and precision lines to enhance, and contrast with, natural body curves. This nautical look is from Spring/Summer 1983.

Evening fantasy In the "greedy" 1980s most women could not afford luxury brands, but there were many mid-priced designers creating stylish clothes. Vera Mont was one such British label, which focused on party dresses and bridal wear.

Body-conscious engineering Tunisian-born Azzedine Alaïa was one of the most influential designers of the 1980s. Women loved his formfitting clothes because they were a kind of internal corset to hold and flatter the wearer.

Extravagant couture Despite being the youngest couturier in 1986, Lacroix's look drew on old-world luxury. His designs brimmed with historical references, and were executed with gorgeous fabrics and a sense of coquettish charm.

DESIGNER

JEAN PAUL GAULTIER

ubbed the enfant terrible of fashion, French designer Jean Paul Gaultier catapulted onto the scene of the late 1970s, upending the status quo with his unconventional, and often humorous, avant-garde creations. Gaultier had no formal training as a designer. He started his career in 1970 as an assistant at Pierre Cardin, and then, in 1976, he scraped together funds to set up a new label for women.

His first collection included a studded leather jacket paired with a tutu. Gaultier derived inspiration from movies, music, and street culture, showing a deep appreciation of multiculturalism. He loved London, attracted by the look of punk, and iconic figures such as James Bond. His first thematic collection (1979), full of miniskirts and leather pants, brought him international attention. Gaultier went on to turn the classic idea of Parisian chic on its head. He introduced elements that became Gaultier staples: the navy-and-white striped Breton fisherman's sweater and the reconstructed trench coat.

Gender bender

In 1983 Gaultier launched the Dadaiste collection, establishing what would become a signature outfit: the corset. Reworking an object of female suppression, he turned it into a symbol of feminine power. (The pop star Madonna later wore Gaultier's most famous creation, a beige corset, for her 1990 Blond Ambition World Tour.) Gaultier jumped into menswear in 1984. Men had been reportedly buying Gaultier women's jackets because of the fabrics he used and the clever cut. Seizing the moment, Gaultier produced a sensational runway show where men wore see-through skirts and women smoked pipes. Gaultier continued to play with the idea of men in skirts through the 1980s and 90s, offering a variety of styles, including kilts, sarongs, tunics, and maxi skirts. He became famous for using unconventional models such as older men, full-figured women, and heavily tattooed models, and played with gender stereotypes. A master tailor, he used details such as metal-tipped collars and extended shoulder lines to create a flattering shape, demonstrating a supreme appreciation of cut, form, and beautiful fabrics.

Further inspiration

Gaultier's interest in pulling together different cultures continued. His fall collection of 1993, inspired by the traditional apparel of male Hasidic Jews, was typically controversial. His profile was further raised, especially in America, when he turned his hand to costume design, creating clothes for such movies as Luc Besson's The Fifth Element, Peter Greenaway's The Cook, The Thief, His Wife and Her Lover, and Pedro Almodavar's Kikaa.

Brand name

In 1997, disappointed not to be chosen as the new head designer at the House of Dior, Gaultier launched his first couture collection to critical acclaim. From a strapless denim ball gown to a feather and seashell dress, he has created clothes that mix outrageous features with high-quality tailoring. The Jean Paul Gaultier brand now includes jeans, eyewear, accessories, jewelry, ties, perfume, and shoes. Gaultier may have been fashion's bad boy, but he has become one of the most respected designers in the world.

△ SHARP TAILORING

Gaultier has become world famous for his exemplary couture skills. Here, he wears two of his signature pieces: a beautifully tailored tuxedo jacket worn over a classic Breton striped top.

⊲ GREEK CHIC

Inspired by other cultures, Gaultier based his 2006 Spring/Summer couture collection on ancient Greek mythology, dressing some of his models as goddesses, with wide puffed trousers, surprising cutouts, and soft pleats.

TME LINE

1952 Born Arcueil, France
collection makes a strong aesthetic statement with leather, miniskirts, and beautifully tailored silhouettes

1976 Launches first women's label at the Palais de la Decouverte in Paris and earns the title enfant terrible

O 1950 O 1970

1985 Introduces skirts for men in his And God Created Man collection

O 1980

1990

orld Spring/Summer cional show features tribal-style models and clothing

1993 Launches Chic Rabbis, inspired by Jewish Orthodox apparel

1994 ▷ //Summer / features le models d clothing

1997 Launches women's haute couture, Gaultier Paris. Designs the costumes for Luc Besson's The Fifth Flement

2000 Receives prestigious International Award from the Council of Fashion Designers of America 2003–10 Creative director for Hermès

2012 Member of the jury at the Film Festival in Cannes

O 2000

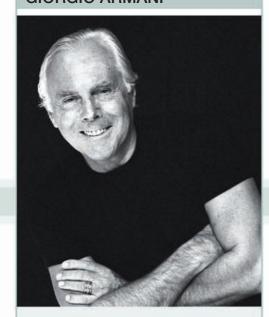

1980-2012

A POWERFUL MESSAGE

he idea of using clothes to convey status is as old as civilization, but fashion historians point to the 1980s as the pinnacle of power dressing. As more women entered traditionally maleoriented work environments, they found it advantageous to dress as though they were in command, and sure of their sexuality. This meant jackets with heavily padded shoulders, vibrant colors, big hairdos, bold accessories, and shoes with pointed toes and spiked heels. Throughout the decade TV series such as Dallas and Dynasty influenced women's wardrobes. These shows projected images of rich, confident women wearing jewel-toned suits with sharp shoulder lines, extravagant dresses, and larger-than-life jewelry. From the 1990s onward designers such as Calvin Klein and Giorgio Armani developed a low-key, less "costumey" style such as Calvin Klein and Giorgio Armani developed a low-key, less "costumey" style for working women. Neutral tones, expensive fabrics, and minimal lines sent a subtler message about competence and capability.

GIORGIO ARMANI

Italian designer Giorgio Armani's luxurious, softly tailored clothes in neutral tones have been in vogue for more than 30 years. Since establishing his own label in 1976, he has become renowned for making business attire for both sexes more youthful and relaxed, yet still giving the wearer a look of authority and glamour. His preference for simplicity has significantly influenced contemporary fashion.

Crossover style One of the most significant trends for working women was Giorgio Armani's soft, elegant tailoring. As in this 1990 outfit, he feminized men's styles, made them in luxurious fabrics in neutral colors, and fashioned a long, lean silhouette.

Sexy suiting American designer Donna Karan built her brand with clothes intended to make a woman feel strong, sensual, and comfortable. Here she puts a sexy spin on the traditional, gray flannel suit, with revealing, transparent panels in the skirt.

high heels

A POWERFUL MESSAGE

Corporate charm Dominican-born Oscar de la Renta brought romantic outfits to the office in the 1980s. The model wears a gray flannel skirt, black velvet jacket, and white silk and lace blouse.

Pantsuit power In the world of male-dominated politics, Hillary Clinton has opted to wear a pantsuit with masculine tailoring but one important difference: color. Her outfits come in bold, bright, head-to-toe colors that stand out on TV.

Career mode In the 1990s German designer Jil Sander used expensive fabrics and flattering tailoring for women who wanted to look professional and feel confident. Here Japanese actress Tyoko Yonekura promotes the sellout Jil Sander-Uniqlo collaboration.

Commanding attention The Duchess of Cambridge's outfit is a perfect example of modern tailoring, designed to draw attention to her slim figure and height and to emphasize both her authority and glamour.

WOOL MIX TWO-PIECE

POWER SUIT

The "executive look," which first found expression in the 1970s as part of the working woman's wardrobe, matured by the mid-1980s into "power dressing." This outfit, by French designer Thierry Mugler, combines a sharply accentuated, shoulder-padded jacket with a feminizing short skirt. The single-breasted jacket, in orange worsted wool and polyester mix, is fitted at the waist and rounded on the hips. The pencil skirt is knee length, straight, and made of black wool. The increasingly high profile of women in the workplace was reflected in their wardrobes. Suits were tailored, but used softer dressmaking padding to structure the shoulders than in traditional men's suits. Accessorized with bold costume jewelry and stiletto heels, the look spoke of confidence and power.

SIDE VIEW

Thierry Mugler tailors his suit to create a stylized feminine archetype: square shoulders, cinched waist, and full hips. Typically crafted in strong colors, this ensemble appeared thoroughly modern in its day. The short, buttockhugging skirt invited attention but defied anyone to touch.

IN DETAIL

□ HIGH COLLAR

A stand-up collar runs seamlessly into a neckline that closes high above the breast before continuing down in a long, crisp sweep to the top press-stud. This suggestion of femininity is partly offset by the masculine look of the padded shoulders.

⊲ RAGLAN SLEEVES

The jacket has strong lines that are softened with raglan sleeves. To achieve the right shape, an oval shoulder pad runs along the shoulder and into each sleeve.

\triangleleft FASTENINGS

The jacket closes via three fabric-covered snaps that run down the center front; below the closures the jacket flares into a soft V-shape.

SIDE PANELS

Beautifully curved side panels accentuate the cinched-in waist at front and back. The shape is overtly female, implying that the wearer is conscious of her body.

\triangleleft POCKETS

Taking his inspiration from the hourglass silhouettes and corsets of the 19th century, Mugler added two welt pockets just below the waist, styling them to curve with the natural shape of the hips. Topstitching lends sophisticated decorative detail.

THE DESIGNER DECADES

1973 ONWARD

JAPANESE STYLE

Ithough Japanese designers Hanae Mori and Kenzo Takada were showing in Paris in the _1970s, it was Issey Miyake who brought the avant-garde movement to the fashion capital in 1973 with his radical approach to dress, a melding of art and science. Kansai Yamamoto made his Paris debut in 1975 with designs inspired by kimonos and kabuki costumes. In 1981 Rei Kawakubo and Yohji Yamamoto shocked fashion editors and buyers with oversized proportions, disregard for gender, and predominant use of black. Yamamoto was interested in purity of form and the interaction between body and fabric, while Kawakubo's focus for her Comme des Garçons label was on deconstruction, breaking down clothes and putting them together in unexpected ways. Kawakubo's protégé Junya Watanabe has forged his own look using techno materials and inventive construction.

ISSEY MIYAKE

One of the foremost textile innovators in fashion history, Issey Miyake established the Miyake Design Studio in Tokyo in 1970 to produce experimental garments. "I try not to fear radical things," he has said, and this is evident in the way he has pushed the boundaries of what clothes can be. Although his designs have sometimes appeared as sculptural objects, most of his retail range is practical. His Pleats Please line, for example, is a series of pleated tubes and flat shapes that come to life on the wearer and can be worn in numerous ways.

Pleated polyester Inspired by the pleated silks of Mario Fortuny from the 1920s, Miyake experimented with synthetic fabrics to create a new pleated polyester fabric in 1988. It was not meant to be cut into Western-style patterns but into free-form shapes.

Dramatic asymmetry Kawakubo here draws on Victorian and modern street-urchin style but deconstructs and reinvents it. Like other Japanese avant-garde designers, her work is beyond fashion, in that it does not follow current trends or themes.

Culture clash Kawakubo's

freewheeling creative approach is clear in this 2008 outfit, which is a mash up of clown costume, circus girl frills, tribal prints, and men's tailoring.

DESIGNER

COMME DES GARCONS

panning four decades, the label Comme des Garçons is unique, set apart from any other within the fashion industry. Created by Japanese designer Rei Kawakubo, the company was established in 1973 and has been attracting interest and controversy ever since.

Kawakubo began her career in advertising in the 1960s, and was a self-taught designer. After launching Comme des Garçons, she opened her first boutique, solely for women, in 1975. The late 1970s and early 1980s saw an expansion into menswear; in 1978 a men's line, Comme des Garçons Homme, was added to the label.

The "poverty" look

After moving to Paris in 1980, Kawakubo showed her designs there the following year, to howls of outrage. All the ideals of Western womanhood in the 1970s and 80s—beauty, charm, sex appeal—were missing. Instead, the press reported loudly on the "post-Hiroshima" look of poverty and destruction. The clothes were deliberately tattered and torn, and the collection featured a great deal of black—shape and construction being more important than color. Comme des Garçons (meaning "like the boys") was the opposite of what women were meant to look like.

Kawakubo criticized the very concept of fashion. Her clothes were more like sculpture than couture. She challenged the prevailing silhouette, cleverly using fabric to create a different aesthetic of revealing and concealing. Her second collection, shown in Paris for Spring/Summer 1983, featured drab colors in rough fabrics and garments full of holes. It promoted a new "beggar" look of beauty in destitution, again challenging Western concepts of glamour.

Awards and criticism

Despite initial criticism, by the mid-1980s Comme des Garçons was well on the way to international fame. In 1985 Kawakubo held her first show in the US, and the following year she won a Fashion Group International Award. Comme des Garçons' branding became synonymous with art-house magazines and cutting-edge photography that almost pushed the clothes into the background, adding to their air of mystery.

For Spring 1992, Kawakubo showed garments that looked like the paper patterns of clothes rather than the clothes themselves. In 1995 she roused fierce criticism from Jewish groups for showing male models with close-cropped hair wearing striped pajamas; and for Spring 1997, she sent outfits with bulbous padding down the Paris runway, genuinely shocking an audience that thought it had seen it all before.

More surprises

Kawakubo favored surprising venues and unexpected collaborations. In 2004, for example, she began to roll out a series of "guerrilla" pop-up stores in locations away from traditional fashion capitals. These outlets, which included one in an old bookstore in Berlin, were run on small budgets and were intended to be short-lived. Comme des Garçons also collaborated with the huge mainstream retailer H&M on a ready-to-wear collection, which was released in the fall of 2008 to great critical and consumer acclaim.

Kawakubo continues to confound her critics (and also her admirers), for instance, designing a dress for the fashion doll Barbie, which formed part of Comme des Garçons' Jingle Flowers collection.

△ PRIVATE ICON

Although often at the center of controversy, Rei Kawakubo has always preferred to stay out of the limelight and is rarely photographed or interviewed. Her trademark look, seen here, comprises a basic black uniform and hair styled in a severe, blunt bob.

⊲ ALL-WHITE

Kawakubo's Spring/Summer 2012 collection featured full-skirted white dresses worn with short boots.

1977 ONWARD

STREET STYLE

Mod attitude British band The Jam's frontman, Paul Weller (left), and bass player Bruce Foxton were in the front of the mod revival in the late 1970s. The band's look was stark—here contrasting a sharp black suit with white shirt.

Skinhead bravado Aligned to the mods of the 1960s and influenced by the rude boys, skinheads adopted a tough, working-class demeanor in reaction to what they saw as middle-class kids taking over youth fashion.

Rockabilly revival The renewed popularity of 1950s rockabilly music went hand in hand with a return to their look. These two wear denim jeans and leather jackets reminiscent of mid-century youth culture.

Goth glamour The goth aesthetic came together in a London club called The Batcave. Both men and women wore clothes inspired by Victorian mourning garb and Bram Stoker's Dracula, and it was not long before this movement took to the streets.

Gothic Lolita A Japanese brand of gothic, combining Victorian, rococo, and fairy-tale dress, emerged in the mid-1990s, inspired by the costumes of gothic rock bands. It later became an influential part of Japanese popular culture.

Heritage revival Traditional English country garb has been appropriated by music festival goers in the UK and incorporated into their fashionable urban wardrobes. Soccer player's wife Coleen Rooney sports a waxed jacket and Hunter wellington boots. 406

1979-1990

DANCE CULTURE AND CLUB

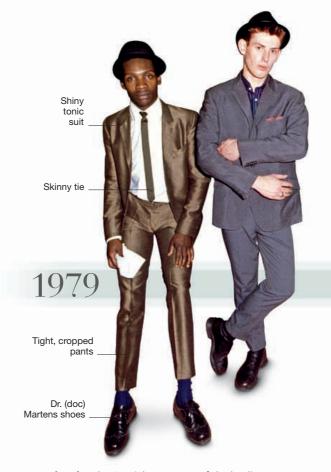

he influence of clubs spawned new modes of dress in the 1980s, and certain clubs attracted certain groups of people. New Wave clubs such as The Blitz in London, where host Steve Strange would only admit the "weird and wonderful" ushered in the dance culture. The flamboyant New Romantics, showcased at the Fridge club in south London, took as their role model the swashbuckling pirate, as embodied by Adam Ant and channeled by designer Vivienne Westwood. In 1987 rave culture took hold in London when Acid House music and the drug MDMA (ecstasy) were transplanted from Ibiza. Young people, disenchanted with Thatcher's Britain, turned from nine-to-fivers during the week to ravers on weekends. They adopted the smiley face as their emblem. Clubs such as Heaven in London brought gay culture into the mainstream, which had a huge effect on fashion. Across the Atlantic, hip-hop and rap were the dominant urban club styles, associated with pristine sportswear, leather bomber jackets, and heavy gold jewelry.

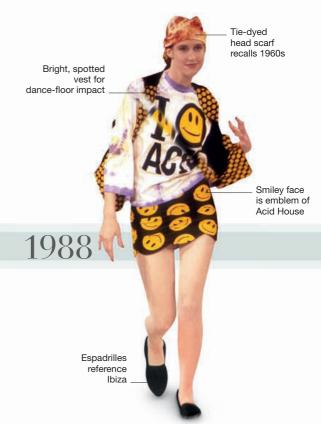

Hip-hop group the Beastie Boys are credited with influencing the dress of young men not only during the 1980s when they came to fame, but also in the present day. Michael Diamond, Adam Yauch, and Adam Horovitz wore a mashup of styles, blending various New York street looks with classics, and expressing their love of punk rock. These elements included old-school, white sneakers by Adidas and Puma, distressed, tapered jeans, preppy button-down and polo shirts, nylon jackets, hooded sweatshirts, gold chains, and baseball caps worn at an angle. Their counterparts in musical and sartorial tastes were hip-hop artists Run DMC with whom they collaborated many times. Both groups continue to have an impact on the world of street fashion and music.

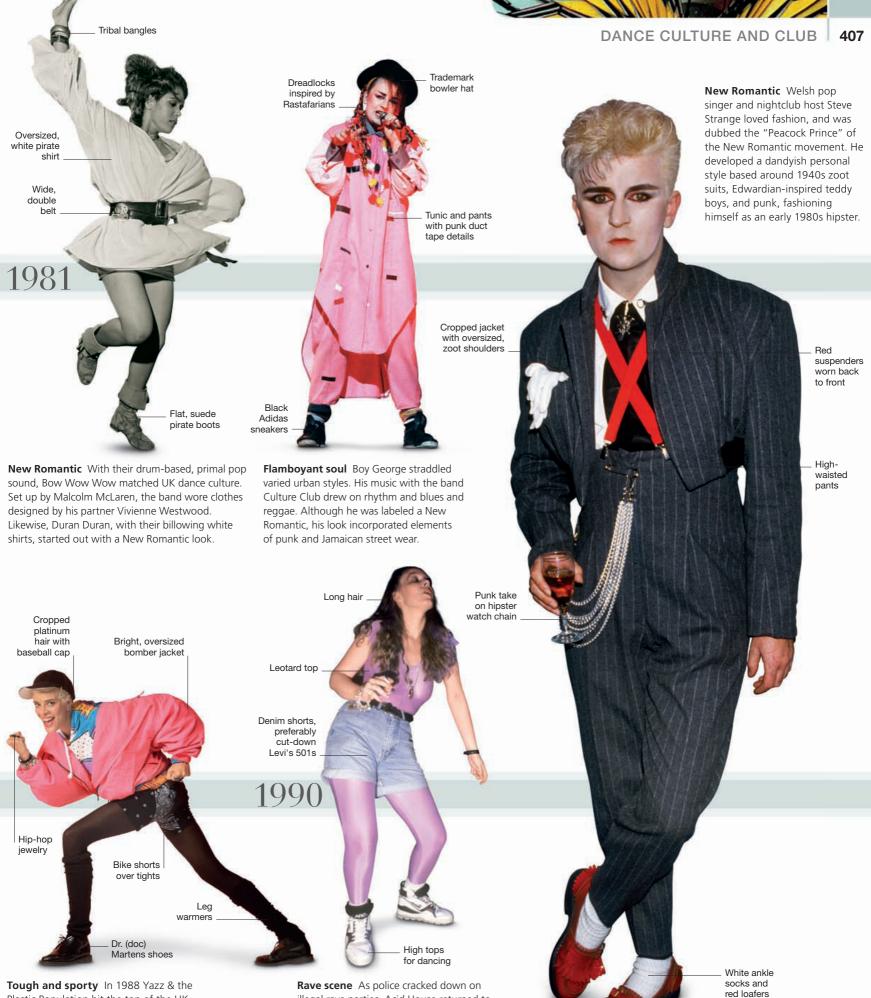

New hip-hop Run DMC's Darryl "D.M.C." McDaniels adopted a look that came from their native Queens neighborhood, and rejected the glitzier appearance of other hip-hop acts. They wore fedoras, leather or basketball jackets, gold chains, and laceless Adidas sneakers.

Mod style The Specials were one of the leading British ska bands of the late 1970s and early 1980s, fusing punk energy with Jamaican ska that was sped up to a danceable beat. They wore 1960s rude boy clothes, including slim-cut suits, porkpie hats, and Fred Perry shirts.

Ubiquitous smiley face Acid House rave culture hit the runway in 1988 at a show for the fashion market Hyper Hyper, on London's High Street Kensington. Suddenly the smiley face was no longer restricted to nightclubs and weekend parties; it had gone mainstream.

Tough and sporty In 1988 Yazz & the Plastic Population hit the top of the UK charts with "The Only Way Is Up". Front woman Yazz inspired club goers with her cheerful, sporty style, which had a tough, androgynous edge.

illegal rave parties, Acid House returned to nightclubs, in particular the Hacienda Club in Manchester, UK. Fluorescent leggings, high-top sneakers, and bicycling jerseys were the best clothes for dancing all night long.

RUNVAY SUPERSTARS

The phenomenon of the "supermodel" reached its height in the 1990s and among the most celebrated were Linda Evangelista, Cindy Crawford, Naomi Campbell, and Christy Turlington (pictured here). When these four strutted down the runway arm in arm during Versace's 1991 Fall/Winter fashion show in Milan they were more famous than the clothes. Not since Twiggy and Jean Shrimpton in the 1960s and Marie Helvin and Jerry Hall in the 1970s had models become such celebrities.

Supermodels were healthy-looking Amazonian beauties, athletic and curvy and, most importantly, they had personality. First-name recognition set them apart from other models. The supermodel reigned supreme, dominating the covers of all the top fashion magazines. They were offered multimillion dollar contracts with cosmetic companies, and starred in commercials endorsing shampoos and soft drinks. Some appeared in movies, on talk shows, and even launched their own clothing lines.

Supermodels demanded huge fees. "We don't wake up for less than $10,000 a day," Evangelista famously told Vogue in 1990. The backlash to this attitude came when fashion changed later in the 1990s. It was out with the glossy and wholesome supermodels and in with a new breed of fragile, individual-looking, and often younger, models. A new phrase "heroin chic" described the down-at-heel settings for fashion shoots presented in magazines. Such a dressed-down style didn't suit the personalities of the supermodels, and designers opted to make the clothes the star of the show once more.

There was a reason they were supermodels...When they put on an outfit everyone was floored.

ANNA SUI, DESIGNER, 2010

99

From left to right, Linda Evangelista, Cindy Crawford, Naomi Campbell, and Christy Turlington model Versace, Milan 1991

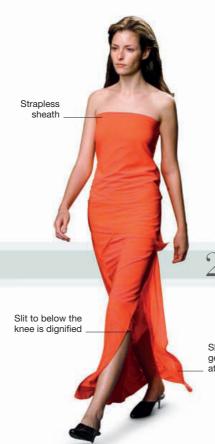

1990 ONWARD

MINIMAL AND CONCEPTUAL

In the wake of 1980s power dressing—which emphasized clingy styles, bold color, exaggerated Lsilhouettes, and embellishment—consumers in the early 1990s seemed to tire of fashion, and the industry struggled to lure them. New notions of antifashion emerged with designers paring down the look and using a plainer color palette—the Japanese avantgarde designers had already made all black acceptable during the 1980s. It was a different way of dressing and it appealed to women with professional jobs and busy working lives. It was a time too for deconstructivist designers like Martin Margiela and Ann Demeulemeester in Belgium, and Hussein Chalayan in England—all of whom took an intellectual approach to fashion, stripping clothes back to first principles as part of their design aesthetic.

Futuristic jumpsuit The millennium was on Austrian Helmut Lang's mind when he created this take on a spacesuit for his 1999 Fall/Winter collection. The silk organza is layered over easygive cotton and silk jersey to beautiful effect.

1995

Studied simplicity This red strapless silk sheath from Calvin Klein's Spring/Summer show has sophisticated construction. It is held up by a bandagelike bodice, then loosens around the torso, and drapes around the waist and hips.

Scrupulously

Experimental reduction In Hussein Chalayan's 2000 Fall/Winter collection the designer pushed the boundaries of everyday dress. In this example he merged fashion and furniture by morphing a coffee table into a skirt.

THE DESIGNER DECADES

1990-2011

BOHO CHIC AND VINTAGE

ohemian chic (boho) was identified by the UK fashion media in 2004-05 to describe a stylized look put together using aspects of bohemian, essentially hippie, dress. It was a younger—and richer —cousin of grunge, the ultimate dressing down that went mainstream in the 1990s. Instead of scouring secondhand stores for well-worn oversized sweaters and army surplus gear, bohos went to expensive vintage clothing boutiques. In Paris it was called bobo, which stood for bourgeois-bohème, implying that it was an affectation of middle-class champagne socialists. Now major mainstream retailers display rails of high-end secondhand clothes, and designers work with antique-clothing dealers to source pieces that they can incorporate into their own work or simply copy. Secondhand stores are no longer the down-atheel places they once were; vintage is in vogue.

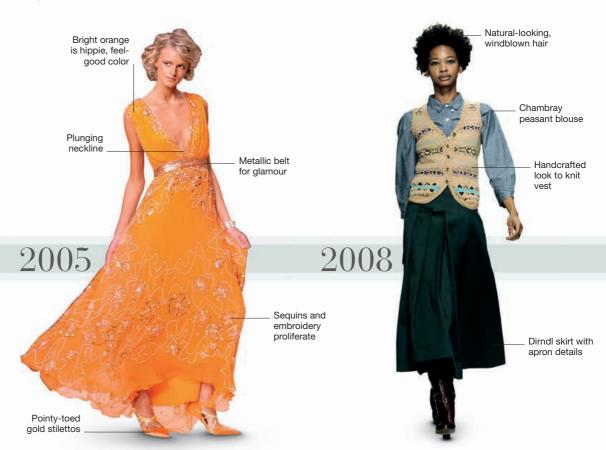

High-fashion grunge American sportswear designer Perry Ellis picked up on the mainstream grunge trend that was sweeping through the US in the early 1990s. Christy Turlington models his look from Fall/Winter 1992.

Stylish grunge A model on the streets of Seattle demonstrates fashionable grunge, a mix of items from a secondhand store, new clothes that are distressed or made to look worn in, and expensive designer pieces.

Messy hair

Pearl Jam are one of the original bands of the Seattle grunge movement that kicked off in 1990. Like their music, their style of dress fuses many influences. Their melange of skater, heavy metal, ethnic, world traveler, and hippie-dandy struck a chord with angst-filled American youth. Grunge made it acceptable to pull the sleeves of your secondhand cardigan down over your hands in a scruffy gesture of social alienation.

Boho designers Matthew Williamson and Alice Temperley are cited as boho-chic designers. Williamson's floaty dresses feature butterflies and embroidery, while Temperley, whose dress is shown here, is cast as the English eccentric.

Folkloric charm Mirroring the boho trend, there was a general interest in all things folksy and handcrafted. As trendsetting girls professed their love of knitting, chunky homemade sweaters became highly fashionable. Margaret Howell captured the mood in 2008.

IMPACT

In the 21st century fashion is a pan-global industry. Couture houses, which often take huge losses on their special collections, stage glamorous events worldwide to promote their labels and licensed goods. Their diffusion lines, ready-to-wear clothes, shoes, perfumes, and jewelry have internationally recognized brand names, from the Gucci "G" to the word "Dior" dangling from a handbag. Trends are relayed in mass TV and magazine campaigns, and further promoted by the celebrity culture, with actors and media personalities selling an image that the ordinary public can copy with little effort, although at some cost.

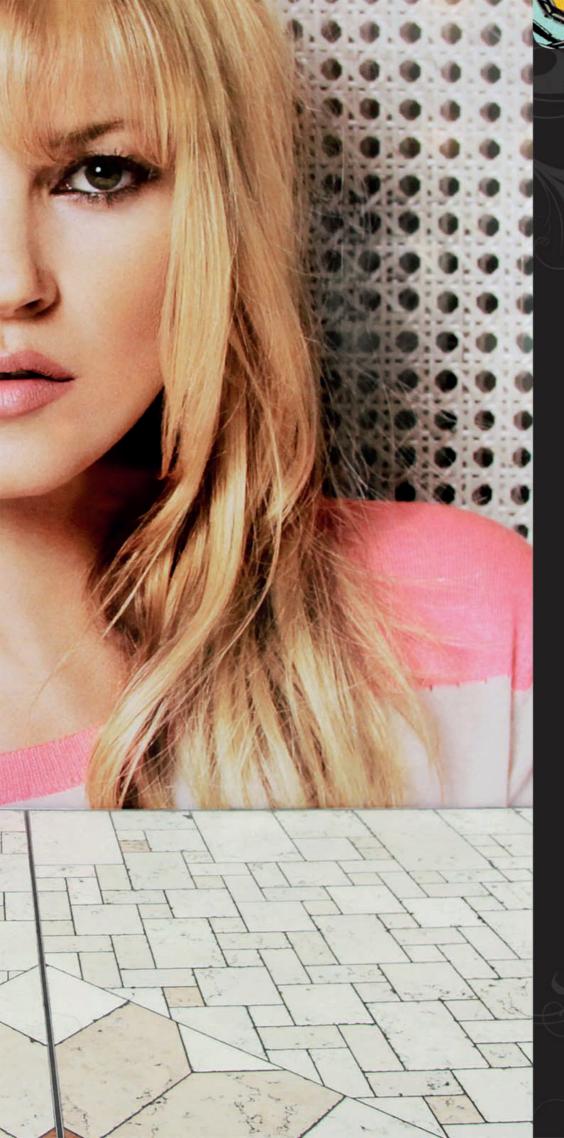

The worldwide fashion industry generates over a trillion US dollars a year, but there are concerns about clothing companies taking responsibility for their impact on the environment, workforce, and suppliers. Once dominated by Europe and North America, there are huge fashion markets still to be tapped, particularly in China. With stylists and fashion devisers seeking ways to exploit aspiring consumers, the focus on commercialism is creating fears that young talent is getting squeezed out. Although uniformity of look may sell well, fashion, if anything, has always been about youth, subversion, and playful creativity.

Yes, fashion design requires consumers to consume, but we can do our bit for society by running our companies in a socially responsible way, and by creating products that promote respect for social and environmental issues.

GIORGIO ARMANI

99

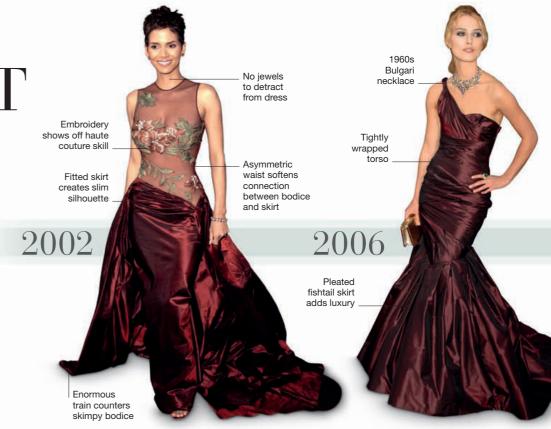

Kate Moss, as the face of fast-growing Spanish fashion house Mango, looks out from a billboard at the Villaggio Mall, Doha, Qatar.

2002 ONWARD

RED CARPET GOWNS

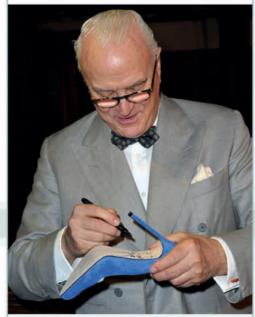

olling out a red carpet for important guests dates back to Ancient Greece, but in modern times it is most closely associated with the Academy Awards. In the 1930s radio presenters would describe every detail of the stars and their dresses to a rapt audience, then in 1952 it was presented live on television. Although there have been fashion faux pas aplenty, screen-goddess glamour continues to reign on the red carpet, and the Oscars have remained one of the sartorial events of the year. In the last 10 years red-carpet events have become a major showcase for fashion designers and determine how and what they design. This has filtered through to fashion retailers who provide "occasion wear" for events ranging from prom dances to ladies' days at the races.

Modern hybrid Halle Berry's deconstructed ball gown, by Lebanese designer Elie Saab, is a clever mix of formal wear and showgirl pizzazz. The sheer net bodice is saved from being too overt by exquisite embroidery and a grand skirt.

Dark romance This deep plum creation from US designer Vera Wang conveys intensity with its rich color, and in the way it appears to tightly wrap Keira Knightley's body. An asymmetric neckline and bold necklace keep it modern.

SHOW-STOPPING SHOES

Manolo Blahnik

In the early days of Hollywood, the stars turned to Salvatore Ferragamo, Charles Jourdan, André Perugia, and Beth Lavine for fantastic red carpet footwear. In the 1990s a new generation took over. Credited for show stopping heels are Christian Loubotin, Manolo Blahnik, and Jimmy Choo, who have a cult following. Now designers Nicholas Kirkwood and Brian Atwood are creating chic shoes too.

Wow factor Bright red needs careful handling to maintain an appearance of elegance rather than brashness. Britain's John Galliano conjured up old Hollywood glamour with this tomato-colored gown with fabric wrap standaway collar.

Daring choice Beyoncé Knowles attracted praise and criticism for her tight, black, fishtail dress decorated with metallic gold roses, from her mother's House of Dereon clothing line. Bold patterns and motifs are considered risky for the red carpet.

DESIGNER

ALEXANDER MCQUEEN

ne of the most important British designers of recent decades, Alexander McQueen reintroduced tailoring to fashion with his sharp suits and frock coats and brought new technology into couture. With a creativity that drove forward his quest for the new, he also reinvented the fashion show. "You've got to give them an extravaganza!" was his philosophy. At first unsettling, by the time of his untimely death at 40, McQueen's shows had become theatrical events.

East End beginnings

Born in 1969, Lee Alexander McQueen was the son of a London cab driver and the youngest of six children growing up in Stratford, East London. Encouraged by his mother, a teacher, the young McQueen showed an early interest in fashion design, and at 16 enrolled as an apprentice cutter and tailor at Anderson and Sheppard, then tailors to HRH Prince of Wales. Legend has it that the teenage McQueen wrote obscenities in the linings of suits for the prince and other clients; what is certain is that he showed an extraordinary aptitude. After 18 months he had mastered the "forward" (a perfectly made test jacket), then learned to cut trousers at Gieves and Hawkes, and finally historical costumes at Angels and Bermans costumiers. Moving into high fashion, he became a cutter for the avant-garde designer, Koji Tatsuno and for Milan-based designer Romeo Gigli

In spite of a lack of certain requirements in art, McQueen was accepted to the MA Fashion course at Central St. Martins, London. His degree collection Jack the Ripper Stalks His Victims, featuring bustled jackets, papier-maché appliqué and his own hair incorporated into linings, caught the attention of stylist Isabella Blow, who became McQueen's supporter and advocate. McQueen immediately began showing under his own name. His "bumsters" (low-rise pants) at his second show Nihilism scandalized many, revealing the cleft in the models' buttocks, at the same time as elongating the torso and shortening the legs. This was a totally new idea, which launched a decade of low-slung, pelvis-hugging pants in mainstream stores. His shows became must-see events, made on a tiny budget with a dedicated team. The Birds (Spring/Summer 1995), held in an unoccupied warehouse was based on Hitchcock's eponymous movie and, with the theme of road kill, featured tire prints on dresses and corsetier Mr. Pearl with his 18" (46 cm) waist in McQueen women's wear. Iconoclastic and transgressive, it was a fashion moment that blew

History and nature

away the cobwebs.

Skilled tailoring, revealed in the frock coats, suits, and jumpsuits that were signature McQueen, coupled with meticulous research enabled the designer to realize his extraordinary ideas.

Shows like Highland Rape (1995), based on historic border conflicts, were testimony to McQueen's fascination with the past and his ability to make it modern, cutting tartan on the bias and updating body-molding corsets. He was also inspired by nature, using feathers, skin and bones, and even live falcons in his shows.

McQueen's tenure as head designer at Givenchy was not always a success, given its essentially genteel French signature, but he went on to find the creative freedom he craved at the Gucci Group. The designer was multilayered in his talent and vision, and his later own name collections, Horn of Plenty in 2009, and his final show, Plato's Atlantis in 2010, raised questions about the future of the planet and man's careless approach. His label continues under the creative directorship of Sarah Burton, designer of the Duchess of Cambridge's wedding dress.

△ TAILOR AND CRAFTSMAN

McQueen was awarded British Designer of the Year four times. He was presented with a CBE and voted by CFDA (Council of Fashion Designers of America) International Designer of the Year in 2003.

This dress from McQueen's final collection shows his skill in print and art and his love of the environment.

1990 Worked as a 1993 Bumster 1997 Brown 2009 Horn of 2010 Plato's Atlantis 1989 Employed as a cutter of historical cutter for designer pants unveiled ponyskin jacket with Plenty show -final collection Romeo Gigli in Milan costumes at Angels and at Nihilism show impala horns on focuses on future of the Bermans, Londor shoulders from It's planet McQueen's death a Jungle Out There 2003 International 1985 Begins his 1992 Jack the Ripper 1996 & 97 UK 2001 ⊳ Designer of the Year 2011 Savage Beauty apprenticeship at graduation collection at designer of Voss dress with awarded by CFDA. retrospective exhibition Anderson and Sheppard, Central St. Martin's the year black ostrich Presented with CBE of McQueen's work at Savile Row, London College, London feathers by HRH The Queen The Met, New York O 1985 O 1990 O 1995 O 2000 O 2005 O 2010

2010 ONWARD

A NEW GENERATION

n recent years fashion has moved in new directions to meet the desire of consumers for increasingly varied and individualistic looks. No longer satisfied with the big labels from Paris, Milan, and New York, and suffering from "It" bag and logo fatigue, women have been on the hunt for fresh looks and original ideas. The economy too has played a part in this change. In September 2008 economic meltdown in many markets meant that wearing overtly expensive clothes and status labels was no longer thought to be prudent. It was up to a new generation of designers to woo women back to fashion. Alexander Wang, for example, has shown how street cred and savvy design can make millions with his global empire based on grunge meets downtown, while Phoebe Philo's uncompromisingly modern stance at Céline has made the once-dowdy label one of the hottest of the early 2010s. The visionary Christopher Kane has his own collections but is also helping to make Versace's Versus line cool again. Designers like these are reinvigorating fashion and showing the exciting possibilities ahead.

VICTORIA BECKHAM

It is not unusual for pop stars to start clothing lines, but few have built as refined a fashion empire as Victoria Beckham. Her wealth and exposure to luxury designer goods, combined with her own sleek style, have given her the aesthetic judgement to head her own label. Starting with a small range of jeans and eyewear in 2006, Beckham moved on to her natural oeuvre in 2008, the world of highend ready-to-wear. She specialized in sculpted, sheathlike dresses, carefully constructed to shape the body and create a long, lean silhouette. Initially sceptical, the fashion press have given rave reviews, and her collections have been a commercial success. Beckham has since added handbags, coats, and a second clothing line to her fashion stable.

First lady Michelle Obama chose four of his dresses in 2008 to wear to public events, including the Inaugural Ball.

painted

Gold

slashes

duct tape

evoke

into the realm of the high tech is a recurring of decorative embellishment and accessories.

theme in Holly Fulton's work, as is the use

The Scottish designer's Fall/Winter 2012 collection explored tonal layering.

Black stripe

with ruffles

mixes pretty and bold

Subtle use of white to shape the torso

A NEW GENERATION

3,000 YEARS OF

WOMEN'S WEAR

rom ancient civilizations to the present day, women's dress has been shaped not only by personal taste but by economic, political, and technological developments. As the centuries passed, new trade routes introduced exotic fabrics and adornments from distant lands, while the rise and fall of monarchies overturned dress styles and inspired new ones. Major agents of change included advances in technology, from loom to sewing machine, and from natural cloth to man-made fabrics such as Lycra. Against this backdrop sits self expression: in the 1920s boyish shapes and shorter skirts celebrated new-found personal freedom; in the 1980s padded shoulders and tailored suits symbolized female power in a male-dominated workplace. Today the global fashion industry promotes a rapid turnover of styles that cross all national boundaries.

Ancient Greek chiton (reconstructed) fastened at the shoulders

Mid-14th Century Surcoat (reconstructed) worn over cote-hardie

1830s Cotton day dress with full gigot sleeves and a flounced hem

1850–54 Printed day dress with a bell-shaped skirt and pagoda sleeves

c.1888 Bustle dress with tailored jacket and waistcoat (vest)

1902 S-bend dress with pigeon-pouter chest and hips pushed back

1910–12 Lace bodice and skirt with sash to emphasize the narrow waist

1940s Utility dress cut to waste as little fabric as possible

1940s Checked dress showing width at the shoulders, worn with head scarf

1950s Day dress and matching bolero jacket, with full skirt over net petticoats

1950s Printed dress with fitted waist and pencil skirt, in a vibrant floral fabric

1960s Minidress hemmed well above the knee, worn with white go-go boots

3,000 YEARS OF WOMEN'S WEAR

14th-15th Century Italian gown (reconstructed) with hanging sleeves

1470-1500 Italian gown with a high waist and deep V-neck

1581 Chambermaid wearing a full skirt over a hooped farthingale

1750 Robe à la française of blue silk brocade in a floral pattern

1799 Day dress in the classical style, with very high waist and columnar skirt

1922 Green dress with a dropped sash waist and V-neck collar

1920s Day dress in printed chiffon with a knee-length flounced skirt

1930s Floral print dress cut on the bias with matching smocked bolero

1934 Afternoon dress with boat neck detail and belted waist

1937 Checked dress with the long, lean silhouette of the decade

1960s-1970s Belted shirt dress with red trim and buttons

1976 Silk ensemble with floorlength skirt and matching head scarf

1980s Black dress with shoulder pads, 1994 Gingham dress worn worn with black tights and stiletto heels with heavy black lace-up shoes

2005 Boho outfit of tiered gypsy-style skirt and layered jersey tops

3,000 YEARS OF

MENSWEAR

ince ancient times male clothes have been used as a declaration of social distinction. Every historical age has had its own sartorial codes, either imposed by law or by social pressure—once it was the exact color of toga that mattered; today it is likely to be the label on a pair of designer jeans that counts. One of the most widespread and enduring items of male clothing is the suit, which from the 19th century onward gradually evolved from various jacket-and-pants combinations worn in earlier periods. In the 20th and 21st centuries conventions of male dress have been subverted by youth and subcultures, and alternative notions of taste and acceptability for menswear are well established. However, for business wear and formal occasions, the suit remains the preferred item of male clothing.

1690 Restoration justaucorps (close-fitting coat) worn over waistcoat

1760 Nobleman wearing a silk coat with matching pants, and a cravat

18th Century Coat and breeche (reconstructed) with ornate vest

1963 Double-breasted suit by Pierre Cardin, worn with fedora hat

c.1187–1064BCE Egyptian priest in a long-sleeved pleated robe

509BCE-476CE Suit of armor (reconstructed) with leather cuirass

1832 Shooting outfit of green morning coat and fitted black pants

1854 Frock coat and trousers worn with a blue embroidered vest

1940s Tan jacket and gray trousers worn over knit sweater

1954 Teddy boy wearing long jacket with drainpipe trousers and a string tie

1968 Mr. Fish suit of striped corduroy, worn with a black turtleneck sweater

1973 Belted jacket with pointed collar and zip pockets, worn open

1343 French tunic with hanging tippet sleeves, worn with wool cloak

Mid-15th Century Tunic (reconstructed) with fur trim

1490–1510 Jerkin (reconstructed) worn over a doublet of fabric panes

1581 Nobleman's dress consisting of doublet, full breeches, hose, and cloak

1646 Cavalier in doublet, breeches, baldric (sash), and bucket-top boots

1890 Morning suit with cutaway coat and vest, and striped trousers

1908 Suit worn with gray vest, bowler hat, and cane

1930s Three-piece suit of tweed jacket, vest, and knickerbockers

1931 Pinstripe suit with double-breasted jacket and wide-leg trousers

1940 Drape suit with wide-leg trousers and loose-fitting jacket

1984 Green linen jacket as worn in Miami Vice, with white linen trousers

1985 Double-breasted cropped jacket worn with sleeves rolled up

1998 Gray suit with long jacket, worn by Will Smith over dark shirt and tie

2006 Trench coat and jeans worn by Pharrell Williams, with collar and tie

2012 Black suit and brown satin tie worn by designer Tom Ford

400 YEARS OF

WOMEN'S SHOES

rom the towering chopines of 16th- and 17th-century Europe, to 18th-century embroidered silk slippers and 1930s dazzling rhinestone sandals, these diverse shoes from the past 400 years indicate much about the status of the women who wore them. It was quite usual at certain periods, such as the 18th and early 19th centuries, for women's shoes to be made of fabric rather than leather, perhaps because their wearers spent a large part of their time indoors. In the 21st century slender stiletto heels by designers such as Christian Louboutin, Manolo Blahnik, and Jimmy Choo are "must-have" accessories—possibly worn only on special occasions.

1750s Mule slipper of white and gold striped and figured silk, with a kid-leather sole and shaped heel

1790–1800 Leather shoe in pink, with cream bow trim and faint striped pattern, made in England

1810 English boot made from pale yellow kid leather, with laced front closure and yellow ribbon bow

1905 Austrian dress shoe made from kid leather, with a metal-studded and cutout design over the vamp

1918 Ribbon tie shoe in oyster glacé kid, with ribbon tie and cutout detail, designed and made by Bally of Switzerland

1926 Walking shoe of two-tone calf leather and crocodile skin, with wood heel and tab styled like a golf-shoe flap, made by Bally

1950s American sling-back shoe of brown suede and reptile skin, with a high heel and front platform

1960s Leather pump of mustard-yellow imitation leather, with pin heel, pointed toe, and cutout sides

400 YEARS OF WOMEN'S SHOES

1660s-70s English forked-toe slipper made from silk, embroidered with silver thread and lined with kid leather

1725 English tie shoe of white

1725–50 English latchet-buckle shoe made from green silk, with embroidered design on the vamp and decorative trim

c.1860 English wedding boot of white kid leather, with expanding ankle and decorative ribbon rosette at the toe

1860s Ankle boot made in England from red leather, with side lacing and a black heel

c.1880 French mule slipper, with a kilim-weave fabric vamp, decorative gathered-ribbon edge, and low, fabric-covered heel

1930s Evening shoe of painted fabric in a floral design, with cutout detail, and gold kid-leather heel and ankle strap

1938 Evening sandal made from white satin encrusted with rhinestone and lined with gold kid leather

1940s Suede shoe made in the US, with cutout vamp, high heel, and elastic side straps

2008 Heeled sandal by Jimmy Choo, in black snakeskin-effect leather with silver decoration and stiletto heel

1980s Stiletto heel made from leather with a metallic silver finish and an almond-shaped toe and low-cut vamp

200 YEARS OF

WOMEN'S HATS

oward the end of the 18th century wide, flat shepherdess hats were popular, being overtaken in the early 1800s by bonnets, which remained fashionable for decades. Hat styles during the Victorian and Edwardian eras were extremely varied, ranging from small toques to huge confections of flowers, feathers, and even entire birds. Until well into the 20th century most women, regardless of social status, did not think of leaving the house without a hat. Today millinery has a place in high fashion, with hat designers pushing creative boundaries to ever greater levels of innovation and drama.

c.1880 Velvet hat in bottle-green, trimmed with a gold and green patterned grosgrain (ribbed) ribbon, and cream and black feathers

c. 1910 Straw hat with wide brim, velvet facing, and silk rose decoration around the crown

1916–18 Summer hat made from creamcolored embroidered net, decorated with two silk flowers and lined in silk

1940s Black felt hat trimmed with a wide satin ribbon and feather in the brim

1896 Blue bonnet

of silk-covered straw trimmed with black

ostrich feathers

1950s Velvet hat with a net veil and decorative beading

1960 Round hat of pale pink silk with an upturned scalloped brim, by Givenchy

c. 1965 Soft cap by Simone Mirman, with panels of white leather and striped jersey 1970s Summer hat of cream-colored linen with brown floral appliqué patches and lining

1970s Newsboy cap of turquoise crushed velvet, with peak and button trim

1818-23 Turban-style evening hat with woven silk decoration

1850s Straw bonnet bonnet with with silk lining, lace trim, and floral appliqué feather trim and velvet flowers at the back

1920s Cloche hat of black cellophane straw on brown silk, with ribbon and rosette decoration

1929 Cloche hat of taupe-colored felt with a matching grosgrain (ribbed) ribbon trim

1930s Straw hat in a natural color with woven black trim and flower decoration

1938 Woven seagrass hat by Elsa Schiaparelli, with grosgrain band and metallic insects

1950s Tea hat of turquoise brushed felt, shaped into leaves around the head

1950s Red beret made from felted wool, with long feather decoration

1960s Cocktail hat of plastic feathers mounted on an elastic net base

1960s Petal hat designed by Dolores, London, and covered with small pink fabric flowers

2000s Trilby hat of woven mottled straw, with striped silk ribbon band

1982 Lilac velvet hat with orange feathers, designed by Stephen Jones

by Philip Treacy

2006 Fascinator designed by Jane Corbett

200 YEARS OF

BAGS AND PURSES

Before the end of the 18th century women kept their valuables under their skirts in a girdle pouch, or a pocket tied around their waist. By the 1790s, when dresses became slim and columnar, pockets were replaced by reticules (small decorative bags carried in the hand), to avoid spoiling the line of the dress. Since then myriad styles have evolved, from the exquisitely beaded evening bag to the exorbitant designer "It" bag.

1915 Silk clutch embroidered with Oriental design and imitation-jade-encrusted filigree frame

1920s Beaded handbag with a filigree frame and a chain strap

17th Century Purse with raised embroidery in colored silk and metal threads and sequins

1920 Beaded bag of silver and gold beads with rhinestone paste decoration

1940s Suedette (fake suede) bag with pleated central panel and brass clasp

1940s Red snakeskin bag with clasp opening and gilt-metal hardware

Early 1950s Lucite handbag in light blue with a clear lid and handle, designed by Charles S. Khan

1950s Pleated box purse with a mirror attached inside, designed by Bienen-Davis

1970s Evening bag of brushed gold over metal, with coral decoration, designed by Judith Leiber

1970s Tote bag of woven cotton with a psychedelic pattern, and leather handles and trim

1980s Envelope clutch designed by Diane Love, with sequins in a trellis design

1980s Chainmail bag by Paco Rabanne, made of black leather and linked aluminum disks

200 YEARS OF BAGS AND PURSES 431

Late 18th Century Silk reticule lined with satin and decorated with embroidered floral motif

1887 Framed plush bag lined with kid leather, with appliqué flowers and a padded handle

19th Century Basket bag of woven reed with painted bird decoration

c.1925 Art deco bag of tooled leather, stained in brown and black, and lined with silk

1930s Beaded bag with curling-thread motif, designed by Josef Hand

1930s Alligator-skin handbag with brass hardware, decorated with alligator feet

1930s Black calfskin handbag by Nettie Rosenstein

1950s-60s Leopard-print bag with gilt metal clasp, designed by Ingber

1960s Hermès Kelly handbag in black calfskin, named after Grace Kelly

1960s Plastic clutch with metal frame and clasp, and fabric lining

1960s-70s Waterfallfront handbag by Pucci,

1985-present Hermès Birkin bag in orange leather, named after the actor Jane Birkin

1980s Backpack of black crocodile skin with a white metal clasp and adjustable straps

1990s Manhattan bag by Louis Vuitton, in brown leather with gold monogram pattern

2007 Tote bag by Anya Hindmarch, designed to discourage excessive use of plastic bags

300 YEARS OF

SHAPING THE BODY

cross the centuries, fashion's changing forms and silhouette have been founded on undergarments. From the 16th to the .18th century stays and bodices (or a pair of bodies), stiffened with whalebone, were used to create a cone-shaped torso, with narrow waist and raised bust. In the 18th century these garments became known as a pair of stays, and then in the 19th century, in an adapted form, as corsets. The corset reshaped women's bodies—from the high-waisted neoclassical look to the hourglass ideal. In the 20th century structural underwear in the form of girdles and foundation garments of elastic fabric helped to smooth female outlines, while underwired bras and bustiers lifted and supported the bust.

1710-20 Boned bodice embellished with colored embroidery

18th Century Stays stiffened with strips of whalebone, laced at the front

1880–95 Corset for a fashionable hourglass silhouette, closed at front

1885-95 Steel-boned corset with steel spoon-shaped busk (flat front panel)

1940s Girdle made from elastic panels, shaped to wear around the waist

1950s Bustier with silk and lace panels, and decorative bow, underwired for support

1825 Long corset (reconstructed) to support the bust and cover the hips, laced at the back

1875 Corset (back view) cut shorter at the back, to accommodate a bustle

1895–1900 Corset (back view), laced at the back through metal eyelets

1960s Girdle with sprigged floral print and garter straps

1996 Bustier by Rigby and Peller, London, decorated with black lace

SUPPORTING SKIRTS

After the advent of the farthingale in the mid-16th century came a succession of skirt shapes and styles for women. These changing silhouettes were achieved with the support of hooped understructures, such as panniers and crinolines, or with layer upon layer of padded and stiffened petticoats. Hooped supports had the advantage of being much lighter and, as construction technologies advanced, held larger and larger skirts, which were at their widest during the 1860s.

c.1550 Farthingales and bum rolls were worn under skirts from 1545 to the 1620s. Bum rolls, fastened around the waist and tied at the front, gave added volume at the hips.

Panniers

1872–74 Crinolettes, or half-crinolines, were made from half-hoops of steel. They acted as bustles, a fashion that first gained popularity in the early 1870s.

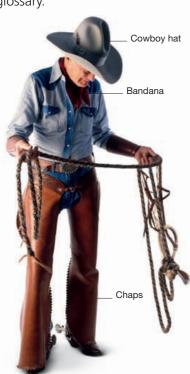

ILLUSTRATED

GLOSSARY

Included in this glossary are a series of key terms, organized alphabetically, that relate to the history of fashion and dress. Date ranges are given for each term, with a ">" indicating that the garment or technique continues to the present day. Glossary entries that appear within the text are italicized.

NATIONAL DRESS

Panels on the following pages examine examples of traditional dress from around the world. Key elements of the national costume are defined in the glossary.

American cowboy

Cowboy hats and denim have been linked to cowboys since the 19th century, and their popularity persists today among ranchers in the US and Canada.

A

ACCESSORIES Items such as hats, gloves, and jewelry that are worn or carried to complete an outfit.

ACCORDION PLEATS A series of narrow, evenly spaced pleats with alternating raised and recessed edges, allowing the garment to expand or flare with movement.

19TH CENTURY: SEE P.323

ACETATE A light, silky synthetic fiber made from cellulose, obtained from wood pulp; invented in Germany.

19TH CENTURY ▷

ACID WASHING A technique often used on denim; involves washing garments together with pumice stones that have been soaked in chlorine, which gives the fabric a worn, mottled look.

1980s ▷

ACRYLIC A synthetic fiber made from a petrochemical product and used like wool; trade names include Acrilan, Courtelle, Orlon. 1940s

AESTHETIC DRESS Style inspired by historic dress (following from Artistic dress) and Eastern clothing such as kimonos; involved use of natural fabric dyes and of traditional or nature-inspired patterns; see also Liberty print; Paisley.

LATE 19TH CENTURY:

SEE PP.212-14, 336-7

AGLETS, AIGLETS Metal sheaths used at the end of the ties that join hose to a doublet; now refers to the sheaths at the end of shoelaces.

13_{TH} CENTURY >: SEE PP.71, 94

AIGRETTE Feather plume or feather-shaped ornament for head wear.

LATE 18TH-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

AKETON Quilted tunic worn under armor for comfort and protection. 13_{TH}-15_{TH} CENTURY: SEE P.69

ALB Ankle-length vestment of white linen with long sleeves and a cord tied at the waist; worn by Christian clerics and monks in many churches.

MEDIEVAL >: SEE P.57

À LA DISPOSITION Term used for a design printed or embroidered on, or woven into a fabric so it can be made up into a specific garment. 1850s ▷: SEE P.205

ALBERT COLLAR A detachable stand collar fastened to a man's shirt by a button at the back.

1850s-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

A-LINE A triangular dress shape created by Christian Dior (see also H-line, Y-line), or generally a dress or skirt flared like the sides of an "A."

MID-1950s >: SEE PP.319, 455

ALOHA SHIRT Traditional Hawaiian shirt for men, with short sleeves and made from colorful fabric; can be worn as business wear in Hawaii but casual wear on the mainland.

1930s ▷

ALPACA Fine, soft fiber obtained from the alpaca (a South American relation of the llama) and woven or knit like wool.

ANDROGYNOUS STYLE Adoption of masculine jackets, pants, and suits by women, notably Marlene Dietrich and Katharine Hepburn in the 1930s and Patti Smith in the 1970s. 1930s ▷: SEE PP.288. 372–3

ANGORA (a) Name of the goat whose fleece is used for mohair; (b) light, silky fiber from the Angora rabbit, used like wool.

ANILINE DYE The first form of synthetic dye; mauveine, one of the first, was discovered by British scientist William Perkins, who used it to make the color mauve; also notably used to make the colors purple, magenta, pink, and green.

1850s ▷

ANORAK A hooded jacket originally made of animal skin or waterproofed cloth, and worn by the indigenous peoples in Greenland and Canada; now refers to a hooded, weatherproof jacket usually made of synthetic fiber with synthetic or down insulation; see also Parka.

APPLIQUÉ Decorative technique in which cutout fabric shapes are sewn on to a larger piece of fabric or garment to form a design. SEE PP.180, 207, 236

ARAN Style of knitwear originating among families in the Aran

Islands off the Irish coast; made from undyed wool featuring raised patterns such as cables and twists. Also known as a Fisherman knit sweater.

ARGYLE PATTERN Scottish pattern comprising diamond shapes in two or more colors; made popular by golfers, now common on sweaters and socks.

1920s ⊳

ARISAID Long plaid cloak worn by women in the Scottish Highlands and Islands, fastened by a brooch and a belt.

TRADITIONAL

ARMSCYE The armhole of a garment into which a sleeve is sewn.

ARMY SURPLUS Military clothing that was surplus to requirements and sold on to the public, such as duffle coats and bomber jackets. 1940s ▷

ART DECO An artistic style that emerged in Paris in the 1920s, the name deriving from the 1925 Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs; it influenced many areas of art and design, including fashion, and featured streamlined shapes inspired by aerodynamic machines, and geometric designs.

MID-1920s-LATE 1940s: SEE PP.253, 258-9

ARTISTIC DRESS Quasi-medieval style adopted by female followers of the Pre-Raphaelite artists; featured flowing, loose, high-waisted dresses.

1840s-c.1900: SEE P.214

ASTRAKHAN Lambskin from the Astrakhan region of Russia; also woven fabric resembling lambskin.

AUTOMOBILE COAT Also known as a motoring coat, a garment worn in early (open) cars to protect against wind and cold; made of leather or cloth with a thick lining; see also Car coat.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.230

AYLESHAM Wool or linen cloth made at Aylesham in Norfolk.
13TH-14TH CENTURY

B

BABY DOLL Style of night wear comprising a short, sheer nightdress, frequently having an empire waist and often worn with short panties; inspired by the 1956 film Baby Doll.

1950s ▷

BABY DOLL DRESS A very short minidress, with an empire waist and flared skirt.

1960s ▷: SEE P.329

BACK BREADTH Tailoring term for the overall width of the two back pieces of a coat, at waist level.

BALACLAVA Wool covering for the head and neck that leaves the face exposed; first worn by military personnel during the Crimean War. 1850s ▷

BALDRICK Belt worn across the body from shoulder to hip, from which a sword or drinking horn was hung.

13TH-17TH CENTURY: SEE P.123, 129

BALLERINA SKIRT Full, calf-length skirt with several layers of light fabric, inspired by classical ballet costumes; especially popular in the 1950s.

MID-20™ CENTURY ▷

BALLET FLATS Shoes with a flat heel and a short vamp, resembling the slippers worn by ballet dancers.

1950s ▷: SEE P.340

BALLETS RUSSES Avant-garde dance company, led by Sergei Diaghilev; their striking, sensuous costumes, inspired by traditional Russian, Eastern, and Ancient Greek styles, still have a significant influence on fashion today.

EARLY 20TH CENTURY: SEE PP.244-5

BALL GOWN A long dress made from silk or other luxury material, short-sleeved or sleeveless, with a fitted, low-cut bodice and a full skirt.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY D: SEE PP.181, 198–9, 326–7

BAND A shirt collar; main types were the standing band (a flat, starched collar) and the falling band (a collar that was turned down); see also Stand collar, Stand-fall collar.

16тн-17тн CENTURY

BANDANA A handkerchief, typically with a white pattern on a red or blue ground, often folded diagonally and worn around the neck or head.

18TH CENTURY >: SEE P.434

BANDEAU Fabric headband first worn by women as decoration, but today commonly used in sports; also refers to a strapless bikini top.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.169, 180, 291

BANGLE A rigid band of jewelry, wide enough to be slipped over a hand or a foot.

LATE 18™H CENTURY ▷

BANYAN Originally a loose-skirted outdoor coat; the term was later used for a long housecoat for men, also known as an Indian gown, and made from silk, linen, or cotton. c.1650–19TH CENTURY: SEE P.131

BASEBALL CAP Soft cloth cap with a visor at the front, first used in baseball but now generally popular as an item of casual wear.

MID-19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.227, 407

BASQUE Originally a long, close-fitting bodice; today a hip-length item of lingerie with boning and brassière cups; see also Bustier.

BASTING Joining fabric pieces temporarily with large running stitches before permanent stitching.

BATEAU-NECK Also called a boat neck, a shallowly curved neckline extending almost to shoulder width.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.295, 335, 451

BATIK Technique possibly originating in Java, but used widely across the world, in which hot wax is applied to parts of a cloth in a pattern; the cloth is then dyed, the wax-coated areas resisting the dye to produce the design; sometimes known simply as "wax" in African countries.

SEE PP.457, 460

BATWING SLEEVE See Dolman sleeve.

BAUDEKIN An expensive decorated silk, some types having a warp of gold thread and a weft of silk.

MEDIEVAL

BEATNIK STYLE Style inspired by intellectuals in Paris and the Beat generation in San Francisco; featured black turtlenecks, berets, and for women, black leotards with black skirts and stockings and flat shoes.

LATE 1940s-1960s: SEE PP.380-1

BEAVER (a) Beaver fur, used for gloves; (b) a wool fabric with a raised nap, used for overcoats; (c) a felt including beaver fur, used for high-quality hats.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.128, 162-3

BELL-BOTTOMS Style of pants fitting closely at the hips but with widely flaring lower legs, originally worn by sailors; see also Flares.

1960s: SEE PP.366-7, 372-3, 382-3

BELLOWS POCKET A type of patch pocket with sides that could expand; commonly used on Norfolk jackets.

1890s ▷: SEE P.453

BELL SLEEVE In women's garments, a sleeve that fits closely from the shoulder to the mid-forearm and then flares widely to the wrist.

1850s ▷

BELLY PIECES

Shaped pieces of pasteboard, or linen reinforced with whalebone, sewn into the front of a doublet to support the abdomen.

PP.118-19

BERET A soft, circular wool or felt cap, sometimes worn tilted to one side; originating in the Basque country of France and Spain, it is now worn worldwide.

20_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.396-7, 445

BERTHA COLLAR A wide, deep collar of lace or silk, attached to a dress with a low décolletage and extending over the shoulders.

1840s-1920s: SEE P.142

BESPOKE Made to order and custom-tailored for an individual; see also Tailor-made.

19_{TH} CENTURY ⊳

BIAS The diagonal across the grain of a fabric, at 45 degrees to the warp and weft; cutting on the bias can enable a garment to stretch.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.446

BICORN A wide-brimmed hat with the brim turned up at the front and back, often with a slight peak at the front and adorned with a rosette or cockade.

18TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY

BIKINI Two-piece women's bathing suit resembling a brassière and underpants, invented in 1946 by French engineer Louis Réard.

BISHOP SLEEVE In women's garments, a sleeve made from light fabrics, widening from the shoulder and gathered into a cuff at the wrist.

19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.196-7, 241, 458

BLACK WORK Embroidery worked in black silk thread to form geometric or scrolled designs, often used on collars and cuffs.

c.1510-1630s: SEE P.109

BLANKET CLOTH Heavy wool cloth with a raised finish, commonly used for overcoats.

19тн CENTURY

BLAZER Originally a man's jacket for boating, now a classic semiformal jacket, widely used in school or adult uniforms.

1890s ▷: SEE PP.217, 283-4, 448

BLOCK PRINTING Method of printing fabric, in which one or more colors are applied to fabric using carved wood blocks, each color needing a separate block.

BLOOMERS Baggy knickerbockers worn by women for cycling and other sports; also loose, knee-length women's underpants; invented and named after Mrs. Amelia Bloomer.

1851–MID-20TH CENTURY: SEE P.215

BLOUSE A smock-like cotton or linen garment originally worn by working men, or a light, soft shirt for women.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.241

BLOUSON A waist-length, loose-fitting men's jacket with elastic or drawstring hem and cuffs, used in sports, military, and casual wear; see also Bomber jacket.

1950s ▷

BOA A long, round-ended tippet made of feathers or fur.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.178, 291

BOATER Stiff straw hat with flattopped crown, straight brim, and hatband of Petersham, or grosgrain ribbon, for casual summerwear. 19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.211, 214–17

BOAT NECK See Bateau-neck.

BOBBIN LACE An openwork fabric made by braiding and twisting together a number of threads held on bobbins.

BODICE The upper part of a garment, especially a dress, between the shoulders and the waist.

15TH CENTURY >: SEE P.139

BODIES, PAIR OF An under bodice of two parts joined at the sides, padded, and stiffened with whalebone, wood, or steel.

16TH-17TH CENTURY: SEE P.98

BODKIN Formerly a long, ornate hair pin; today refers to a blunt needle used for threading ribbon, tape, or elastic through a casing.

16[™] CENTURY ▷

BODY COAT Tailors' term for the coat part of a suit, as distinct from an overcoat or topcoat.

19TH CENTURY ▷

BODY STOCKING A stretchy body covering like a leotard, but also covering the legs to the ankles; also known as a unitard.

MID-1960s ▷

BOLERO A very short-cropped, decorative, open jacket for women, often worn with a dress; inspired by traditional Spanish men's jackets.

MID-19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.273, 335, 396

BOLO TIE Also known as a bootlace or shoestring tie, a very narrow necktie comprising a length of cord or braided leather with decorative metal aglets secured with an ornamental clasp or slide; worn as part of cowboy style or Teddy-boy style.

1940s ⊳

BOLT Industry standard unit in which rolled cloth is manufactured and supplied, comprising a specific length and/or width.

BOMBACHAS Baggy pants gathered at the ankle, worn for horseback riding in Argentina and Uruguay.

EARLY 19™ CENTURY ▷: SEE P.441

BOMBAST Fibrous material such as cotton, horsehair, wool, or rags, used to pad out parts of a garment such as the trunk-hose or sleeves.

16TH-17TH CENTURY: SEE P.105

BOMBAZINE Twilled fabric with a silk warp and worsted weft, first used undyed and later dyed black for mourning apparel.

16тн-20тн CENTURY

BOMBER JACKET Blouson, usually leather, originally worn by US Air Force crews, now generally adopted as casual wear.

1940s ▷: SEE P.406

BONDAGE STYLE A style associated with punk and other youth cultures, featuring clothes embellished with straps, chains, and studs.

LATE 1970s >: SEE P.404

BONGRACE A flat, rectangular, stiffened head covering extending over the forehead at the front and down to the shoulders at the back; also refers to part of a French hood.

16th-EARLY 17th CENTURY BONING Strips of whalebone, or later flexible steel or plastic, added to garments, especially bodices and corsets, to help them stay up and support shapes; see also Basque, Corset.

16TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.432-3

BONNET Originally a soft head covering, but later a women's hat with a brim only at the front.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.178, 193

BOOT CUT A style of pants with a straight-leg fit from waist to knee and a slight flare below the knee to ankle.

1990s ▷: SEE P.451

BOSOM FRIENDS Wool, fur, or down pads fit to the bosom for warmth and as bust enhancers.

LATE 18TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY

BOUCLÉ A term for a fabric knit or woven using looped or rough-textured yarn, giving a knobbly appearance.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

BOWLER A hard felt hat with a rounded crown and a narrow brim rolled up at the sides, worn for horse riding and later as stylish headgear.

1850s >: SEE PP.227, 265

BOX COAT (a) Heavy, caped overcoat typically worn by coachmen; (b) loose-fitting coat popular in the 1930s and 40s, with a boxy shape and squared, padded shoulders.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷

BOXER SHORTS Loose-fitting cotton shorts with an elastic waistband, worn by men as underpants; based on the shorts worn by professional boxers, which allow free movement.

1940s ▷

BOX PLEAT A flat pleat created by two folds facing toward each other and pressed flat.

LATE 19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.145, 452

BRAID Strands of ribbon or cord interwoven to form a narrow strip, often used as an edging for garments.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.176-7

BRAIES Baggy medieval underwear worn under tunics; stockinglike hose were attached to the braies; as tunics became shorter and slimmer, the braies became shorter and more fitted.

MEDIEVAL: SEE P.72

BRASSIÈRE Women's undergarment worn to support the bust; many types have underwiring to give extra support and shape; usually abbreviated to bra.

EARLY 20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.277

BREASTPLATE A piece of plate armor worn over the front of the torso to protect the chest.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.69, 92-3

BREECHES In medieval times, the upper part of men's long hose; later, men's fitted pants ending at the knee.

14TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.88–9, 154

BRETON SHIRT Originally worn by fishermen in Brittany, a long-sleeved garment like a T-shirt, with a boat neck, and traditionally with navy and white stripes.

MID-19TH CENTURY \triangleright

BRIAL Spanish tunic made of expensive fabric such as silk brocade or silk with gold thread; laced down one side.

12TH-14TH CENTURY

BRISTOL DIAMONDS A type of rock crystal found near Bristol in southwest England and used as imitation diamonds in jewelry.

17тн-19тн CENTURY

BROADCLOTH Fine wool cloth with a twill weave and a smooth face; an economic staple in England and Flanders in medieval times.

MEDIEVAL ▷

BROCADE Luxury fabric woven with silk and often including silver or gold threads, with an extra weft added to create a raised pattern.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.141

BRODERIE ANGLAISE White work embroidery featuring floral motifs created from pierced holes bound with satin stitch; often used to adorn underwear.

17TH CENTURY ▷

BROGUES Durable leather shoes with punched-leather decoration.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.301

BROTHEL CREEPERS Suede shoes with crepe rubber soles, first worn by soldiers in World War II, and then adopted as part of Teddy-boy style; they gained the name "brothel creepers" from the soldiers' habit of wearing them to visit nightclubs.

1940s ▷: SEE PP.341,404

BUCKLED WIG

PP.150-1

A man's wig with horizontal rolls of hair above or around the ears.

1874 CENTURY: SEE

BUCKRAM Fine cotton or linen often stiffened, and used in the 19th century for making women's hats.

13TH-19TH CENTURY

BUCKSKIN Leather made from deer hide, used for gloves and at one time for breeches; also known as deerskin.

15TH CENTURY ⊳

BUFF COAT A durable military coat made from buffalo or ox hide; later adopted by civilians.

16TH-17TH CENTURY

BUGLE BEADS Small tubular beads, which can be smooth or faceted, used to adorn women's clothes.

19TH CENTURY ▷

BUNDHOSEN Breeches that finish just below the knee, with a lacing or a buckle closure at the hem; traditional in Germanspeaking countries. MEDIEVAL ▷

Shoshone woman, Idaho, USDress of the American Indian Shoshone people is frequently made of animal skin that is ornately embellished with natural motifs using beading and embroidery.

"Mountie" in ceremonial garb, Canada This man wears the uniform of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who are distinguished by their scarlet Red Serge belted tunic with gold buttons.

Mexican mariachi in traditional dress The typical dress worn by charros, similar to American cowboys, is today most frequently worn by mariachi musicians and consists of an ornate suit and sombrero.

Maya woman, Guatemala

The huipil is the most distinctive element of Central American indigenous dress. Some women also wear a kaperraj on the head, which doubles as a carrier bag.

BURNOUS Long, hooded wool cloak traditionally worn by North African men; also a women's evening wrap made of cashmere; see also Djellaba, Jebba.

17TH CENTURY ▷

BUSK A flat piece of whalebone, wood, or metal used to stiffen the front of a corset or stays; wood busks were often hand-carved and decorated with initials or hearts.

16TH-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

BUSKINS Kneelength boots worn by both men and women made of cloth or later of leather, worn for riding or traveling. 14TH-LATE 17TH CENTURY

BUSTIER Item of lingerie combining a brassière and a camisole, reaching from the bust to the waist, often with boning; see also Basque.

1830s-1900s: SEE P.344

BUSTLE Metal frame or padded shapes worn under a woman's dress at the back to support the top of the skirt; see also Grecian bend, Tournure.

1830s-1900s: SEE PP.200-5, 432-3

BUTCHER'S BOY CAP See Newsboy cap.

BUTTON BOOTS Short, lightweight boots fastened up the outside of the ankle with buttons; worn by both men and women.

1890s-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

CABLE KNIT A knitting technique in which some stitches are crossed over adjacent ones to create a braided effect; notably used in Aran knitwear.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.281

CAFTAN see Kaftan.

CAGE PETTICOAT Dome-shaped structure used to support a wide skirt, and consisting of whalebone or wire hoops joined by bands of tape; see also Hoop crinoline and Petticoat.

1850s-LATE 1860s: SEE PP.196-7, 432-3

CALICO A lightweight, finely woven cotton printed with a small floral motif; also, a UK term for a heavierweight muslin.

17TH CENTURY ▷

CAMBRIC A high-quality linen. 16TH CENTURY ▷

CAMEL HAIR Undyed hair from camels, or a wool fabric dyed to imitate the color, usually light beige or tan in color; used to make coats.

LATE 17TH CENTURY ▷

CAMI-KNICKERS

An item of lingerie combining a camisole and loose tap pants; later known as a Teddy; see also Baby doll.

CAMISOLE An item of lingerie that covers the upper body and is held up with thin spaghetti straps.

1820s ▷

CAPRI PANTS Close-fitting, mid-calf-length pants for women.

1950s ▷: SEE P.337

CAPUCHIN A soft hood with a deep cape and a colored lining; also called a riding hood, it was worn outdoors and for traveling.

16TH-LATE 18TH CENTURY

CARACO A thigh-length women's jacket, fitted at the waist or with box pleats at the back; some styles were a little longer in the back than in the front.

MID-18TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.117, 163

CAR COAT A thigh-length coat worn for traveling; less bulky than the early automobile coats. 1940s ▷

CARDIGAN A knit jacket closed with buttons or a zipper, originally worn by soldiers in the Crimean War, but now worn widely by both men and women.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

cargo Pants Loose-fitting pants for men and women, with large pockets on the legs, based on pants worn by US military personnel in World War II; now widely worn as casual wear.

1950s ⊳

CARTRIDGE PLEATING Tiny, soft, evenly spaced pleats used to gather a large amount of material into an armscye, waistband, or cuff, without adding bulk to the seam.

MEDIEVAL >: SEE PP.145, 452

CASHMERE A fine, soft fabric made from goats' wool and originally imported from Kashmir; see also Pashmina.

18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.197

CASSOCK Closed, ankle-length robe, with long sleeves and low, stand-up collar; usually black; worn by clerics, lay people and choir members of various Christian churches.

13TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.57

CATSUIT A close-fitting, stretchy one-piece garment for women, combining a zippered bodice and tight pants.

1960s ⊳

CAVALRY TWILL Worsted or rayon twill with a diagonally ribbed surface; originally used for cavalry in World War I, but now used for men's smart-casual pants.

CHAMMER A sleeved gown for men, made from luxury material and worn open at the front.

LATE 14TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY

CHAMOIS Soft, cream-colored leather, made from the skin of the Chamois goat or from sheepskin or lambskin, used for gloves.

16TH CENTURY ▷

CHAPERON Medieval men's hat: originated as a hood with integrated short cape that could be rolled up and fastened; evolved into a padded circlet with scarflike attachment. MEDIEVAL: SEE PP.72-3

CHAPS Leg covering, often leather. which is buckled over pants to protect them while horse riding. MID-TO-LATE 19TH CENTURY: SEE P.434

CHASUBLE Colorful, richly decorated outer garment worn by priests, bishops, or archbishops in the Christian Church for Eucharist service or Mass.

4TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.36–7, 57

CHECKED A pattern made by crossing stripes of differentcolored warp and weft to create squares, or a similar pattern printed on to cloth.

15TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.205, 210, 273, 381

CHELSEA BOOTS Slip-on ankle boots for men, made of leather with elastic sides.

1840s ⊳

CHEMISE A linen undershirt, first worn by both sexes but later used as a woman's undergarment.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.87

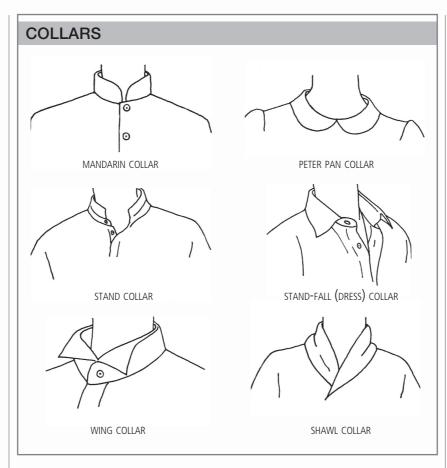

CHENILLE A velvety cord used in embroidery, weaving, or knitting, made from silk with a tufted surface; a soft, textured fabric made from synthetic chenille yarn.

LATE 17TH CENTURY ▷

CHEONGSAM Chinese women's dress of silk or satin, close fitting, with a mandarin collar, and with slits at both sides; now worn worldwide. 1920s ▷: SEE P.461

CHESTERFIELD A knee-length, single-breasted or double-breasted overcoat for men, with a back vent but no side vents or waist seams, and sometimes with a velvet collar.

CHIFFON A sheer, delicate fabric, usually of silk or rayon, woven with twisted yarns to give a slightly grainy surface, used for women's clothes.

CHINOS Cotton twill pants for men and women; originally khaki and worn by US servicemen, later popular as casual wear and for the preppy style.

1940 ⊳

CHINTZ Glazed calico with bright, often floral, prints, first imported from India, and used for women's clothing.

17тн-18тн CENTURY: SEE P.221

CHITON Garment worn in Ancient Greece, comprising a large rectangle of linen draped around the body, held at the shoulders with brooches and under the bust with a girdle. c. 480-323BCE: SEE PP.24-5

CHLAMYS A wool cloak or short mantle worn in Ancient Greece, first by soldiers and later for general use. c.480-323BCE: SEE PP.24-5

CHOKER

A decorative band or ribbon worn around the throat by women,

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.201

CHOLI For Indian women, a fitted bodice worn under a sari. SEE P.462

CHOPINES Overshoes worn in Spain and Italy by women, consisting of a toe cap and a raised sole of cork or wood; often decorated with paint or gilding.

15тн-17тн CENTURY: SEE PP.111, 426

CHUBA A long sheepskin coat worn in Tibet; popular in hippy style.

CIGARETTE PANTS Close-fitting, tapered pants for women, similar to Capri pants but longer.

1950s ▷: SEE P.452

CLIPPING In dressmaking, cutting slits or notches in the edge of a seam so material will fit curves or corners.

CLOCHE Close-fitting hat for women, with a slightly flared brim giving a bell shape; especially fashionable in the 1920s.

1908 ▷: SEE PP.273, 429

CLOTH OF GOLD / SILVER A rich fabric of silk or wool interwoven with threads or strips of gold or silver. MEDIEVAL: SEE P.75

COCKTAIL DRESS A semiformal, long or short dress for women, in luxury fabric such as silk or satin, worn for early-evening parties.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.322-3

CODPIECE Initially a flap at the fork of men's long hose or trunk hose to shield the crotch; in the 16th century codpieces were padded and projected from the hose. 15тн-17тн CENTURY: SEE PP.88-90

COIF Close-fitting linen cap for men, or linen undercap for women. MEDIEVAL-19TH CENTURY:

SEE PP.61, 128

COIFFE A cap worn by Breton women, typically of linen or lace, and usually white; can be tied under the chin or pinned to the hair.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.442

COMBING Preparation of wool or cotton to remove the shorter fibers and make the long fibers lie parallel, before spinning; used to produce worsted yarn or "combed cotton."

COMMODE Originally a name for a wire framework covered with silk or lace to form a tall headdress for women, and then the term for the headdress itself; later commodes had long lappets that hung down to the shoulders or were pinned up.

17тн-18тн CENTURY: SEE PP.133, 139

CONVERSE "CHUCK TAYLOR"

ALL STAR® A brand of basketball sneakers with a high top, canvas upper, and rubber sole, named "All Star" after the logo, and "Chuck Taylor" after 1920s basketball star Chuck Taylor, an ambassador for the brand; now globally popular, especially with young men and women.

COPE A full cloak cut as a semicircle and worn by clerics of various Christian churches.

MEDIEVAL >: SEE P.57

CORDED SILK Heavy silk with raised ribs on the surface; see also Rep.

19TH CENTURY

CORDOVAN Fine Spanish leather, originally made from horse hide, used for gloves and shoes. MEDIEVAL ▷

CORDUROY A cotton fabric with a soft pile forming parallel ridges of varying widths known as wales (for example, wide wale and pinwale).

CORK SHOE Shoe worn by both men and women, with a wedge-shaped Cork sole; often worn for swimming.

16TH CENTURY ▷

CORNETTE The long tail of a hood; also refers to a type of wimple made of starched white cloth, folded up into two "horns" (cornes in French).

MEDIEVAL

CORSAGE

The bodice of a woman's dress; also a small bunch of flowers pinned to a woman's bust or shoulder, or worn on the wrist.

PP.190, 205, 363

CORSELETTE A women's corset with boning and laces that pull in the wearer's waist, giving a curvy, "wasp-waisted" shape; made popular as part of Dior's New Look.

LATE 1940s ▷: SEE PP.316, 412-3

CORSET A supportive undergarment for women, comprising a sleeveless, boned bodice worn under clothing and covering bust to hips.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.133, 190, 432–3

COSSACKS Men's pants with tapering legs, pleated at the waist, and with drawstrings at the ankle or straps under the instep.

1814-c.1850; SEE P.184

COSTUME An outfit worn for a specific event or for theatrical performance, or worn by a particular ethnic group; sometimes used for a woman's outfit of jacket and skirt.

1800 ⊳

COSTUME JEWELRY Accessories made with inexpensive materials such as paste, glass, or rhinestones to imitate gems, or "base metal" colored to resemble gold or silver.

1930s ▷

COTE Long garment worn over the chemise and under the robe, by both men and women.

14тн-15тн CENTURY: SEE PP.72-4

COTE-HARDIE A close-fitting, hip-length overgarment for men, or an overgarment for women with a close-fitting bodice and sleeves and a wide, full skirt.

14TH-15TH CENTURY: SEE PP.62-3

COTHURNUS An Ancient Greek boot worn for hunting, with thick soles and reaching to mid-calf; also used as part of costumes for Greek and Roman actors in tragedies.

ANTIQUITY

COTTAGE BONNET Simple, close-fitting straw bonnet with the sides projecting beyond the wearer's face. 1808–1870

COTTON White, downy fiber from the bolls (seed capsules) of the cotton plant (genus Gossypium), and fabric woven from it; first used in the Americas and Asia, and one of the most widely used fabrics today.

5000BCE ▷

COTTON GAUZE Thin, loosely woven cotton, originally from India, popular for clothing in the 1960s and 1970s; called muslin in the UK.

1960s ⊳

COUCHED WORK A decorative technique in which threads are laid on the surface of a fabric and then secured with small stitches of another thread.

11TH CENTURY ▷

COUTURE From the French for "sewing," the creation of high fashion, often custom-made, clothing for women; see also Haute couture.

COVERT COAT A short overcoat for men, with a fly front and vents in the side seams, originally for riding but later adopted generally.

1880s ▷

COWBOY BOOTS Sturdy riding boots, usually mid-calf height and with a Cuban heel, often with ornate embroidery on the side; originally worn by North American cowboys.

MID-19TH CENTURY >>

COWBOY HAT Wide-brimmed hat with tall crown; made from felt, straw, or leather; first worn by working cowboys in the US; John B. Stetson is credited with making the first.

MID-19TH CENTURY ▷ SEE P.434

COWBOY STYLE A casual style of dress based on the work clothes worn by US cowboys, such as jeans, cowboy boots, and bandanas.

1950s ▷

COWL NECK A large, softly draped collar seen on women's sweaters and dresses.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.326, 451

CRAVAT A neckcloth for men, said to have originated in Croatia, today made from patterned fabric (usually silk), with a pleated section to go around the neck and tucked into the open neckline of shirt.

LATE 17TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.136-7, 184-5

CRÊPE A thin, gauzy fabric in which the fibers are twisted before they are woven to give greater elasticity; types used today include crêpe de chine (silk) and crêpe georgette (silk, rayon, or cotton).

17TH CENTURY ▷

CREPE RUBBER Natural rubber used to make soles of shoes or boots, as it is lightweight and gives protection against heat and wet; crepe soles usually have a rough, crinkled surface; see also Brothel creepers.

1920s ▷

CRESPINETTE Hairnet worn by aristocratic women of Northern Europe; woven from gold, silver, or silk; also called crispine or caul. 13TH-14TH CENTURY; SEE PP.64.74

CREW NECK A round, close-fitting neckline on a shirt or sweater.

20th CENTURY >: SEE P.451

CRINOLETTE An undergarment that marks the transition between the cage petticoat and the bustle; has a flat front and half-hoops at the back. c.1868–1873: SEE P.433

CRINOLINE (a) See Cage petticoat; (b) a fabric made from horsehair mixed with cotton, used to make stiff under-petticoats.

1829 ▷: SEE PP.196-7, 433

CROCHET WORK A technique for making fabric or lace by working yarn (or thread) into loops and chains, using a hooked needle (crochet is French for "hook").

19TH CENTURY >: SEE P.380

CROPPED Term used for a garment cut shorter than the usual length.

17™ CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.332, 388, 397

CROSS CLOTH A triangular piece of cloth worn over a coif, with the longest edge over the forehead.

CRUSHED VELVET Velvet with a crumpled pile.

20th CENTURY \triangleright

CUBAN HEEL A medium-high heel for shoes or boots, with a tapered back edge; see also Cowboy boots.

CUFF The part at the end of a sleeve, sometimes thickened or turned back. 15TH CENTURY ▷

CULOTTES Divided skirt worn by women, which looks like a skirt but functions like pants, first used for riding horses or bicycles.

EARLY 20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.297

CUMMERBUND A wide pleated sash worn around the waist, particularly as part of men's evening dress.

17TH CENTURY >: SEE P.215

CUTWORK (a) Also known as dagging, the slashing of a garment border to make decorative shapes; (b) decoration made by cutting holes and filling in the spaces with needlework.

14TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.72

DAGGING Decorative technique whereby a dagge (pattern) is cut into the edge of sleeves or hems; popular in medieval times.

MEDIEVAL-15TH CENTURY: SEE P.74

DALMATIKON A long, T-shaped Byzantine garment with wide sleeves and slits up each side. 300CE ▷: SEE PP.36–7

DAMASK A fabric of silk, linen, or wool in which a monochrome design is created by the contrast between the face and reverse of the satin weave and can be seen on both sides. MEDIEVAL ▷

DART A stitched fold on the inside of a garment piece, to create shape or to give a closer fit.

DASHIKI A loose, colorful pull-on shirt traditionally worn by men in West Africa, now worn worldwide, particularly by African-Americans.

1960s ⊳

DECK SHOES Nonslip shoes, also called boat shoes or top-siders, with rubber soles, quick-drying uppers, and a lace around the top; some types are similar in style to moccasins.

1935 ▷

DÉCOLLETAGE A low-cut neckline on a woman's dress.

1890s ▷: SEE PP.180-1

DECONSTRUCTIONISTS A group of designers who challenged traditional concepts of fashion by ripping clothes, leaving raw edges on garments, and making clothes from items such as gaffer tape.

1980s ▷: SEE PP.401, 420

DEEL Mongolian robe with high collar; cut in one piece and worn wrapped across the body and tied with a silk sash.

13TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.459

DEERSTALKER

A tweed cap with earflaps tied at the crown, for men to wear during country pursuits.

DELPHOS DRESS Greek-inspired style of women's dress created by designer Mariano Fortuny; made of thin, finely pleated silk weighted down with glass beads at the sides. c.1907–1950s: SEE P.237

DEMI-GIGOT SLEEVE A style of sleeve that is full from the shoulder to the elbow and tight on the forearm; see also Gigot sleeve.

1820s; ALSO 1891

DENIM A cotton twill fabric made with one colored thread and one white thread, used to make work clothes such as jeans.

17TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.339, 345, 373

DERBY SHOES Sometimes called Blücher shoes, a style of men's lace-up leather shoe in which the shoelace eyelets are situated on flaps attached to the top of the vamp.

20_{TH} CENTURY ▷

DESIGNER LABEL A label bearing the name or logo of a major designer; this may also be displayed on the outside of a garment as a sign of quality or a badge of status.

LATE 20TH CENTURY ▷

Argentinian cattle herder South American gauchos dress to accommodate a rugged lifestyle. *Ponchos*are carried and serve as cloaks in cold weather or saddle blankets when riding.

Aymará woman, BoliviaTraditional Aymará dress, or cholita dress, includes a full, tiered skirt and a felt hat, similar to a bowler hat. This hat style was first introduced to Bolivia in the 1920s.

Royal Scots Dragoon GuardMany regiments of the British Army wear uniforms based on traditional Scottish dress. This Guard wears Queen Elizabeth II's personal tartan, Royal Stewart.

Woman from Pont l'Abbé, France Costume from Brittany is distinctive for its use of fine lace, especially in coiffes. There is an impressive variety of these caps, each village having its own unique style.

DEVORÉ A velvety fabric on which some areas of the pile have been burned away with chemicals, so that the remaining pile forms a pattern. LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

DHOTI A long, cotton loincloth traditionally worn by Indian men. SEE P.462

DIAMANTÉ UK term for rhinestones. 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.258–9

DIAPER A fabric woven so that the surface shows a diaper pattern of interlocking lozenge or diamond shapes when the light catches it.

15TH CENTURY ▷

DIFFUSION LINE Also known as a Bridge collection. A clothing line produced by a high-profile designer at a moderate price.

20th CENTURY ▷

DIMITY A lightweight cotton fabric with some of the warp threads standing out to form fine cords.

18 TH CENTURY ▷

DINNER JACKET A man's jacket for formal eveningwear, often with silk-faced or satin-faced lapels; also known as a tuxedo.

1890s ▷: SEE P.289

DIRECTOIRE STYLE Neoclassical style of dress for men and women, popular in France at the end of the 18th century and briefly revived at the end of the 19th century.

18TH-19TH CENTURY: SEE P.156

DIRNDL Traditional style of dress for women in Austria and southern Germany, including a lace-up bodice, a full, gathered skirt, and an apron. SEE P.446

DJELLABA Long, hooded wool robe traditionally worn by men and women in northwest Africa.

DOGTOOTH See Houndstooth.

DOLLY VARDEN BONNET A widebrimmed bonnet with wide ribbons that are tied under the chin. 1880s-EARLY 20TH CENTURY: SEE P.219 DOLMAN SLEEVE A loose-fitting sleeve cut as part of the bodice; often used on women's sweaters; popular in the 1980s; see also Batwing sleeve.

1930s >: SEE P.458

DONKEY JACKET Short wool work jacket for men, often with PVC on the yoke; popular with students and radicals from the 1950s onward.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.448

DOUBLE-BREASTED A garment, usually a coat or jacket, with overlapping panels at the front and two vertical rows of buttons.

18TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.589, 366, 448

DOUBLE-FACED A term for a fabric with a finish on both sides (two "right sides"), so usable on either side.

19TH CENTURY ▷

DOUBLET A close-fitting padded jacket worn over the shirt, usually by men; doublets could have a buttoned front; see also Pourpoint.

14TH-LATE 17TH CENTURY: SEE PP.90-1, 118

DRAINPIPE PANTS Very close-fitting, straight-legged jeans or casual pants first worn by men in the 1950s and later adopted by women.

1950s >: SEE P.340

DRAPE SUIT Men's three-piece suit with a loose cut through the shoulder and armscye, light padding, a narrow waist, and wide sleeves, creating a V-shape silhouette.

1930s ▷: SEE PP.286-7

DRAWERS An undergarment for the lower body, usually made of linen or cotton.

15TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.171

DRAWN-THREAD WORK A fabric decoration in which some warp and weft threads are removed and the remaining threads are sewn to form a pattern; see also Pulled-thread work.

16TH CENTURY ▷

DRESS CLOTHES Formal garments for men, particularly for evening, such as the tailcoat.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

DRESS REFORM Various initiatives taken in Europe and North America, associated with suffrage movements, to make clothing more comfortable and practical, especially for women; see also Bloomers, Culottes.

MID-19TH CENTURY-1940s: SEE P.283

DRILL Sturdy linen or cotton twill used for summer clothing. Also preferred for corsets.

18_{TH} CENTURY ▷

DR. (DOC) MARTENS Lace-up walking boots with a high top and air-cushioned sole, worn by skinheads and other youth subcultures; see also Grunge, Punk style, Skinhead style.

1960 ▷: SEE PP.404-5

DROP WAIST A waistband that sits lower than the natural waist of the wearer, fashionable for women's dresses during the 1920s.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.240-1, 252-5

DUCHESSE A heavy, luxurious satin with a lustrous sheen.

DUCKS Pants made from coarse white linen or cotton, often worn in hot climates and by sailors.

19TH CENTURY

DUFFLE COAT A coarse serge coat first made for the British Royal Navy, later adopted by students and activists; often fastened with toggles.

MID-19TH CENTURY ▷

DUPATTA Long scarf, often in sheer material, traditionally worn with women's shalwar kameez, draped around the shoulders or head.

DUTCH BOY CAP A man's peaked cap, usually of wool and with a flat, circular crown; originally worn by fishermen in Europe, and later popular with youth and left-wing subcultures such as bikers.

DYE Natural or synthetic substance used to color a fabric; see also Aniline dyes.

SEE PP.38-9

Е

EASING Technique for joining two fabric edges of slightly different lengths, in which the extra fullness on the longer edge is evenly distributed along the seam; more subtle than gathering.

EMBROIDERY Decorative stitching applied to a fabric, using materials such as silk, wool, and metal thread. SEE P.109

EMPIRE LINE A term used for women's dresses in the early 19th century, featuring a high-waisted bodice and long, slim skirt.
c.1800–1820 ▷: SEE PP.170–1

ENGAGEANTES A French word for ruffles, especially detachable ruffles worn at the cuffs by women.

LATE 17TH—MID-19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.142, 157

EPAULETTES Ornamental shoulder pieces originally worn on jackets as part of a military uniform; now also a term for detachable shoulder pieces with insignia of rank, worn by members of the armed forces and other uniformed personnel such as pilots.

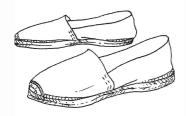

18™ CENTURY ▷

ERMINE The winter fur of the ermine (stoat), which is white with a black tip, and in medieval Europe was a symbol of high status.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.86-7, 192-3

ESPADRILLES Canvas shoes with twisted rope soles, and sometimes laces, first worn by Spanish peasants but now popular as summer shoes.

1920s ▷: SEE P.406

ETHNIC DRESS Traditional clothing from certain ethnic groups that has been adapted for Western fashion, such as the poncho or the kaftan, or harem pants.

1950 ⊳

ETON COLLAR A large, stiffly starched, detachable *whit*e collar, notably worn by students of Eton, a prestigious British school.

19TH CENTURY ▷

EYELET A hole made in a garment for ribbon or laces to pass through, often with the edges strengthened by stitching or metal rings.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.63

F

FACE, OF FABRIC The "right side," the surface that faces outward on a finished garment; see also Double-faced cloth.

FACING Attaching a strip of fabric or binding to a raw neckline or other edge of a garment, to give a neat enclosed seam.

FAGGOTTING (a) Joining of two fabric pieces by a network of stitches; (b) drawn-thread work in which some threads are removed and the rest tied in bundles to form a pattern.

FAILLE A soft silk or rayon fabric with a slight luster and a ribbed weave creating a textured feel. 1860s ▷

FAIR ISLE A traditional knitting style from Fair Isle in the Shetlands, with bands of repeating motifs in various colors or natural fleece tones.

1860s ▷: SEE PP.286, 304

FARTHINGALE An underskirt with wicker, whalebone, or rag hoops sewn in to hold a top skirt in a particular shape; see also Spanish farthingale, Wheel farthingale.

LATE 15TH-MID-17TH CENTURY: SEE PP.432-3

FASCINATOR

A delicate head ornament made from materials such as feathers and net, derived from the cocktail hats of the 1960s.

FASHION PLATES Mass-produced illustrations showing the general features of new fashion styles; used until the advent of photography.

17TH—EARLY 20TH CENTURY

FEDORA A felt hat with a crease along the crown and two "pinches" at the front, first worn by women but now a classic style for men.

1890s ▷: SEE PP.225,303

FELT A fabric made from wool and/or fur matted together by heating, moisture, and friction.

FEZ Also called a tarboosh, a red wool felt cap with cylindrical or conical sides, and a flat crown, frequently with a tassel, traditionally worn by Muslim men in Turkey and North Africa.

FIBER Strands of cotton, silk, or other natural or synthetic substances that are twisted into yarn or felted to make fabric.

SEE PP.113, 453

by women, a triangle of muslin or linen draped over the shoulders and loosely knotted at the bust or tucked into a low neckline.

FILLET A thin headband of linen or gold, or a headband of satin with pearls for eveningwear.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.49, 61, 64

FISHNET Open-weave material used for women's stockings and tights.

LATE 197H CENTURYD: SEE P.401

FLAMENCO DRESS Ankle-length dress with a low neckline; fitted bodice, waist, and hips; and frilled skirt; traditional in Andalusia, Spain; derived from local Romani dress.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY >: SEE P.329.445

FLANNEL Wool fabric with a plain or twill weave and a slight nap on both sides.

MEDIEVAL ⊳

FLANNELETTE A cotton fabric like flannel, with a nap on one or both sides; also called cotton flannel.

1870s ▷

FLARES Pants that fit tightly around the upper legs but flare out widely from the knee down; see also Bell-bottoms, Loon pants.

LATE 1960s >: SEE PP.366-7, 372-3, 382-3

FLAT CAP A soft, round cap of cloth or leather, with a low, flat crown and a small, stiff brim at the front.

16™ CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.227, 282

FLOUNCE A deep ruffle of gathered or pleated fabric used as decorative trimming for women's garments.

18_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.133, 143, 146–7

FLY FRONT A fold of cloth on a pair of pants covering a row of buttons or a zipper.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.217

FOLK COSTUME Style of dress traditionally worn by the inhabitants of a certain region, such as the Dirndl and Lederhosen in Germany.

FONTANGE A headdress for women first appearing in the French court, comprising a tower of lace or linen frills supported by a commode.

LATE 17TH—EARLY 18TH CENTURY: SEE P.139

FOUR-IN-HAND A simple and commonly used way to tie a necktie, forming a narrow and slightly asymmetrical knot.

1890 ▷: SEE PP.211, 263, 288

FRENCH CUFF Also called a double cuff, a long cuff that is folded back on itself and fastened with cufflinks. 1850s ▷: SEE P.440

FRENCH HEEL

A mediumhigh heel for women's shoes, in which the back curves inward and then flares out slightly just at the base; also called pompadour heel and Louis heel.

18™ CENTURY ⊳

FRENCH HOOD A small, round hood with a stiff frame, worn far back over the crown of the head, with the ends extending forward over the ears.

1520s-1590

FRENCH KNICKERS A variety of (usually loose-fitting) women's underpants, extending from the waist to the upper thighs like a pair of shorts, typically made of lace or satin; see also Teddy, Lingerie.

1930s ▷

FRENCH POCKET An early form of flap pocket, comprising a horizontal slit with a flap to protect the opening; used on men's clothing.

17th CENTURY: SEE P.453

FRENCH RUFF

Also called the cartwheel ruff, a large, deep ruff forming a horseshoe shape or full circle around the neck.

1580s-c.1610

FRENCH SEAM A seam in which the raw edges are enclosed within the body of the seam; especially suitable for sheer fabrics.

FRET A coif or skull cap made of gold fretwork or of fabric.

FROCK Old term for an informal gown or a child's dress.

MEDIEVAL ▷

FROCK COAT A man's coat reaching to the knee, buttoned down to waist level, and with full skirts.

18TH-EARLY 20TH CENTURY: SEE PP.184-5

FROGGING A coat closure comprising decorative braid and a spindle-shaped "frog button" that passes through a loop in the braid.

17TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.113, 205, 436

FRONTLET A decorative band worn across a woman's forehead, under a veil or other head covering.

MEDIEVAL-EARLY 17TH CENTURY

FULL-BOTTOMED WIG A large wig of closely curled hair, shoulder length or longer, with a center part.

1660-EARLY 18TH CENTURY: SEE PP.131, 137

FUN FUR A furlike material made from synthetic fiber, often dyed a bright color, or a garment made from such material.

1960s ▷

FURBELOW A flounce, or a wavy line of fabric, usually on a woman's garment and often made of the same material as the main garment.

18TH CENTURY

FUSTANELLA White pleated skirt traditionally worn as part of military dress in Albania and Greece; made from thick linen, often dipped in animal fat for waterproofing.

c.13_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE P.453

G

GABARDINE A worsted or cotton/ worsted twill with diagonal ribbing, invented by Thomas Burberry; used to make weatherproof raincoats and the Burberry trench coat.

1879 ▷

GABRIELLE DRESS Dress with a skirt front, a bodice cut from one panel of fabric, and box pleats at the back; also known as fourreau.

1860s

GABRIELLE SLEEVE A sleeve used on women's dresses, full from shoulder to elbow and tapering to a deep cuff; also a sleeve with a series of puffs from shoulder to wrist.

19TH CENTURY

GALLIGASKINS Wide, loose breeches. 1570s–END OF 17TH CENTURY

GARÇONNE LOOK A style named for the French equivalent of the "flapper," with short hairstyles and an often androgynous shape to the clothes.

1920s: SEE PP.252-3

GARTER A band, often decorative, used to hold up the top of a stocking.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.101, 104

GATHERING To make a fabric edge shorter and more full by sewing a line of running stitch and bunching the material closely along the thread.

MEDIEVAL ▷

GAUCHO PANTS Wide, calf-length pants first worn by the gauchos of South America but made popular by film star Rudolph Valentino.

1920s ▷

GAUNTLET An armored covering for the hand; also a sturdy glove with a flared cuff extending over the wrist.

15TH CENTURY ▷

GAUZE A thin, fine fabric made from silk or a similarly sheer material, used for veils and dress trimmings; see also Cotton gauze, Organdie.

13TH CENTURY ⊳

GEORGETTE A light, sheer fabric of silk or synthetic fiber, with a crêpe texture, used in dresses and blouses.

1914 ▷

GHILLIES Soft, open-topped leather shoes secured by laces across the foot and around the ankle, worn with traditional Scottish dress.

GIBSON GIRL SKIRT A straight-sided, flat-fronted skirt with gathers at the back to give fullness. 1890: SEE P.457

GIBUS HAT A top hat with a collapsible crown; see also Opera hat.

19™ CENTURY ▷

GIGOT SLEEVE A sleeve that is very full from the shoulder to the elbow and fitted from elbow to wrist; also called a leg-of-mutton sleeve.

19тн CENTURY: SEE PP.179, 206-7, 209, 458

GINGHAM Checked or striped plain weave fabric, usually cotton, in which the pattern is made by stripes of warp and weft threads.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.413

GIORNEA Tabard-style overdress with open front and sides, worn in Renaissance Italy by wealthy women as a way of displaying expensive fabric; especially popular in Florence.

LATE 14TH—MID-15TH CENTURY: SEE P.81

GIPON A close-fitting, padded jacket worn by men over the shirt; the forerunner of the doublet.

GIRDLE (a) A belt or cord fastened around the waist or hips to secure the clothing; (b) An elastic corset.

ANTIQUITY >: SEE PP.25, 87, 107

GODETS Triangular panels sewn into the seams of a skirt to create a fluted, flared shape at the bottom.

19TH CENTURY ▷

GOFFERING Creation of frills on cotton, linen, or delicate garments, by pressing the edges with heated tongs (goffering irons).

16TH CENTURY ▷

GO-GO BOOTS Knee-high boots for women, with a low or flat heel and often a chunky toe, inspired by Space Age style, usually made in shiny white or brightly colored material such as patent leather or vinyl.

1960s ▷: SEE PP352, 361

GOLLAR Short, fitted cape that just covers the shoulders, upper chest, and upper back; closure at the front; worn in Renaissance Germany with low-cut gowns; often fur-lined.

EARLY-MID 16TH CENTURY: SEE P.86

GORES Tapered panels used to make a skirt fit closely around the hips but flare out at the bottom.

14TH CENTURY ▷

GOSSAMER A very light, fine, filmy fabric, often used for veils.

19™ CENTURY ▷

GOWN Originally a term for a long, loose outer garment for both sexes, but later a long, usually formal, dress for women, such as a ball gown.

GRAIN The lie of threads in a fabric, which affects the way a garment will hang; see also Warp, Weft, Bias.

GRASS SKIRT Traditional form of dress, usually made from leaves; worn in Polynesian cultures, as well as by coastal tribes of Papua New Guinea and Maori in New Zealand. SEE P.463

GREATCOAT A heavy overcoat for men, worn especially by those in the armed forces.

18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.184

GRECIAN BEND A fashionable forward-tilted posture in women, often emphasized by a bustle and skirts that were puffed up at the back.

19TH CENTURY

GROSGRAIN A heavy silk fabric or ribbon with ribs across the surface.

19TH CENTURY ▷

GRUNGE An anti-materialistic, antifashion style originally from Seattle, which featured recycled clothing or outdoor wear and a messy appearance.

LATE 1980s >: SEE PP.412-3

G-STRING Skimpy underpants, with a narrow elastic back that exposes the buttocks, worn to give a smooth line under clothes; see also Thong.

GUERNSEY A close-knit wool sweater first worn by fishermen in the Channel Islands, now a classic garment for both men and women.

16TH CENTURY ▷

GUSSET A piece of fabric, usually triangular or diamond in shape, which can be inserted into a garment seam to give extra width or improve the fit.

GYPSY STYLE An interpretation of Romani gypsy dress worn by women, with layered skirts, hoop earrings, and scarves tied around the head or hips.

20TH CENTURY

Н

HABERDASHERY (a) British dressmaking term for small items required for sewing, such as thread, buttons, and zippers; see also Notions; (b) in the US a term for a men's clothier.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.214

HABIT (a) A woman's dress or skirt, worn for riding horses; (b) the traditional attire of monks or nuns; see also Vestments.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE P.214

HABOTAI SILK A light, inexpensive silk from Japan, also called China silk.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY

HACKING JACKET A single-breasted tweed jacket with slanted pockets and a back vent, first worn in the UK for riding horses, now a classic style. SEE P.448

HAFERLSCHUH Sturdy, traditional Bavarian shoe with textured sole for traction on alpine terrain; low-cut under the ankle, with side lacing on the vamp.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.304, 446

HAIK A long wrap of translucent linen worn by high-status women in Ancient Egypt; today, a wool cloak worn by both men and women in Morocco.

1500BCE ONWARD: SEE P.456

HALF BOOTS Ankle boots with the top reaching the base of the calf.
LATE 18TH—EARLY 20TH CENTURY: SEE P.225

HALF-WINDSOR KNOT A way of tying a necktie in which the wider end of the tie is looped around the narrower end and through the neck loop once (rather than twice, as in the Windsor knot), producing a neat, asymmetrical triangular knot.

HALTER NECK A soft, sleeveless bodice that is held up by straps tied behind the neck.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.309, 382

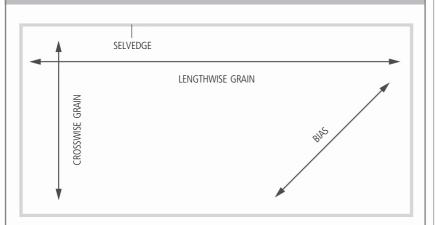

Basque dancer, southern France
The beret worn by this dancer is a style traditionally worn by Basque shepherds.
Popularized in the 19th century, it has become synonymous with French culture.

Woman in Andalusian dress, Spain Commonly associated with flamenco dancing, this style of dress originated within the gypsy community and is now a symbol of Andalusia the world over.

GRAIN

The diagram above illustrates the elements that make up the grain of a woven fabric: the warp threads form the lengthwise grain, while the weft threads form the crosswise grain. The edges of the weft threads are looped back into the fabric to create the selvedge. The bias runs at 45 degrees to the crosswise and lengthwise grains.

Woman from Zillertal, Austria Originally worn by peasant women, Dirndls were adopted by the upper classes in the 19th century and are now worn for festivals and other special occasions.

Man in Tyrolean dress, Austria Like their Bavarian neighbors, Tyroleans wear Lederhosen, but the most distinctive features of their dress are the green loden jacket and the feathered Tyrolean hat.

HAND A term for the feel of a fabric when touched or rubbed between the fingers.

HAND RUFF A small ruff attached to the wrist 1560s-1630s

HANGING SLEEVES Long, tubular sleeves with a slit at elbow level through which the forearm fits, with the rest of the sleeve hanging down. c.1400-MID-16TH CENTURY: SEE PP.81, 85

HAORI A short, loose Japanese coat with an open front, traditionally worn over a kimono.

HAREM PANTS Loose, baggy pants for women, gathered at the ankles and worn under a tunic; inspired by Eastern dress and the costumes of the Ballets Russes. c 1909 ▷: SFF P.367

HARRIS TWEED A handwoven tweed cloth made in the Western Isles of Scotland, now widely used, mainly for suits.

HAUTE COUTURE The highest form of fashion, particularly from the great fashion houses of Paris; in France the term is protected and regulated by the Chambre Syndicale de la Haute Couture and can only be used by fashion houses who follow strict guidelines; see also Couture.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.326-7

1846 ⊳

HENDIRA Arabic word for a blanketlike shawl traditionally made and worn by Berber women; often striped black, cream, and indigo; called tamizart or taderdouat in Berber.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE P.456

HERRINGBONE A twill weave in which the diagonal twill forms a zigzag pattern.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.310-11

HIJAB Head scarf worn by Muslim women to cover the hair and neck; from the Arabic word for veil; a symbol of Islamic religious belief. 1st CENTURY CED: SEE PP.456, 458

HIMATION A rectangular wool cloak, worn over a chiton, draped over the left shoulder.

ANCIENT GREECE: SEE PP.24-5

HIPPY STYLE A style mixing handmade or recycled clothes, bell-bottoms, ethnic dress, tie-dye, and psychedelic colors.

1960s ▷: SEE PP.374-7

HIPSTERS Pants cut to sit low on the hips; also referred to as "low-rise" in the US.

LATE 1960s ▷

H-LINE A slim, lean shape created by Christian Dior for dresses, with a small bust and slim hips.

1954 ▷: SEE P.319

HOBBLE SKIRT

A long, slim skirt that was very narrow at the ankles, and sometimes included a decorative band around the knees.

1909-15: SEE P.416

HOLLAND A fine linen imported to Britain from Holland; later the term was used for any fine linen. 15тн-18тн CENTURY

HOMBURG A men's hat of stiff felt with a dent running along the center of the crown, a grosgrain ribbon band, and a slightly up-curved brim; see also Trilby.

1870s ▷: SEE PP.288-9, 303, 342-3

HOMESPUN A coarse wool cloth, often made at home or locally; also refers to tweeds made in Ireland or the Western Isles of Scotland.

16TH CENTURY ▷

HOOP PETTICOAT An under-petticoat that incorporated hoops of cane, wire, or whalebone.

EARLY 18TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY: SEE P.141

HOPSACK A wool or cotton fabric woven with every two weft threads crossing two warp threads, making a pattern of tiny squares.

1860s ⊳

HOSE Leg coverings for men, or an older word for stockings for men and women; used for any garment covering male legs and lower torso, separate until the Renaissance, then joined; see also Trunk hose.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.84-5, 90-1

HOUNDSTOOTH A twill weave in which two colors of yarn are used to create a broken checked pattern or a pattern of abstract, four-pointed shapes.

1930s ⊳

HOUPPELANDE A sumptuous outer garment for men or women, thigh length to full length, which is fitted at the shoulders and then flares into folds, and has very wide sleeves.

1380s-MID-15TH CENTURY: SEE PP.66, 72-5

HUIPIL Loose tunic in a rectangular shape, worn by women in southern Mexico and highland Guatemala; based on garments worn by the Maya people, huipils are colorful and elaborately decorated.

PREHISPANIC TIMES ▷: SEE P.438

IKAT An Indonesian term for a technique in which yarn is tie-dyed before weaving, producing a blurred design when woven.

INDIGO A deep violet-blue dye originally obtained from the indigo plant (Indigofera species), but now made synthetically, mainly to dye blue jeans.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE PP.38-9

INTARSIA A term for a knit fabric in which several colors are used, with separate yarns for each colored area, to create an "inlaid" look.

INTERFACING A stiffening material that is placed between the lining and the outer fabric of a garment piece to strengthen it and give structure.

INVERNESS COAT A full, knee-length overcoat for men, with a cape over the shoulders; different versions are made for day and eveningwear.

1859 ▷

INVERTED PLEAT A box pleat that is reversed, causing the fullness of the fabric to go inward; commonly used in straight skirts to allow movement when walking.

SEE P.451

ITALIAN CLOAK A short, hooded cloak for men.

16тн-17тн CENTURY

ITALIAN HEEL On women's shoes, a small heel that tapers sharply toward the base and then flares out slightly, similar to the modern kitten heel.

1770s ▷

IVY LEAGUE Term describing the conservative styles worn by affluent students of the prestigious American "Ivy League" colleges and universities; similar to Preppy style.

1930s ▷

JABOT A lacy or frilled ruffle extending from the neck down the front of a blouse, shirt, or dress.

19_{TH} CENTURY >: SEE PP.154, 208–9

JACKET A short coat for informal or outdoor wear; see also Hacking jacket, Norfolk jacket.

18_{TH} CENTURY ▷

JACQUARD FABRIC A fabric, such as a damask or a brocade, in which a design is woven into the cloth on an automated loom following a pattern punched in holes on a card.

18_{TH} CENTURY ▷

JEANS Sturdy pants made of denim, which were first worn by miners in the US, then made widely popular by cowboys in American movies; now worn universally by men and women.

19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.339, 345, 373

JEBBA Traditional outer robe of Tunisia; rectangular in shape, with deep V-neck, usually edged with embroidery.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE P.454

JEGGINGS Tight, stretchy leggings styled to look like denim jeans (hence the name, a combination of "jeans" and "leggings"), and often made of denim-like fabric.

EARLY 21st CENTURY

JERKIN A close-fitting jacket for men, worn over the doublet, and usually sleeveless, but with "wings" over the armholes.

1450-1630: SEE PP.88, 101, 110

JERSEY (a) A fine, stretchy knit fabric; (b) a knit garment covering the torso and arms; (c) a team shirt worn in sports.

JOCKEY BOOTS Calf-length leather boots like those worn by jockeys, often with a band of lighter-colored leather at the top.

JODHPUR BOOTS Ankle boots for riding, made of sturdy leather and often with elastic sides; these gave rise to Chelsea boots.

19™H CENTURY ▷

JODHPURS Pants of Indian origin worn for riding horses; pre-1960s, usually made from cotton twill with voluminous thighs for ease of movement; now made of stretch cotton, with fabric or leather patches on the inner knees.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.236, 280

JULIET CAP A lace or mesh cap worn by brides, named for the cap worn by the heroine in William Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

JUMPER (a) A tunic with a square yoke and skirt with box pleats, derived from girls' school uniform; (b) UK term for sweater.

EARLY 20TH CENTURY ▷

JUSTAUCORPS A man's knee-length coat, close-fitting on the body but with flared skirts, and with large turned-back cuffs.

MID-17tH-EARLY 18th CENTURY: SEE PP.130-1

K

KABOTEC Blouse with short puffed sleeves and a narrow collar; once worn by the highland Silesian women of Poland as everyday dress, but now as folk costume.

18_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE P.450

KAFTAN Traditionally this was a long robe worn in the Middle East and central Asia; from the 1950s it denoted a long, loose tunic with a slit neckline and decoration around the neck and cuffs.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE PP.112-3

KALASIRIS A long, slim-fitting linen dress, covering the shoulders or with shoulder straps, worn by women.

2700BCE ▷: SEE PP.16-17

KERSEY A coarse wool cloth widely used for making clothing in medieval times.

MEDIEVAL-19TH CENTURY

KICK PLEAT An inverted pleat (with the folds pointing inward) in the lower back seam of a tightly fitted skirt, to allow ease in walking.

SEE PP.275, 331, 396

KID LEATHER Fine leather made from the skin of young goats or lambs, used for gloves and shoes.

17TH CENTURY ▷

KILT A knee-length plaid skirt, pleated with a flat front and traditionally worn by Scotsmen; now also a style worn by women.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.390, 442

KIMONO A Japanese garment for women or men made from cotton or silk, full-length and with very wide sleeves, worn crossed over at the front and fastened with an obi. 10TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.213, 459

KIMONO SLEEVE Wide sleeve like the sleeve on a kimono, cut as part of the bodice, with a deep armscye.

LATE 19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.48–9.458

KIRTLE In medieval times, a long supportive garment for women, worn over a smock but under a gown.

10TH CENTURY—C.1650: SEE PP.62—3, 75

KITTEN HEEL On women's shoes, a low heel that tapers sharply inward at the back, with a very narrow base. 1959 ▷

KNICKERBOCKERS Loose-fitting breeches, gathered just below the knee, mainly worn by men for golf and country pursuits.

1860 ▷: SEE PP.217, 226-7, 283

KNIFE PLEATS A series of pleats facing in one direction around a garment, as on a kilt. SEE PP.230, 452

KNITTING A method of making fabric by interconnecting loops of yarn to form a weblike material.

KURTA PAJAMA An outfit, usually of cotton or silk, worn by Indian men; it comprises a kurta (a loose, knee-length shirt with slits up the sides) and pajama (lightweight pants).

SEE P.462

LACE (a) A delicate ornamental fabric with a weblike pattern; (b) a cord used to tie garments or shoes, often with aglets at each end. MEDIEVAL >: SEE PP.98–9, 120–2

LAMCHU Indigo-dyed or black collarless jacket, with colorful embroidery around the neckline, front edges, and sleeve hems; worn by the Dao hill tribe of southeast Asia.

SEE P.460

LAMÉ A fabric woven with threads of gold- or silver-colored metal.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.274–5, 291

LAPELS Continuation of the turned-back collar on the front of a coat or jacket.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.153, 263, 301

LAPPETS Pieces of fabric that hang from an indoor headdress, at the sides or the back.

18TH-19TH CENTURY:
SEE PP.86, 132, 191

LATCHET Leather strip used to close shoes, from the Old French word "lacet," to lace; a latchet shoe has a single lacing; often with open sides.

13TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.104, 142

LAWN A fine, semitransparent cloth of linen or cotton.

14TH CENTURY ▷

LEDERHOSEN Traditional leather shorts with suspenders, worn by men in the high-altitude Alpine areas of Germany and Austria; see also Bundhosen and Dirndl.

SEE P.446

LEGHORN HAT A women's hat with a wide, soft brim, made from Italian Leghorn wheat straw.

EARLY 18TH CENTURY ▷

LEG-OF-MUTTON SLEEVE See Gigot sleeve.

LEI Garland of fresh flowers worn as decoration in Hawaii and originating in Polynesia; also made from other materials such as bone, shell, and feathers.

LEOTARD A stretchy, close-fitting body covering worn by dancers and gymnasts, but also adopted for fashion; see also Beatnik style, Body stocking.

1880s ▷: SEE PP.217, 388

LE SMOKING A dinner jacket or tuxedo suit for women, first created by Yves Saint Laurent; see also Androgynous style.

LATE 1960s >: SEE PP.372-3, 381

LEVI'S® 501 Jeans created by the Levi Strauss Co. in 1873 and popularized by US cowboys; in the 1960s they became an icon of rebellious youth; very fashionable in the 1980s, they are widely worn as casual wear.

1873 ▷: SEE P.373

designs on Indian silk, created by Liberty of London, with floral or paisley patterns; now often used on cotton; see also Aesthetic dress.

LINEN A strong, fine fiber made from the stems of the flax plant (Linum usitatissimum); one of the oldest woven fabrics in the world.

1875 ⊳: SEE P.237

LINGERIE French for linen, used to refer to women's underwear, often made from light, silky materials and trimmed with frills or lace. c.1830s >: SEE PP.228, 252, 277, 316, 432–3

LINING A thin layer of fabric added to the inside of a garment to cover raw edges and improve comfort.

LIST The selvedge of a fabric; "list slippers" were slippers made from strips of selvedge.

18тн-19тн CENTURY

LIVERY Distinctive colors, insignia, or symbols attached to clothes, denoting a person of rank and his or her soldiers or followers; used to identify servants of an aristocratic household.

14TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.84, 117

LOAFERS Slip-on leather shoes like moccasins, often with decorative leather strips or tassels on the vamp. 1930s ▷: SEE PP.407, 421

LODEN A thick, napped wool fabric made in Austria and Germany, used for coats and jackets and typically dyed forest green; also a classic coat made from this fabric, with a long pleat at the back.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.227, 446

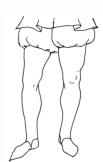

LONG POCKET A vertical pocket on a coat or overcoat. Called a slash pocket in the US.

18тн-19тн CENTURY: SEE P.453

LONG STOCKING

The stocking part of trunk-hose, joined to the upper part halfway up the thigh.

16TH-EARLY
17TH CENTURY

LOON (OR ELEPHANT-LEG) PANTS

Flared pants similar to bell-bottoms but with a much wider flare from the knees down.

LATE 1960s-EARLY 1970s

LOUIS HEEL See French heel.

LOUNGE SUIT The most common form of suit for men, comprising a jacket and pants (and sometimes a vest), and used for day or business wear.

c.1860 >: SEE PP.224, 288

LUREX® A brand name for a type of synthetic fiber yarn coated with aluminum, or a metallic fabric made with this yarn.

1940s ⊳

LYCRA® A brand name for a synthetic fiber with high elasticity, added to fabrics for use in garments such as underwear and swimwear; see also Spandex.

1958 ▷: SEE PP.382, 388

M

MACKINTOSH Rubberized cotton invented by Charles Mackintosh and used to make coats; now describes any waterproof coat.

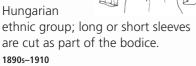

1836 ▷: SEE P.356

MADE-TO-MEASURE A term for a garment made from a base pattern but adapted for an individual wearer; see also Bespoke, Couture, Haute couture, Ready-to-wear.

MADRAS Patterned cotton or silk fabric originally from Madras (now Chennai) in India; sometimes treated to give a lustrous surface. MAGENTA The second aniline dye to be invented, after mauve; a pinkish crimson color; see also Mauve, Solferino.

1860 ⊳

MAGYAR BLOUSE
A style based on the traditional dress of a

MANDARIN COLLAR A short, unfolded stand-up collar, open at the front, for shirts or jackets. 20th CENTURY >: SEE P.439

MANDARIN JACKET A Chinese men's jacket of plain fabric or brocade, with a mandarin collar, three-quarter length sleeves, and frogging, now also popular in the West.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.447

MANNEQUIN A life-size dummy for displaying clothes; also a word formerly used for a human model, particularly in French fashion houses. MID-18TH CENTURY ▷

MANTILLA A large, lightweight veil or scarf, often of black lace, covering the head and shoulders, and typically worn by Catholic women in Spain and Latin American countries.

18™ CENTURY ▷

MANTLE A full-length garment similar to a cloak, but without a hood.

12TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.46-9, 74-5

MANTUA A women's gown, originally with an unboned bodice and an overskirt drawn back to show the petticoat, later becoming more structured, worn over wide panniers; see also Robe à l'anglaise.

MID-17TH-MID-18TH CENTURY: SEE PP.138-43

MAO SUIT A suit comprising a mandarin jacket and loose-fitting pants, made in somber colors, and formerly worn by Chinese people.

MID-20TH CENTURY

MARABOU Down from the Marabou stork (Leptoptilos crumeniferus), used for trimming women's garments and making feather boas.

MARY JANES Flat-heeled, round-toed shoes with a strap and buckle, first made for young girls but now adapted for adults.
EARLY 2011 CENTURY >: SEE P.356

MAUVE The color of mauveine, an aniline dye; on fabrics, it could make a range from bright purple to the typical faded lilac shade.

1850s ⊳

MAXI SKIRT A full-length skirt, in contrast to the miniskirt. SEE PP.359, 380

M-CUT COLLAR First seen on men's coats of the Regency period, a collar in which notches are cut at the ends just above the lapels. c.1800–1870

MEDICI COLLAR An embroidered or lace collar on women's garments, standing up behind the head but tapering away toward the throat.

18TH-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

MEDLEY A cloth in which different colors are used for the warp and the weft, or mixed in the yarn.

MEDIEVAL ▷

MERINO Fine cloth made from the wool of the Merino sheep, used in suits and sportswear.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

MICROMINI A very short miniskirt, reaching to the top of the thighs. 1960s ▷: SEE PP.356-7, 361

MIDI SKIRT A calf-length skirt, in contrast to the mini- and maxi skirt.

1960s ▷: SEE PP.359

MILLINER A maker and seller of high-quality or high-fashion hats; also sold notions in the 18th century.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷

MINISKIRT A term for a thigh-length skirt or dress, made popular by British designer Mary Quant.

MID-1960s ▷: SEE PP.352-3, 356-7

MINK Dense, glossy fur from the mink, a relative of the weasel.

MITER Stiffened cap of two parts that form a peak at the top; first worn by the pope, cardinals, and bishops of the Church in Rome; in white silk or linen.

c.10TH CENTURY ▷

MOCCASINS Soft leather shoes based on Native Americans' shoes, in which the lower part is wrapped around the foot and sewn to a flat top part; see also Loafers. 20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.437

t

MOD STYLE A British youth style, featuring a clean, sharp appearance, and items such as parkas and winklepickers for men and shift dresses for women.

LATE 1950s-MID-1960s: SEE PP.405-6

MODEL A person employed to wear clothes for display at fashion shows or in photo shoots.

MID-20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.355, 409

MOHAIR Fabric made from the hair of the Angora goat, now used for coats and lounge suits, or in a fluffier form for sweaters.

17TH CENTURY ▷

MOIRÉ FINISH A wavy pattern seen on watered fabrics, made by heating or wetting the fabric and running it through heavy, ribbed rollers.

MOLESKIN A tightly woven cotton fabric with a short, soft pile, often used for men's pants.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

MOON BOOTS Thick-soled boots with a padded synthetic upper, first made as après-ski wear, and inspired by the boots worn by astronauts.

1970s ▷

Woman in Carnival costume, Venice The costumes at Venice Carnival are based on a stock of traditional masks. The most common is the volto mask, a simple white mask that covers the whole face.

Woman in traditional Slovenian dress In Slovenia unmarried women wear the triangular zavijacka head scarf, while married women wear an elaborately embroidered headdress called an avba.

Woman from Upper Silesia, Poland Folk costumes in Poland, which are based on 18th- and 19th-century fashions, are intricately embroidered, and worn with silver jewelry, beads, and ribbons.

Ukrainian girl in traditional dress This girl wears a richly embroidered costume, or vyshyvanka, and a floral wreath called a vinok. The wreath is worn by unmarried women.

MORNING COAT A men's tailcoat derived from the Newmarket coat, now worn for formal occasions. 1870s >: SEE PP.210. 224-5

MOROCCO LEATHER A leather first made in Moorish areas from finest kid hide and traditionally dyed red. 17TH CENTURY ▷

MOTLEY A term for a garment or fabric made with a mixture of colors. 14TH-17TH CENTURY

MUFF A tubular padded covering of fur or fabric, into which both hands are inserted for warmth.

c.1550 >: SEE PP.124-5, 192, 231

MULES Backless slip-on shoes with a closed toe, low- or high-heeled, now mainly worn by women. 16TH CENTURY ▷

MUSLIN A finely woven, medium to light cotton cloth; in the US, another name for a toile; known as Calico in the UK.

16TH CENTURY ▷

NANKEEN A sturdy cotton fabric with a natural yellow or buff color, originally made in China.

18TH CENTURY

cloth surface, as in flannel, suede, or velvet; see also Pile.

NAPA LEATHER A fine, supple leather used for gloves and jackets. c.1895 ▷

NATIONAL STANDARD DRESS A simple, standardized, calf-length dress for women, devised by the British government during World War I but never widely accepted.

NÉGLIGÉE A light or sheer dressing gown for women.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.252

NEHRU JACKET A simple, hip-length jacket with a high, round collar, modeled on the jackets worn by Indian leader Jawaharlal Nehru; worn by The Beatles.

1960s ▷: SEE P.448

NEOCLASSICAL DRESS A style of women's dress that arose in reaction to the previous ornate formal styles, featuring simple, slim-fitting dresses inspired by Ancient Greek clothing. LATE 18TH-EARLY 19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.168-9

NETWORK A form of lace in which a pattern is worked on to a ground of fine mesh.

16тн-17тн CENTURY

NEW LOOK The term used for the styles presented by Christian Dior in his first collections in 1947, featuring full, billowing skirts and small waists. 1947: SEE PP.316-9

NEWMARKET COAT A tailcoat originally designed for riding, either single-breasted or double-breasted, with the front sloping away from above waist level.

1830s-c.1900

NEW ROMANTIC STYLE A youth style that was a reaction to punk style, with frilled shirts, garments inspired by 18th-century dress, and makeup for both sexes.

LATE 1970s-MID-1980s: SEE P.407

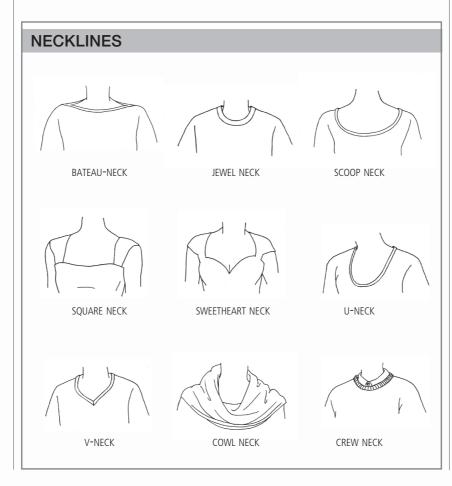

NEWSBOY CAP Wide cap with a deep brim and peak, like the caps traditionally worn by tradesmen; in the 1960s, worn by men and women. 1960s ▷: SEE PP.382, 428

NORFOLK JACKET A man's jacket for country pursuits, often made of Harris tweed or homespun, with a belt, bellows pockets, and inverted box pleats at the front and back.

1880 ▷: SEE PP.217, 448

NOTCH A triangular mark on a garment pattern showing where the edge of one piece matches up with the edge of another.

NAP A term for raised fibers on a NOTIONS US dressmaking term for items needed to complete a garment, such as zippers, buttons, and thread; see also Haberdashery.

NYLON A trade name for a range of synthetic fibers used to make a wide variety of garments, notably stockings and tights.

1935 ▷

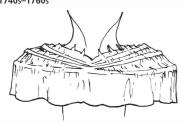

NYLON TAFFETA A stiff, paperlike form of nylon, notably used to make the layers of petticoats under 1950s skirts; known as Paper Nylon in UK.

1950s ⊳

OBI A long sash worn around the waist, over a kimono, as part of traditional Japanese dress; women wear a wide obi, which can be tied in a variety of decorative knots. SEE P.459

OBLONG HOOPS Whalebone or willow structures that evolved from panniers, forming a wide, flat shape to support the robe à la française. 1740s–1760s

OFF-THE-PEG A UK term for a garment of a standard shape and size that is not customized for the wearer; see Ready-to-wear.

OPEN GOWN A style of women's dress in which the overskirt is open at the front to reveal a decorative underskirt or petticoat; see also Mantua.

18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.87, 142–3

OPERA HAT A man's formal hat that could be compressed and easily carried under the arm; one form, the gibus hat, is still used today.

19TH CENTURY ▷

ORGANDIE A fine cotton or nylon gauze with a crisp finish.

19_{TH} CENTURY ⊳

ORGANZA A light, crisp, sheer fabric of silk, polyester, or rayon. EARLY 19TH CENTURY ▷

ORIENTALISM The adoption of Middle Eastern and Far Eastern dress styles, or interpretations of these styles, in European or American fashion.

17TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.188–91, 212–3, 244–5, 267

ORPHREY A form of embroidery using gold thread.

13TH CENTURY ▷

OXFORD BAGS Very wide, baggy pants for men, often associated with students at Oxford University, UK; revived for both sexes in the 1970s.

1920s AND 1970s

OXFORD SHIRTING A plain weave cotton with narrow, colored stripes.
19th CENTURY

PADDOCK COAT A knee-length, single-breasted or double-breasted overcoat for men, with two inverted box pleats at the rear.

1892 ▷

PAGODA SLEEVES Elbow-length, bell-shaped sleeves on dresses, with engageantes worn under them. 1849–1860s: SEE PP.196–7

PAISLEY PATTERN A distinctive teardrop-shaped motif adapted from Indian buteh patterns, named for the Scottish town that wove imitation Kashmiri shawls.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.366, 377

PALAZZO PANTS Loose, wide-legged pants for women, often in a light, soft fabric.

1960s ▷: SEE P.451

PALETOT (a) A three-quarter-length pleated cloak with a stiff cape, for women, or a close-fitting, kneelength outdoor coat; (b) a short greatcoat, worn by men.

19TH CENTURY: SEE P.216

PALLA A rectangular wrap draped around the body, worn by women. ANCIENT ROME

PANAMA HAT A man's summer hat woven from fibers of the Central American toquilla palm, and flexible enough to be rolled up for carrying.

1830s ⊳

PANES A decoration on sleeves or men's trunk-hose, made by slashing the fabric so that the lining or undergarments showed through.

1500–c.1660: SEE PP.88–93

PANNE VELVET Soft velvet with the pile pressed flat in one direction to give a highly lustrous surface.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷

PANNIERS Also known as side hoops, these were pads or frames attached to the hips to hold the skirt out at the sides; they evolved into large oblong hoops.

EARLY 18th CENTURY: SEE PP.146, 149

PANTOFLES Slip-on overshoes for outdoor wear, or slippers for indoors. LATE 15TH-MID-17TH CENTURY: SEE P.84

PANTSUIT A suit of jacket and pants designed for women but with masculine tailoring; see also Androgynous style, Le smoking.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.359, 396–7

PAREO A traditional Tahitian wrap for women, originally made from bark cloth and tied around the waist; modern pareos are made of cotton and are popular as beachwear.

PARKA A coat worn by the Arctic peoples of North America; today a warm, protective, waterproof garment often made of synthetic material, with a fur-lined hood; see also Anorak, Mod style.

1960s ▷: SEE P.346

PARTLET Yoke piece with collar worn in Northern Europe over a low-cut gown to cover the décolletage; tied under the arms or pinned to clothes.

16TH-17TH CENTURY: SEE PP.86-7, 106

PARTI-COLORED A term for a garment made with the left and right sides in different-colored fabrics; also called mi-parti.

14TH-15TH CENTURY: SEE PP.62-3

PARURE A set of matching jewelry, such as earrings, necklace, and bracelet.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.175

PASHMINA (a) A fine, lightweight cashmere fabric made from pashm (a Persian word for the softest belly hair on goats), or a blend of pashm and silk, and usually woven in South Asia; (b) a shawl made from pashmina or from synthetic fiber with a similar texture.

PASSEMENTERIE Ornamental braids and other trimmings made with silk, gold or silver threads, and tassels.

16TH-19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.90-1

PATCH POCKET A pocket formed from a piece of fabric sewn on to the surface of a garment.

19™ CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.226, 335, 380, 453

PATCHWORK Cloth made from small pieces of fabric sewn together, often with a mixture of colors and patterns; popular in hippy style. SEE P.381

PATENT LEATHER Leather coated with lacquer to give a high-gloss finish; used for men's formal shoes and women's shoes and handbags.

18TH CENTURY >: SEE P.367

PATTENS Wood-soled overshoes, sometimes with an iron ring underneath, for outdoor wear.

14TH-MID-19TH CENTURY: SEE P.85

PEACOAT A heavy, double-breasted wool jacket formerly worn by sailors in the US and European navies, and now a classic style for men; see also Reefer.

1830s ▷: SEE P.447

PEASCOD BELLY Doublet with extra padding at the waist to give the effect of a protruding stomach, or peapod ("peascod"); Dutch style.

LATE 16TH CENTURY: SEE PP.100, 105

PEIGNOIR A long, sheer outer garment for women, worn around the house like a dressing gown. LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷

PELISSE A three-quarter-length fitted coat for women, often with a shoulder cape and fur, silk, or satin trim; also a women's cloak or mantle.

18тн-19тн CENTURY: SEE PP.171, 175-7

PENCIL SKIRT A narrow, close-fitting, knee-length skirt, often with a slit at the back for ease of movement.

1940s ▷: SEE PP.332, 396–7, 457

PEPLOS A woman's garment made from a rectangle or tube of fabric folded around the body, with an overhang above the waist, and held in place by brooches and a belt. c.500–300BCE: SEE P.25

PEPLUM In women's garments, a short, gathered overskirt sewn into the waistband of a jacket, skirt, or shirt, forming a flounce over the hips.

1940s ▷: SEE PP.203, 273, 397

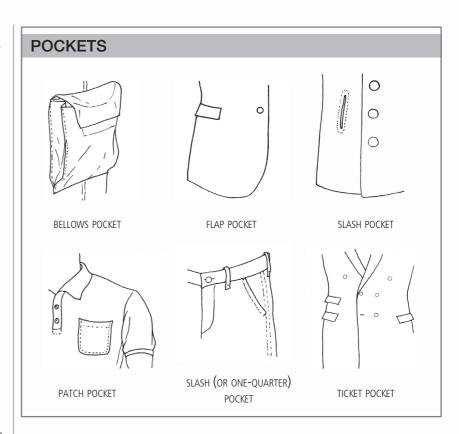

PETER PAN COLLAR A soft, turned-down collar with rounded ends, usually seen on women's and children's clothing. c.1909 ▷: SEE P.439

PETERSHAM CLOTH A heavy wool cloth, often dyed navy blue and formerly used for peacoats.

MID-19_{TH} CENTURY \triangleright

PETERSHAM RIBBON Heavyweight ribbon with thick ribbing, used as a trim for hats and garments. See also grograin.

c.1840 ▷

PETTICOAT For men, a warm garment worn under a doublet; for women, an underskirt, sometimes reinforced with a frame to hold the skirt (see Hoop petticoat), and later an undergarment.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.144-5, 344

PHRYGIAN CAP A soft, coneshaped hat with the tip bending forward;

worn by men

in medieval times, and adopted by the "sans-culottes" in the French Revolution.

9тн-12тн CENTURY: 1790

PICKADIL Originally a tabbed or scalloped border on a doublet; later a support for a ruff or starched collar. 16TH CENTURY: SEE PP.118–9

PICOT A series of loops of twisted thread, forming an ornamental edging to lace, ribbon, or braid.

17TH CENTURY ▷

PICTURE HAT A wide-brimmed, brightly colored summer hat for women, often trimmed with ribbons and artificial flowers.

1890s ▷: SEE PP.428–9

PIKED SHOES Shoes with long, narrow points at the toes; see also Poulaine.

14TH-15TH CENTURY

PILE A form of nap made by adding an extra yarn to a fabric to give a raised surface; fabrics with a pile include velvet, corduroy, and bouclé.

PILLBOX HAT A woman's hat with straight sides, a flat crown, and no brim, made famous by US First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy.

1950s ▷: SEE PP.428-9

PILOT CLOTH A heavy, twilled cloth with a nap, used for men's overcoats; traditionally dyed blue and used by the navy.

19TH CENTURY >

PINAFORE DRESS A practical dress with a bib front or sleeveless bodice, worn over a blouse or thin sweater; often worn by young girls.

20_{TH} CENTURY ⊳

PINKING (a) Also called pouncing, making a pattern of tiny holes or slits in a fabric; (b) trimming an unhemmed fabric edge by cutting it into a zigzag line with pinking shears.

PINSONS Light indoor shoes, often adorned with fur.

14™-LATE 16™ CENTURY ▷

PINTUCKS Tiny pleats that are sewn along their edges to secure them. SEE P.392

PIPING A strip of fabric-covered cord inserted into a seam as decorative edging or to accentuate the shapes of a garment.

SEE PP.181, 332, 388

PIQUÉ A cotton fabric with a raised, woven design, often a diamond or honeycomb pattern.

19TH CENTURY ▷

PLACKET A short opening at the top of a woman's skirt or pants, so that the garment can be pulled on easily.

16TH CENTURY ▷

PLAID A wool twill cloth, usually woven with a tartan or checked pattern, traditionally worn as part of Scottish Highlanders' dress; see also Arisaid, Kilt. SEE P.412

PLASTRON Stiff panel in the center of a surcoat or panel worn underneath a gown bodice; popular in the French court of the 14th century.

14тн-15тн CENTURY: SEE PP.64, 81

PLATFORM SHOES Shoes with a high heel and a very thick, built-up sole, especially popular in the glam rock and disco styles of the 1970s.

1940s ▷: SEE PP.372, 376, 426-7

PLEAT A fold that is created by doubling fabric back on itself and securing one or both edges; may be pressed or unpressed, and may be used singly or as a series of parallel folds.

PLUS FOURS Knickerbockers with a puffed overhang ("plus four inches") at the knees; notably worn by golfers and popularized by British king Edward VIII.

1920s ▷: SEE PP.284-5

POKE BONNET A bonnet with a fabric-lined front brim that projects over the face; tied on with ribbons.

19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.192-3

POINTS Laces used to tie garments to one another: for example, attaching trunk-hose to doublets, or sleeves to doublets or bodices.

POLLERA Full, gathered skirt, often ruffled or tiered; worn in several Latin American countries, including Panama and Bolivia; derived from 17th-century court dress.

MID-19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.441

POLO COAT A knee-length camel hair overcoat for men, often double-breasted, with patch pockets.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

POLONAISE A style of women's dress with an overskirt that is hitched up with looped tapes or drawstrings, revealing the underskirt.

1770s-1870s: SEE PP.144-9

POLONY HEEL A high, stacked heel thought to have been made from pieces of leather.

17TH CENTURY

POLYESTER A synthetic fiber used to make crease-resistant, quick-drying, easy-care fabrics.

1940s ⊳

POMPADOUR HEEL See French heel.

POM-POM A small ball of fabric, feathers, or tufts used as decoration for clothing, hats, or shoes.

MID-18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.204

PONCHO A wool cape first worn by South American gauchos and Andean peoples, made from a diamond or rectangle of fabric with a central hole for the head; popular in 1970s Western fashion.

POPLIN A strong fabric with fine crosswise ribs, originally with a silk warp and wool or worsted weft, but now made from a variety of fibers; watered poplin is called tabbinet.

LATE 17TH CENTURY ▷

PORKPIE HAT A man's hat with a narrow, turned-up brim and a low, flat crown with an indentation around the edge.

1860s ⊳

POULAINE A medieval shoe worn by men and women, with a very long, pointed toe.

13TH-15TH CENTURY: SEE P.65

POURPOINT A buttoned or laced, fitted, and waisted man's jacket worn in medieval Europe; hose could be tied to it; also called a doublet or gipon.

MEDIEVAL: SEE P.64

POWER DRESSING Business wear for women that combined masculine elements, such as padded shoulders, with feminine elements, such as short skirts, high heels, and bowed neckline blouses.

1980s: SEE PP.396-9

PREPPY STYLE A classic style associated with wealthy American students, consisting of chinos, blazers, and loafers for men, and Fair Isle sweaters and pleated skirts for women.

MID-20™H CENTURY ▷

PRÊT-À-PORTER The French term for ready-to-wear.

PRINCE OF WALES CHECK A wool fabric with a twill weave and a pattern of small and large checks; popularized by Edward VIII when Prince of Wales.

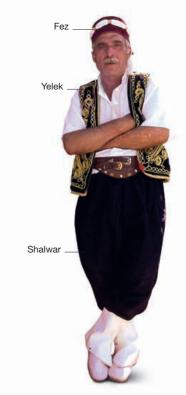

1930s ▷: SEE PP.286, 381

PRINCESS-SEAMED DRESS A dress made with the bodice and skirt panels cut as one piece and gores in the skirt; the bodice is lightly fitted, and the skirt flares out; it has no waist seam but has darts at the waist to give shape.

1840s ▷: SEE P.326

Presidential Guard, Athens, Greece Traditional tsarouhia shoes have been part of Greek military dress since the Ottoman Occupation in 1821. The red color symbolizes the blood of fallen soldiers.

Turkish man in traditional dressThe Moroccan fez spread throughout the Ottoman Empire when it was adopted as military dress in the 19th century. It remains popular for Turkish men today.

Sami man in traditional dress, Finland This Sami man wears a wool hat and a tunic called a luhkka. The pattern on these garments indicates his origin or clan. His coat is made of reindeer hide.

Tunisian man in traditional dress Though many Tunisians wear European clothes for daily wear, the traditional jebba is still worn by the older generation and for ceremonial events.

PSYCHEDELIC A term for bright colors and wild, swirling patterns, inspired by psychedelic rock and culture; clothing with these patterns was a feature of hippy style; see also Patchwork, Tie-dye.

LATE 1960s-EARLY 1970s: SEE PP.374-5

PUFFS A decorative effect created by pulling pieces of fabric from an underlying garment through slashes or panes in an overgarment. 1500-1650s: SEE PP.86, 90-1

PUFFED SLEEVES Very short sleeves that are gathered at the armscye so they puff out over the shoulders, and gathered in at the lower edge. EARLY 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.90-1, 120-1, 174

PULLED-THREAD WORK A style of embroidery in which threads in a fabric are pulled together tightly to leave a pattern of small gaps; see also Drawn-thread work.

PUMPS Women's shoes with a low vamp and a medium-high heel; known in the UK as Court shoes. 20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.273, 396, 426–7.

PUNK STYLE A youth fashion style designed specifically to challenge social norms and existing fashions, with features such as spiked hair, ripped clothes with safety pins, slim-fitting pants, and Dr. (Doc) Martens boots.

1970s-80s: SEE PP.390, 404

PUPPYTOOTH A small houndstooth checked pattern. 1950s ⊳

PURFLE A decorative trim or edging for a garment. 15тн-18тн CENTURY

PVC Polyvinyl chloride, a coating used on fabrics to give a high-gloss, waterproof finish.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.360-1

QUAIL-PIPE BOOTS Men's hightopped boots of soft leather that sagged into folds down the legs. LATE 14TH-EARLY 17TH CENTURY

QUEUE (a) The tail of hair hanging from the back of some styles of wig; (b) a hairstyle typically worn by Manchurian or Native American men, consisting of a shaved head at the front, with a long, gathered ponytail at the back.

LATE 17TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.152

QUILTING A technique used to combine two layers of fabric with padding between, by using lines of stitching, often making a pattern. SEE P.377

RAGLAN SLEEVE A sleeve that runs from the underarm to the neckline, covering the entire shoulder. 1850s >: SEE PP.337, 399, 448

RANELAGH MOB A headdress of gauze or lace, folded diagonally and worn with the ends crossed under the chin and tied behind. 1760s

RA-RA SKIRT A short, frilled skirt. Briefly popular in the 1980s. 1960s ▷: SEE P.457

RASTA STYLE Originating in Jamaica, a style featuring dreadlocks in the hair, large wool caps, and the Rastafari colors of red, gold, and green; made world famous by the singer Bob Marley. 1930s ▷: SEE P.407

RATIONAL DRESS An early attempt to devise a practical dress style for women, including bloomers (divided skirts) for cycling and sports; despite its virtues, only a minority of women adopted the style.

1881-1900: SEE PP.236-7

RAYON An "artificial silk" made from cellulose (fibrous material from plants) and used to make stockings and other garments.

1910 ⊳

READY-TO-WEAR Clothing sold in standard sizes and shapes that can be worn off-the-peg, in contrast to made-to-measure or bespoke items. SEE PP.308-9, 334-5

REBATO A wired or starched collar. often of lace, that stood up around the neck of a woman's dress; also the wire support for a collar or ruff. c.1580-1635

REDINGOTE Originally a traveling coat for men or women; later a long, close-fitting overcoat or dress worn by women, primarily for riding horses. c.1790-EARLY 20TH CENTURY: SEE P.179

REEFER JACKET A hip-length, double-breasted jacket with a low collar and short lapels, two lines of buttons, and short side vents, formerly worn in the British Royal Navy, but now a classic coat for men; see also Peacoat. 1860 ▷: SEE P.289

REP A cloth with distinct horizontal ribs, such as poplin.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

RETRO A term for a fashion inspired by the style of a few decades earlier. LATE 20TH CENTURY

REVERS Originally a facing or edging on a garment; later a turned-back edge showing the reverse side, in particular a lapel.

14TH CENTURY ▷

RHINESTONE An imitation diamond made of glass or paste, often used in costume jewelry and diamanté. LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

RIBBING In knitting, a pattern in which vertical stripes are created by alternating plain and purl stitches; often used for socks and sweaters.

ROBE (a) For men, a formal garment in medieval times, and later a dressing gown; (b) for women, a garment with an overdress that was open in front to show an underskirt. MEDIEVAL—19TH CENTURY

ROBE À L'ANGLAISE A robe with a fitted bodice and an overskirt that was open at the front; the skirt was supported by panniers, and the box pleats were stitched down to the small of the back; see also Mantua.

18TH CENTURY: SEE PP.138—43

ROBE À LA FRANÇAISE An elaborate, sumptuous dress worn in royal courts, comprising a tight-fitting bodice and ruffled sleeves, box pleats running down the back, and a wide skirt supported by oblong hoops.

1715-75: SEE PP.144-7

ROBE DE STYLE A style of women's dress with a loosely fitted bodice, slightly dropped waist, and full skirt with panniers, associated with French designer Jeanne Lanvin.

1920s: SEE PP.246–7

ROCKER STYLE A youth style based on biker outfits, featuring leather jackets, often embellished with studs and badges, and scruffy jeans; a contrast to mod style.

1950s ▷: SEE PP.344–5, 405

ROLL COLLAR A collar on a jacket or vest that folds over with no sharp crease, and has no notch between it and the lapel.

1840 ▷: SEE P.368

ROLLED HEM A very narrow hem made by folding a fabric edge two or three times and then sewing through the folded cloth; used on delicate items such as underwear and scarves.

ROMANTIC DRESS A style that arose in contrast to Neoclassical dress, with a more curved shape for women, greater use of lace and frills, and inspiration from medieval and Renaissance styles; see also Medici collar.

EARLY 19TH CENTURY: SEE PP.190-1

ROULEAUX Narrow strips of fabric, often cut on the bias, first used as trimming on dress hems, now used for features such as spaghetti straps on dresses and underwear.

19_{TH} CENTURY ⊳

ROULEAU LOOP Fabric loop that goes over a round, ball-shaped button, serving as a closure.

SEE P.436

ROUND DRESS/GOWN A term for a dress with a skirt that was closed at the front rather than open, showing the underskirt.

LATE 18TH-MID-19TH CENTURY

ROUND-EARED CAP
A soft, linen cap,
with a border of ruffles or pleats, that curved around the face to the level of the ears and was tied on with strings.

1730s-1760s

RUBEKA Length of cotton cloth, usually red and often plaid, worn by the Maasai in East Africa; wrapped around the body like a cloak; also called shúkà.

SEE P.458

RUBENS HAT A woman's hat with a high crown and a wide brim turned up on one side; named for Flemish painter Peter Paul Rubens.

1870s–1880s

RUCHING A sewing technique in which strips of fabric are gathered and then attached to a garment as decoration.

RUFF A detachable pleated collar in linen and/or lace starched into shape and sometimes supported underneath; see also Pickadil.

1560s-1640s: SEE PP.98, 118-21

RUFFLES Frills or flounces, often used on collars, cuffs, and shirt fronts.

MID-16TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.132–3, 140–1

RUNNING STITCH The most simple in-and-out stitch, often done in a straight line.

RUSSIAN HAT A soft fur or astrakhan hat with a medium-high crown and no brim; also called a Cossack hat or a Zhivago hat (after the hats worn by characters in the film Dr. Zhivago).

S

SABOT SLEEVE A sleeve with one or two puffs above the elbow.

9TH CENTURY: SEE PP.140–1

SACK Originally a loose, informal gown for women; later a dress with a more fitted body, a skirt open at the front to show the underskirt, and long box pleats running down the back; see also Robe à la française.

1711–1871 CENTURY

SACK BACK A term for a dress with full-length box pleats running from the shoulders down the back; see also Robe à la française.

SACK DRESS A loose-fitting knee-length dress, hanging straight from the shoulder, created by Spanish designer Cristóbal Balenciaga.

1960 ▷: SEE P.329

SAFARI JACKET A sturdy cotton jacket worn by Europeans in tropical countries, with a belt, bellows pockets, and epaulettes.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.448

SAMPOT Uncut rectangular cloth wrapped around the hips, sarong-style; worn by ethnic Khmer men and women in Cambodia.

c.1st CENTURY CED: SEE P.460

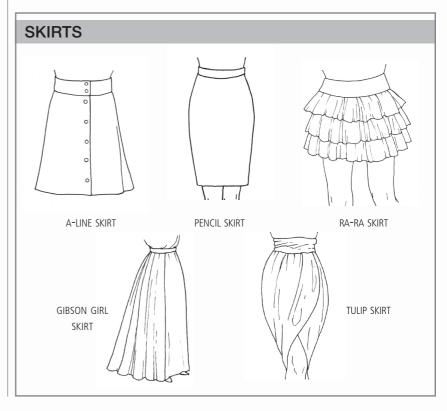

SANDAL Shoe comprising a sole fastened to the foot by straps, used around the world since earliest history, especially in hot climates; today sandals can be flat or heeled.

ANTIQUITY ▷

SARI A long length of patterned silk, cotton, or light synthetic fabric worn by Indian women, pleated around the waist, with the end draped over one shoulder, and a choli underneath.

SEE PP.299, 462

SARONG A traditional Indonesian garment comprising a length of patterned fabric worn around the waist and legs by both women and men; now also popular outside Asia for casual and beachwear.

Berber woman, Morocco

Hendira are traditionally worn by the Berbers as cloaks but are now popular with people in Morocco as rugs or blankets. They are sold widely by carpet dealers.

Tuareg dancer, Morocco

The nomadic Tuareg of North Africa are known as the "blue people" for their indigo clothing, as worn by this woman performing a guedra blessing dance.

SASH A wide band or scarf of ribbon or other soft fabric, worn around the waist or over the shoulder.

16TH CENTURY ▷

SATEEN Cotton fabric woven with a lustrous surface in weft-faced satin weave.

SATIN A fabric with a satin weave, in which warp threads are floated across several weft threads at a time (or vice versa); satin has a lustrous surface and a dull underside. SEE P.463

SATIN STITCH

In embroidery, a series of stitches side by side across a shape, producing a smooth surface.

S-BEND CORSET A corset with a wide busk that pushed the bust forward and the hips and bottom backward in an S shape.

c.1900-10: SEE PP.228, 432-3

SCHENTI A knee-length linen wrap like a kilt, worn by men in Ancient Egypt.

c.2686-2181BCE: SEE PP.16-17

SCOOP NECK A low, round neckline on a woman's blouse or dress.

1950s ▷: SEE PP.237, 338, 451

SEERSUCKER A lightweight, plain or striped cotton or synthetic fabric, with a puckered surface created by warp threads of varying tension.

18 TH CENTURY ▷

SELVEDGE The self-finished edge of a length of woven fabric, created by the weft threads being looped back into the fabric length; prevents the fabric from fraying or unraveling. SEE PP.75, 446

SEQUINS Small, shiny disks of metal or plastic sewn on to garments for decoration; see also Spangles.

1880s ▷: SEE PP.293, 361

SERAPE Long, woven striped blanket, worn over the shoulders; originally used by horsemen in northeast Mexico; became a national symbol after independence from Spain.

18TH CENTURY ▷

SERGE A sturdy worsted fabric with a twill weave and diagonal ribbing, made in different weights and types. MEDIEVAL ▷

SHALWAR KAMEEZ A traditional form of dress for Indian women, comprising the shalwar (loosely fitted pants) and kameez, a knee-length shift or tunic with slits up the sides; often worn with a dupatta.

SHANTUNG A heavy, lustrous silk or synthetic fabric, with slubs in the fibers giving a slightly uneven texture.

1870s ⊳

SHAWL COLLAR A broad, softly turned-down collar on a man's coat or vest, tapering to the front with no notch between it and the lapel; superseded by the roll collar.

1820s ▷: SEE P.439

SHEATH DRESS A close-fitting dress for women, knee-length or mid-calf length, with darts at the bust and waist to follow the figure.

1920s ▷: SEE P.323

SHEEPSKIN Treated sheep hides used with the fleece on the inside and the skin on the outside; used for car coats, and popular as part of the hippy style; sheepskin with a fleece of uniform depth is called shearling. 20_{TH} CENTURY ▷

SHIFT Until the 19th century, a general term for a woman's undershirt with long sleeves, equivalent to a man's shirt; made of linen; the poor used wool.

MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.75, 80, 87

SHIFT DRESS A short, sleeveless dress with a straight or slightly flared shape that skims the figure.

1960s ▷: SEE P.355

SHIRRING A technique in which parallel rows of tiny gathers are sewn into a garment, often using shirring elastic, to allow stretching of the area; see also Smocking.

SHIRTWAIST DRESS A classic dress style in which the bodice resembles a man's shirt, with a folded-down collar and revers.

1930s ▷: SEE PP.228, 317

SHOT SILK A silk fabric woven with different-colored warp and weft threads to give an iridescent sheen.

MID-197H CENTURY ▷

GLOSSARY 457

SHRUG A cropped, short-sleeved garment like a bolero, but knit. EARLY 215T CENTURY

SILK Fine, very long, lustrous fibers from the cocoons of various silkmoth species, notably the domestic silkmoth (Bombyx mori).

SILK HAT See Top hat.

SINGLE-BREASTED Men's coat or jacket that closes at the center front with a single row of buttons; see also Double-breasted.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.303, 447

SKINHEAD STYLE A style originating among young working-class British people, featuring close-cropped hair, suspenders, jeans, and Dr. (Doc) Martens boots.

LATE 1960s ▷: SEE P.405

SKI PANTS Narrow-fitting pants with elastic straps under the insteps, worn for skiing and as leisure wear. 20th CENTURY: SEE P.346

SKORT Wide-legged shorts with a piece of fabric in front to give the appearance of a skirt.

20тн CENTURY \triangleright

SLACKS Casual pants. 1920s ▷

SLASHES Decorative slits cut into the surface of a garment so fabric from an underlying garment can show or be pulled through; see also Puffs. 1480s–1650s: SEE P.99

SLASH POCKET A pocket in a man's coat, with a slit opening and no covering flap.

19TH CENTURY: SEE P.453

SLEEVE HAND The open end of a sleeve, where the hand emerges.

SLEEVE HEAD The top of a sleeve, where it is attached to the armscye.

SLING BACKS Women's high-heeled shoes with either open or closed toes and with a strap around the heel to hold them on.

1930s ▷

SLIP A women's light petticoat, worn under dresses or skirts.

20th CENTURY ▷

SLIPPERS Lightweight, low-heeled shoes that can easily be slipped on and off, often used for indoor wear.

16TH CENTURY >>

SLIP SHOES Low-heeled mules.

16TH-MID-18TH CENTURY

SLIT POCKET A vertically cut pocket in a man's coat.

19тн CENTURY

SLOPPY JOE An oversized, loosefitting sweater.

1950s ⊳

SLOPS Very wide, loose knee breeches often worn by sailors. LATE 16TH-18TH CENTURY

supe Till II

SLUBS Thickened, irregular areas in silk fiber, often seen as an attractive feature in silk fabrics.

SMOCK A loose-fitting linen or cotton overgarment worn by laborers, often with a yoke and smocking patterns on the front; adopted as informal dress by women.

16TH CENTURY >: SEE P.383

SMOCKING A decorative technique in which fabric is evenly gathered (see Shirring) and a pattern stitched on top of the gathers.

1880 >: SEE PP.205, 228, 241, 413

SMOKING JACKET A short, single-breasted or double-breasted jacket for men, often in velvet or silk and lined with bright material, worn informally around the home.

850s ⊳

SNOOD (a) A fine mesh net worn by women to hold long hair or keep a hairstyle in place; (b) a tubular scarf pulled over the head.

19TH CENTURY D:
SEE P.197

SOLFERINO An aniline dye used to produce a fuchsia color. 1860 ⊳

SOMBRERO The Spanish term for a hat, typically referring in English to a traditional Mexican hat with a wide, upturned brim and a slightly pointed crown.

SEE PP.121, 438

SPAGHETTI STRAPS Very thin, light straps, often seen on women's sundresses, evening dresses, and undergarments.

20TH CENTURY ▷

SPANDEX A trade name for a light, elastic fiber used in underwear and swimwear; see also Lycra[®].

1958 ⊳

SPANGLES Small disks or lozenges of shiny metal with pierced centers, sewn on to garments for decoration; see also Sequins.

LATE 15TH-LATE 19TH CENTURY

SPANISH CLOAK Originally a short, hooded cloak for men; later a man's short evening cloak lined with bright-colored silk.

16TH-EARLY 20TH CENTURY

SPANISH FARTHINGALEThe earliest form of farthingale, a garment that originated in Spain; made with a series of hoops that

c.1520s-1620s: SEE PP.432-3

SPATS Cloth or leather coverings for the uppers of men's shoes, worn by the military and as formal wear.

19тн-EARLY 20тн CENTURY: SEE PP.263, 442

SPECTATOR SHOES Men's shoes, usually brogues, made from two different colors of leather, such as tan and white.

1934 ▷: SEE PP.298, 303, 333, 340

Zulu warrior, South Africa

The rank of a Zulu warrior is indicated by the wearing of particular animal hides and feathers. The leopard-skin umQhele headdress is worn by those of high status.

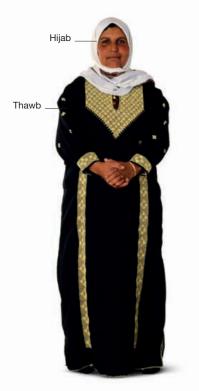

Ghanaian woman in typical dressSaid to have been introduced to West Africa by European traders in the 19th century, wax, or batik, is a textile used widely in West African traditional dress.

Maasai man, Tanzania

The Maasai live in Kenya and Tanzania and are well known for their distinctive dress of brightly colored, usually red, fabrics that are draped around the body.

Jordanian woman in traditional dress This woman wears a typical Muslim hijab and a thawb. Dress in Jordan is distinctive for its elaborate use of embroidery, with each village having its own designs.

SPENCER (a) A short, double-breasted men's jacket, often worn for country pursuits; (b) a short, close-fitting, high-waisted jacket worn by women in the Regency era, over an Empire-line dress; (c) a wool or wool mix vest or thermal garment worn by women.

18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.171, 174, 187

SPUN SILK Yarn made from waste silk fiber, used to make fabrics, embroidery silk, and ribbons.

LATE 197H CENTURY ▷

STACKED HEEL A heel made by stacking thin layers of wood, leather, or other material, or a heel designed to look as if it has been made in this way.

17TH CENTURY >>

STAND COLLAR An upright collar.
19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.155, 399, 439

STAND-FALL COLLAR A collar that is folded over, with the inner upright part called the "stand" and the downturned part called the "cape."

19TH CENTURY >: SEE P.439

STARCH A substance used to smooth and stiffen fabrics; most types are extracts from plants.

14TH CENTURY >: SEE P.124

STAYS The precursor of the corset: a tight undergarment for women, stiffened with whalebone, worn to give a fashionable shape; see also Busk.

17тн-18тн CENTURY: SEE P.139

STILETTO HEELS High, narrow heels, often reinforced with steel, seen on women's shoes.

1954 ▷: SEE PP.388, 426-7

STIRRUP PANTS Close-fitting, stretchy pants for women, with the fabric forming a loop under the foot; see also Ski pants.

STOLA A full-length, sleeveless dress placed over the tunica and under the palla, and secured by brooches and a belt; worn by married Roman women.

c.100BCE-300CE: SEE PP.34-7

STOLE A wide shawl or wrap of fur or luxury fabric, worn around the shoulders by women.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.170, 236, 401

STOMACHER A stiff, triangular panel, often heavily embroidered, worn over the chest and stomach, at the front of an open bodice.

15TH-18TH CENTURY: SEE PP.138-9,

145, 432-3

STONEWASHING A technique in which a fabric such as denim is artificially aged or distressed.

20TH CENTURY: SEE P.389

STRAIGHT PANTS Pants for both men and women, in which the legs are the same width from hip to ankle.

19TH CENTURY >

STREET STYLE A term for styles created by young people for themselves and later taken up by fashion designers, for example, beatnik, punk, or mod style.

1960s ▷: SEE PP.404-5

STYLE WIDTH

A tailoring term for the horizontal measurement from the center back seam of a coat to the armhole.

SUEDE Tanned leather with the flesh side treated to give a nap, and used with the napped side outward; often used for shoes and jackets.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

SUGARLOAF HAT A hat with a high, conical crown and a broad brim, worn by both men and women.
1640s: SEE PP.73, 123, 159

SUIT An outfit comprising a jacket with pants or a skirt of the same material, worn as business or formal wear; some men's suits also have a waistcoat; see also Lounge suit.

SUIT OF APPAREL A man's outfit based on doublet and hose.

161H-17TH CENTURY: SEE PP.90-1

SUMPTUARY LEGISLATION Laws governing garments and fabrics to be worn by (or forbidden for) specific levels of society, such as the law that only royalty could wear ermine.

MEDIEVAL-17TH CENTURY

SUPPORTASSE A decorated wire framework worn at the back of the neck to support a ruff or a band; see also Pickadil, Rebato, Underpropper. c.1550–1650: SEE P.99

SWALLOWTAIL A man's tailcoat in which the front part reaches to the waist and the back has knee-length tails; still worn for highly formal ("white tie") events.

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.262-3

SWEATER A loose-fitting knit garment pulled on over the head; usually informal or leisure wear. c.1890 ▷

SWEETHEART NECKLINE On women's dresses, a wide neckline forming a curved V at the front, with the point at the center of the bust.

20тн CENTURY: SEE PP.326, 451

SWING COAT A loose topcoat for women that flares from the shoulders. 20th CENTURY ▷

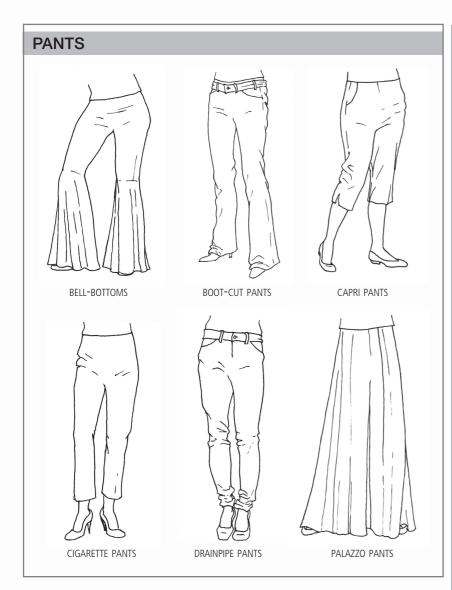

Т

TABARD (a) A short overgarment like a tunic, originally worn by peasants, or a more elaborate garment worn by a knight over armor, and bearing the knight's coat of arms; (b) a jerkin worn by a royal officer of arms, and emblazoned with the arms of the sovereign; (c) a loose, short-sleeved or open-sided top for women, especially one used as a beach robe; (d) an open-sided protective garment worn by uniformed workers.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE PP.39, 168

TABBY A thick, glossy taffeta with a watered surface (see Watered fabrics) giving a striped appearance.

17TH—EARLY 20TH CENTURY

TABI Traditional Japanese ankle socks, with thick soles and a division between the big toe and the other toes so they can be worn with shoes that have a strap between the toes. SEE P.459

TABLET WEAVING Weaving technique for making bands, often patterned, using a hole-punched tablet made from bone, bark, wood, metal, or other material.

c.3rd-15th CENTURY

TACKING See Basting.

TAFFETA A crisp, glossy fabric made of silk or synthetic fiber, with a shimmering luster; often used in ball gowns and wedding dresses; see also Nylon taffeta, Tabby. 14TH CENTURY ▷ made by a tailor to fit a specific person; in particular, garments for men or masculine-style clothing for women; see also Bespoke, Couture, Haute couture, Made-to-measure.

TAIL (a) The train of a wedding dress or woman's formal gown; (b) the long rear skirt of a man's dress coat; see Tailcoat, Swallowtail, Morning coat; (c) as "tails," the term for a dress suit with tailcoat. MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.155, 185, 214

TAILCOAT A formal coat for men in which the front is cut short and the back has two long skirt pieces called tails; see also Morning coat, Swallowtail.

MID-19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.262-3

TAILOR-MADE A term for garments LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

TAM O'SHANTER A round wool cap with a pom-pom in the center, worn traditionally by Scottish men, but now more often worn by women. 1880s ⊳

TANGO STYLE A style inspired by the tango dancers of Argentina; in Europe, it gave rise to women's fashions such as the tulip skirt, and to shorter underwear that allowed freedom of movement. c.1913 ⊳

TARTAN A traditional Scottish wool cloth with a twill weave, in which stripes of different colors are interwoven to form a specific pattern of squares and bands called a sett; see also Kilt.

SEE PP.197, 273, 442

TATTERSALL VEST A fancy vest for men, with a checked pattern, usually worn for country pursuits. 1895 ⊳

TATTING

A decorative technique in which thread is worked with a needle or

T-STRAP SHOES Women's flat or heeled shoes with a central strip joining the vamp to an ankle strap. 1930s ▷: SEE PP.273, 357, 426-7

TEDDY An item of lingerie that combines a bodice with a pair of panties; called cami-knickers in the UK.

1970s ⊳

TEDDY-BOY STYLE A style that developed among young men in the UK, based on Edwardian fashions, and featuring knee-length jackets, close-fitting drainpipe pants, and very thin string ties.

1950s: SEE PP.340-1, 404

TENT DRESS A dress that is fitted at the shoulders and flares out to the hem; attributed to Spanish designer Cristóbal Balenciaga.

1951 ⊳

Mongolian man in traditional dress Mongolian dress is ideal for the harsh cold of the steppes. The most common materials are leather (especially sheepskin), fur, and wool felt from sheep or camels.

Geisha, Japan Japanese Geisha, female entertainers, regularly wear traditional Japanese dress, including a kimono and an obi. The hair is worn up with ornaments.

Dao girl, Northern Vietnam

The Dao are an ethnic minority living in China, Vietnam, and Thailand. They produce fine textiles of embroidered batik silk, frequently in geometric patterns.

Khmer Apsara dancer, Cambodia

The Khmer sampot dates back thousands of years and is made of silk using a unique, uneven twill technique. Ikat is a traditional method to create the patterns.

TEXTILE A term for any type of woven cloth or any synthetic fabric or thread.

THAWB Ankle-length robe constructed like a collarless shirt and worn by men and women in Arab countries to keep covered and cool.

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE P.458

THONG Skimpy underpants, with a narrow back that exposes the buttocks, worn to give a smooth line under clothes; see also G-string. c.1975 ▷

THREE-PIECE SUIT A term for a lounge suit comprising a jacket, pants, and vest.

20TH CENTURY

TICKET POCKET A small pocket just above the right front pocket on a man's jacket or coat, originally designed to hold train tickets.

LATE 1850s ▷: SEE P.453

TIE-DYE A traditional technique in Africa and Asia, in which fabric is tied at several points and then dyed; the ties keep the dye from reaching the cloth, thus forming a pattern against the colored areas; see also Batik, Hippy style.

TIERS Overlapping layered ruffles or flounces on a garment.

1850s ▷: SEE PP.205, 207, 405

TIPPET A narrow wrap, often of fur, worn around a woman's shoulders, with the ends hanging down in front.

16TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.56, 64

TOGA A garment worn by male Roman citizens, comprising a semicircular piece of wool cloth draped round the body.

c.100BCE-300CE: SEE PP.34-5

TOGGLE A short, often cylindrical, bar pushed through a loop to fasten a garment such as a duffle coat.

20th CENTURY ▷

TOILE In dressmaking, a term for a prototype of a new garment design, in an inexpensive fabric such as muslin, used to create the pattern for the actual garment.

LATE 19TH CENTURY ▷

TOP BOOTS An alternative, later name for jockey boots.

1680s ⊳: SEE P.217

TOPCOAT A man's outdoor coat worn over a suit; usually knee length, and made of lightweight fabric.

18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.184

TOP HAT A man's hat with a tall, flat-topped crown, a narrow brim turned up at the sides, and a covering of black silk plush; worn for formal occasions (see also Gibus hat).

19TH CENTURY >: SEE PP.210–11, 262–3

TOQUE A close-fitting, brimless hat; particularly fashionable for women in the 1920s.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.175

TOURNURE The French word for a bustle, used by the English in polite society (as the word "bustle" was thought to be vulgar).

1880s

TRAIN An elongation of the back of a dress or cloak so that the fabric trails on the ground; still seen in costumes for ceremonial occasions, and as a feature on wedding dresses.

MEDIEVAL D: SEE PP.200-6

term for full-skirted, knee-length dresses that flared out from fitted shoulders, with petticoats underneath to produce a rigid triangular outline.

1958: SEE P.381

TRENCH COAT A knee-length or long coat made from waterproof cotton or wool, with a belt and sometimes caped shoulders; first used by the military in World War I, it became popular after featuring in films such as Casablanca; see also Gabardine.

20th CENTURY >: SEE PP.238, 280, 291

TREWS Tartan hose worn by Scottish men; later referred to tight-fitting pants, usually worn by horse-riders and soldiers; from the Scottish Gaelic triubhas.

c.16TH CENTURY

TRICORN HAT A hat with a low crown and the brim turned up at the back and sides to form a triangle; worn by both men and women.

1690-LATE 18TH CENTURY: SEE PP.136-7, 151, 157

TRICOT A fine, knit, ribbed fabric of wool or synthetic fiber, made on a special tricot machine; often used for women's undergarments.

19TH CENTURY ▷

TRILBY A man's soft felt hat, usually black, with a dent along the crown, and a narrow, flexible brim; named after the novel and play of the same name; see also Homburg.

1895 ▷: SEE P283

TRUNK-HOSE Puffed-out breeches forming the top part of men's hose, extending from the waist to the tops of the thighs, to join the stockings. c.1550–1610: SEE PP.90–1, 101

T-SHIRT A short-sleeved, round-necked cotton shirt, originally worn as an undershirt by US servicemen in World War II but has since become globally popular as leisure wear for both men and women.

MID-20™ CENTURY ▷: SEE P.345

TUBE TOP A cropped, sleeveless, and shoulderless top for women that wraps like a tube around the torso, and usually fits tightly around the bust so that it stays in place.

1970s ▷

TUCK A stitched fold of fabric used to shape a garment or for decoration.

TUCKER A piece of white fabric, such as lace or lawn, added to the neckline of a bodice on a low-cut dress; known as a "modesty piece."

18тн-19тн CENTURY

TULIP SKIRT A wraparound skirt with cross-over panels at the front that curve down from the waist, forming an inverted V at the front hem; a feature of tango style.

20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.457

TULLE A delicate net fabric made from silk or synthetic fibers, often starched to add structure, and used for bridal veils and stiff petticoats.

18 TH CENTURY ▷

TUNIC A loose garment of varying lengths, either sleeved or sleeveless, worn over a shirt and pants or leggings, and usually made of wool or linen; worn from Ancient Greek and Roman to medieval times.

TUNICA A basic, T-shaped garment for both sexes in Ancient Rome, knee length for men and full length with long sleeves for women (see also Dalmatic).

c.100BCE-300CE: SEE PP.34-7

TUNIC DRESS A short dress worn over a hobble skirt in the early 20th century, or a short, loose dress worn over pants from the 1960s.

20TH CENTURY ⊳

TURBAN (a) A headdress made by wrapping a long piece of cloth around the head, used by men in Middle-Eastern, Asian, and Islamic areas; (b) a woman's hat made to look like a turban.

LATE 18TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.112-13, 190-1, 171

TURTLENECK A sweater with a close-fitting, turned-down collar; known as a polo-neck in the UK. EARLY 2014 CENTURY >: SEE PP.280, 352, 421

TUSSORE SILK A silk made from the cocoons of wild silkworms, and beige or light brown in its undyed state; also known as Tussah silk.

17TH CENTURY ▷

TUXEDO See Dinner jacket.

TWEED A rough wool cloth originating in Scotland, in a plain or twill weave, sometimes with a checked or herringbone pattern. 1825 ▷: SEE PP.217, 284–5

TWILL A type of weave with a pattern of diagonal ribs, formed when weft thread crosses over one or more warp threads and under two or more in a stepped fashion; also a fabric woven in this way. SEE P.463

TWINSET A matching set of a light, sleeveless sweater and cardigan in the same fabric, usually knit wool, worn by women.

1920s ⊳

TYRIAN PURPLE Natural deep purple dye obtained from the Murex mollusk; prized by ancient Phoenicians, Greeks, and Romans for its resistance to fading; expensive status symbol.

ANTIQUITY: SEE PP.38-9

TYROLEAN COSTUME Fashion inspired by traditional Austrian dress, such as embroidered blouses and Tyrolean hats.

1930s ▷: SEE PP.273, 299

TYROLEAN HAT A felt hat similar to a fedora, with a tapering crown, a brim turned up at the sides, and a feather cockade on one side; often moss green in color.

1860s ▷: SEE P.446

UGG BOOTS
Traditional Australian soft sheepskin
boots, originally worn
by sheep-farm workers and as utility slippers; later popularized by surfers in the US to become a global fashion.

EARLY 20™H CENTURY ▷

ULSTER A long, double-breasted overcoat for men, made of Donegal tweed, with a half or full belt.

1869 ▷

UNDERPROPPER Wired frame designed to support an Elizabethan ruff; tied to the inside of the bodice;

also called a supportasse. 16TH CENTURY: SEE P.99

UNISEX CLOTHING Garments that can equally well be worn by men or women, such as jeans and T-shirts.

1960s ▷: SEE P.359

UTILITY CLOTHING A plan brought in by the British government during the period of austerity caused by World War II, in which a limited range of clothes was produced in styles that economized on the use of fabric and notions.

1941-51: SEE PP.304-5

V

VAMP The front part of the upper on a shoe, covering the toes.

VANDYKING A decorative border of fabric or lace, with a series of V-shaped points, used as trimming on a garment; named after 17th-century styles painted by Paul van Dyk.

1750s ▷: SEE PP.174, 179

VARIEGATED Term describing fabric that has streaks, marks, or patches of various colors.

VELOUR A smooth plush fabric made of cotton, wool, or synthetic fiber, like velvet but with a shorter pile.

19™H CENTURY ▷

VELVET A silk or synthetic fabric with a short, dense pile, formed by weaving an extra set of looped warp threads into the fabric and then cutting them level, to give a soft, lustrous surface. MEDIEVAL ▷

Chinese woman wearing a cheongsam The cheongsam (or qipao) is a style that originated in Shanghai in the 1920s. It was based on an old, loose-fitting style that was modified under European influence.

Korean woman in traditional dress Women's hanbok, or traditional dress, in Korea consists of a long-sleeved blouse, or jeogori, and a long, full skirt, called a chima, worn with an underskirt.

Woman in Indian dress

Despite the variety in women's traditional dress in India, the sari is the most widespread garment. Each region's sari has its own draping style and material.

Man from West Bengal, India

The kurta and dhoti combination is a traditional men's dress worn in many parts of India, mostly for festivals. The style of draping the dhoti varies across regions.

VELVETEEN A fabric made to imitate velvet, with a silk pile on a cotton ground, or made entirely of cotton. LATE 18™H CENTURY ▷

VENETIANS Breeches that were usually widest at the hips and sometimes padded with bombast. and narrowed toward the knees. c.1570-1620; SEE P.105

VENT A vertical slit partway up the side or back seam of a coat or jacket to give ease of movement. 15TH CENTURY ▷

VEST Another name for waistcoat. 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.413

VESTMENTS Robe or gown worn to signify rank; worn by clerics of the Christian Church and others conducting services; based on everyday clothing of the 1st century CE. MEDIEVAL ▷: SEE PP.56-7

VINTAGE CLOTHING Garments and accessories from previous eras, obtained for wearing or display, or collected as memorabilia. LATE 20TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.412-3

VISCOSE Another name for rayon. 20TH CENTURY ▷

VOILE A sheer, lightweight fabric with a crisp surface finish, mainly made of cotton but also made of silk or synthetic fibers. 1885 ⊳

VOLANT A small frill or flounce with wavy edges, used as trimming. 19TH CENTURY ▷

WAISTBAND The band encircling the waist at the top of lowerbody garments such as pants and skirts.

WAISTCOAT Formerly a waist-length undercoat worn with a doublet or coat; today a vest; sleeveless garment worn with a coat or jacket on formal occasions, or as a decorative feature.

16TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.151, 155, 210

WAIST SEAM The seam running around the center of a formal coat or dress, joining the body to the skirts.

WARP The long threads running vertically on a loom, parallel to the selvedge, creating the lengthwise grain of woven fabric; see also Weft.

WATERED FABRICS A term for fabrics that have a rippled pattern like a watermark on the surface, made by applying heat, moisture, and pressure; see Tabby, Moiré finish.

WATTEAU PLEATS A revival of the 18th-century sack back style, named for the dresses seen in paintings by 18th-century French artist Jean-Antoine Watteau.

c.1850-EARLY 20th CENTURY: SEE P.117

WEAVE A term for the way in which the warp and weft are interwoven in a cloth; the basic types are plain (one weft thread crossing over one warp and under the next), twill, and satin.

WEDDING DRESS The bride's dress, typically white (made popular by the wedding of Queen Victoria in Britain in 1840); styles have usually been the "best dress" for the era, or, more recently, evening or Victorian-style dresses, or unusual styles and colors (such as pink).

19_{TH} CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.189, 200, 320–1

WEDDING SUIT The groom's formal suit; an outfit of morning coat with striped pants, vest, and pale top hat became popular around 1920; a tuxedo is now more common formal wedding wear. 19_{TH} CENTURY ▷

WEDDING VEIL The bridal veil, made popular after the British Queen Victoria wore a long lace veil for her wedding in 1840; 20th-century veils were often made of tulle, and various styles were adopted, but many reached to the waist or below. 19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.200, 413

WEDGE-SOLED SHOES High-heeled shoes popularized by Italian designer Salvatore Ferragamo, in which the sole forms one triangular piece, often made of cork, wood, or plastic. 1930s >: SEE PP.305, 376

WEFT The horizontal threads that are interlaced with the warp as a cloth is being woven, and which create the crosswise grain in a fabric.

WELT (a) In shoe making, a strip of leather or other material sewn around the border between the upper and insole, to which the sole is attached; (b) a strengthened or raised border on a garment.

WHALEBONE Flexible cartilaginous material (baleen) from the upper jaw of a whale, used for boning in stays, corsets, and bodices.

MEDIEVAL-20TH CENTURY

WHEEL FARTHINGALE

A wheel-shaped farthingale that fit around the waist, often tilted up at the back, and extended the skirts of a dress to form a cylinder shape. 1580-1620s

WHITE WORK A term for any kind of embroidery using white or undyed thread on a background of the same color, such as broderie anglaise.

WIG A headdress made of human or artificial hair, worn to conceal baldness or for decoration; wigs became a particular feature of dress in the 17th and 18th centuries, such as the full-bottomed wig worn by English King Charles II.

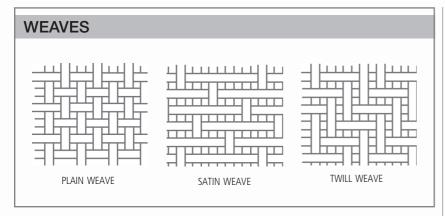

ANTIQUITY ▷: SEE PP.136-7, 150-3

WIMPLE A veil worn by medieval women, covering the head, neck and sides of the face; later adopted by nurses and nuns.

13TH CENTURY ▷: SEE P.158

WINDSOR KNOT A way of tying a necktie in which the wider end of the tie is wrapped around the narrower end and passed through the neck loop twice, producing a wide, symmetrical, triangular knot. 20TH CENTURY >: SEE P.286

WING COLLAR A stand collar on which the two points are bent outward; still worn by men on formal occasions.

19TH CENTURY ▷: SEE PP.225, 289, 439

WINKLEPICKERS A style of shoe or boot with very long, pointed toes, worn by both men and women, for example as part of the mod style.

1950s ▷

WOGGLE A loop or ring of wood, leather, or cord, through which the ends of a neckerchief are threaded; most typically worn by Boy Scouts and Girl Guides.

1930s ⊳

WOOL Fiber collected from the fleece of sheep and similar domesticated animals, which has been used for thousands of years to make a variety of fabrics, and usually knit, woven, or matted to make felt.

WORSTED A yarn made from long strands of wool or other fibers that are combed (see Combing) and tightly twisted to make a smooth, woven fabric; or smooth fabric made from these yarns.

MEDIEVAL ▷

WRAPAROUND Any garment that is wrapped around the body and tied on, such as a sarong; also a classic dress by American designer

Diane von Furstenberg, the "wrap dress," wrapped around the body and tied with a belt of the same fabric.

1950s ▷: SEE PP.323, 345

YARMULKE A Yiddish word for the skull-cap (called a kippah in Hebrew) worn by male Orthodox Jews at all times, and by other male Jews during prayer and on religious occasions.

TRADITIONAL

YARN Natural or synthetic fibers spun and twisted to make a thread for weaving or knitting.

Y-LINE A fashion created by French designer Christian Dior, which featured dramatic necklines and shoulder details that drew attention to the upper body; see also A-line.

1955: SEE P.319

YOUTHQUAKE A term coined by Vogue magazine editor Diana Vreeland to describe the impact of youth culture on 1960s fashion, and particularly linked to style icons such as teenage model Twiggy and young designers Mary Quant and Betsey Johnson; see Mod style, Miniskirt, Shift dress.

1960s: SEE PP.361, 354-7

YOKE A fitted piece from which lower parts of a garment hang, encircling the neck and shoulders on a shirt or coat, or encircling the waist on some types of skirt.

YUKATA An informal type of kimono, usually made of cotton and worn in summer, or worn as a covering at public baths.

Z

ZAZOU STYLE The French version of the zoot suit, but worn with narrow rather than baggy pants.

1940s ▷: SEE P.302

zoot suit A suit comprising high-waisted, wide-legged pants tapered at the ankle, and a long jacket with wide shoulders and lapels; introduced by Mexican-Americans and popular with African-Americans and rebellious youth.

1930s-1950s: SEE P.341

ZOUAVE JACKET A woman's jacket of velvet or silk with an open front that curved diagonally from the neck; named for the Algerian Zouave troops of the French army.

LATE 19TH CENTURY

Hula dancer, Hawaii, USThis dancer wears the traditional Hawaiian lei and grass skirt. The giving and wearing of lei can have many meanings, often symbolizing respect, affection, or rank.

Maori warrior, New Zealand
The main elements of Maori men's dress are the piupiu flax skirt and ta moko traditional tattooing. Each tattoo represents the wearer's ancestry or tribe.

INDEX

Entries or page numbers in bold type refer to chapter headings, features, or boxes. Abercrombie & Fitch 239 Aboularia, Bress 347 abstract expressionism 334 academic dress 56 Academy Awards 416-17 accessories (1901-14) men's 224 (1950s) 327, 339 (1960s) 361 (1970s) 382 beach (1950-61) 337 Etruscan 32 fur 332 medieval 64, 72 neoclassical 168 Renaissance 94 surrealist 294 Victorian 192 see also bags; shoes Acid House music 406, 407 acrylic 360, 383 Adam Ant 406 Adams III, Charles Francis 263 Adelaide, Queen 188 Adele 331 Adidas 389, 406, 407 Adrian, Gilbert 270, 275, 282, 295, 306, 308 advertising campaigns 415 Aegina 20, 29 Aelfgyfu-Emma, Queen 48 aero-sports 280 aerobics craze 388 Aesthetic movement 213, 214 Africa, inspiration from 158, 244, African-Americans 340, 341 Afro-Caribbean influences 341, 374, 406 afternoon dresses 171, 179, 189, 207, 423 A.G. Spalding and Brothers 230 Agamemnon, King 24 aiglets 71, 94 aigrette 244 Akhenaten 18 Al-Andalus 58 Alaïa, Azzedine 388, 392 Albermarle, Earl of 216 albs 57, 83 Alby, Pierre d' 353 Alcega, Juan de 105 Alfonso X of Spain 59 aljuba 58, 61

African collection (Saint Laurent) 371 All Saints 388 allegorical themes 99, 108, 218 Allen, Marit 360 alligator skin 363, 431 Almodavar, Pedro 395 aloeswood 106 aluminium mesh 393 Alvarez, Lily d' 297 Amazonia 28 amber 47 Ambrosio, Alessandra 413 American Designers' Movement 308 The American Look 308, 314 Amies, Hardy 314, 330 amulets 413 Ancient Egypt 16-19 The Ancient World (prehistory to 600CE) 10-41 time line 12-13 And God Created Man (Gaultier) 395 Andean cultures 28

Anderson & Sheppard 286, 419

Anderson, J.W. 421 androgenous look 354, 407 Angels and Bermans 419 Anglo-Saxons 29, 40, 44, 48, 49 Anglomania collection (Westwood) animal skins 363

The Animals 366 Anjou, Geoffrey of 69 Ankhesenamun 17 Anna of Austria, Queen of Spain 94 Anne of Denmark 95, 98, 121 Anne, Electress of Saxony 95 Anne Marie of Paris 294

anoraks 343 antifashion (1900-20) 236-7 (1960s) 373, 374 (1990s) 389, 410

antibourgeois style 393

Antonia dress (1950s) 326 appliqué 180, 181, 190, 207, 246, 247, 293, 295, 374

aprons fancy 191 flouncy 147 medieval 56 Minoan 21 mock 191 Renaissance 86

Aquascutum 182, 216 Aquitaine 53 Arabic calligraphy 59 Arbeitsanzug 266 archery 68, 187, 214, 231

Ariadne, Empress 36 Armani, Giorgio 351, 384, 396, 415

armholes body-lengthening 364 close-fitting 62 cutaway 361 deep 70, 71 natural opening 41 armoi

ancient world 13, 15, 28-9, 34, 424

medieval 68–9 Renaissance 92–3 see also military dress Army and Navy Stores 217 army surplus 412 Arrow label 262

art deco 18, 223, 253, 259, 271, 364, 372, 382, 431 art nouveau 166, 236, 237,

364, 367 Arthur, George K. 263 Arundel, Countess of 74 Ashley, Laura 350, 377 Astaire, Fred 270, 286, 289 Astor, Lady Nancy 281 astrakhan 272, 333

asymmetry, dramatic 401, 410 Athenes 213

Atlantic City 261 Atwood, Brian 416 Augustus, Emperor 26 Austen, Jane 164, 173 austerity regulations, wartime 270, 302, 304, 310 Austin Reed 298 Australia, youth 344 Austria 87, 89 avant-garde designers, Japanese 400-1, 410

aventail 68 aviatrixes 280

baby-doll style 354 Bacall, Lauren 332 Bachelor Girl 255, 272

low 270, 274, 275, 363 V-shaped 256, 293 bags

200 years of 430-1 (1970s) 382 alforias 121

backpacks 431 clutch 251, 252, 272, 341, 361,

363, 430, 431 designer 413, 431 Eton bag 353 evening 363, 430 Fendi Baguette 387 gilt-chained 249 Gladstone 166 handbags (1920s) 253 handbags (1950s) 334 handbags (1960s) 353, 363

it-bags 387 Lucite box 363, 430 Ronay bag 353 shoulder 299, 382 surrealist 294 tote 350, 430, 431

Bailey, David 350 Baker, Josephine 223, 250, 290 Bakst, Léon 245

baldricks 130, 131 Balenciaga, Cristóbal 271, 310, 311, 314, 316, 325, 326, 328-9, 330, 352 ball dresses/gowns (1810s) 175 (1830s) 181, 190 (1880 - 8) 205Charles Worth 199 denim 395

Ballets Russes 243, 244, 245 Balmain, Pierre 311, 319, 322, 323, 325, 326

523, 323, 326 bandeaus 169, 171, 180, 256, 291 bands, linear 94, 95 Banton, Travis 270, 293, 306 Bar Suit (1947) 316

barathea 299 barbette 55, 60, 61 Barbie 315, 403

Barclay 264 Bardot, Brigitte 336, 337

Baroque and Rococo (1625–1789) 114-163

time line 116-17 Barrel line (Balenciaga) 329 Barrie, J.M. 216 Barton, Alix 276, 322 baseball wear 227 basketball 389 baskets 201, 431 basques 187

Bates, John 356, 359, 360, 380, 381 Bath 162 bathing caps 337 bathing suits/dresses see swimwear batua 159

Bauhaus school 266

Bayeux Tapestry 44, 49, 50–1, 68 Bazaar (London) 315, 356 beachwear

(1920-1929) 260-1, 265, 266, 267 (1930s) 280, 282 beads

(1890s) 206 (1910s) 245 (1920s) 244, 256, 257, 258, 259 (1950s) 327 (1960s) 362, 364 (1970s) 376 (2000s) 417 bugle 259 colored 232 coral 75, 106 Egyptian 16

glass 47, 258, 277 wood 199 Beals, Jennifer 389

beards Byzantine 37, 59 medieval 48, 52, 65

Sassanid 31 Sumerian 15 Viking 47 bearskin 178

Beastie Boys 406 Beatlemania 315, 366 The Beatles 315, 366, 369 "beatnik" collection (Saint Laurent)

Beaton, Cecil 278, 294, 324-5, 367

Beats 344 beaver fur 106, 123, 128, 163, 184,

185, 186 Beckham, Victoria 420 Beene, Geoffrey 351, 363 beggar look 403 beige, craze for 249 Belgium 410, 411

La Belle Epoque and the Jazz Age (1901-28) 220-267

time line 222-3 Bellini, Gentile 112 Bellville 199 belts (1920s) 250, 251, 257 (1930s) 285, 286 (1960s) 356 chain 382 fringed 257 Greek 24 half-belts 319 medieval 46 Minoan 20, 21 Regency 187 tasseled cord 179 tie 379

tied 332, 333 wide 227 Women's Legion 301 Beneš, Eduard 303 Benito, Edouard 267

Bergdorf Goodman 326 bergère style 200, 219 Bergfalter pattern 236 Bergman, Ingrid 332 Berketex 304 Berliner chic (1917–35) 290-1

Bernard of Clairvaux 55 Berry, Halle 416 Bertin, Rose 149 besagaw 92, 93 Besson, Luc 395 bevor 92 Beyazid II, Sultan 112

Biarritz 249 bias cut 65, 71, 274, 275, 278, 306, 364

Biba 350, 354, 364–5, 373 Biba Postal Boutique 364 Bienen-Davis 430 Big Biba 364

biker culture 390 bikinis 1950-61 336, 337

Roman 35 bird-of-paradise feathers 363 The Birds (McQueen) 419

Birkin, Jane 431 black as design color 400, 401,

403, 410 dyes 38, 204

Puritan preference for 128 symbolism of 108 Black Bottom 256 blackout cloth 305 black work 109 Blades 368

Blahnik, Manolo 416, 426 Blass, Bill 381 blazers 216, 217, 282, 283 bliauts 52, 53, 55

bling 384 Blois, Charles de 70 bloomer playsuit (1942) 309 bloomers 167, 215, 230 blouses

(1920s) 241, 252 (1930s) 273, 283 (1970s) 381 (1980s) 397 Chanel 249 cross-over front 272

early 20th-century 228, 230, 231, 240, 241

jabot 373 lace 397 middies 241 peasant style 412 pleated 206, 228 ruffled 397 see through 371 slipover 241

three-quarter sleeve 345 tunic 372 Blow, Isabella 419

Blue Bell Overall Company 345 blue dyes and pigments 38, 39, 56 boas, feather 291

Bobergh, Otto 199 bobo (bourgeois-bohème) 412 bodgies 344

bodices arched 95 asymmetrical 233 back-closure 178 bandagelike 410

boned 124, 125, 132, 133, 142, 179, 196, 203, 206, 322, 323,

325, 432 bosom-enhancing 149 butterfly-shaped 190 corset 138, 293 cross-over 327, 334 cross-over drape 322 cuirasse 200 curved 98, 192 Elizabethan-style 218 elongated 98, 99 front-closure 133, 138, 197 gathered 174 laced, corset-style 168 layered, scalloped 323 long-line 206 open-fronted, tight-waisted 20, 21, 23

peekaboo 327 pleated 75, 188, 189 pointed 86, 94, 97, 98, 103, 135 reinforced 204 sleeveless 261 smocked 205 stiffened 86, 120, 138, 139, 192, 319 strapless 322, 323, 335 sweetheart 326

tabbed 124, 205 tightly-cut 66, 87, 202, 322 tightly-waisted 146 undefined 362

waistcoat-style panels over 208 wraparound 323, 326 body piercing 390, 404 bodysuits, stretch 388 bog bodies, Danish 41 Bogart, Humphrey 339 Bohan, Marc 319, 371 boho (bohemian chic) 412-13, 423

boleros 297, 327, 329, 335, 396 Bolevn, Anne 97

Bolshevik Revolution 241 Bonaparte, Napoleon see Napoleon, Emperor bondage 390 bonnets (1820s) 178 (1830s) 188, 193 (1840s) 193 calash 146 with curlicue 188 feathered 170, 171, 428, 429 fur 72

motoring 230 mourning 204 Regency 175

straw 168, 170, 193, 207, 219, 429 veiled 196 wide-brimmed 192, 193 Boothby, Dora 230 boot-hose tops 123 boots "Ammo" 299 ankle 61, 427 basketball 389 Biba 364 biker 345, 412 bucket-top 116, 119 buttoned 240 cowboy 367, 413 cup top 122, 123 cycling 227 desert 339 Dr. (Doc) Martens 404, 407, 412 folded down tops 119 French (1635-49) 122, 123 funnel-topped 119, 129 go-go knee-high 352, 356, 361 gym 345 Hessians 184 high 238, 239 hiking 227 hobnail style 413 knee-high 381 lace trimmed 219 laced-up 230 lattice cutwork 72 low-heeled lace-up 376 medieval 47, 57, 61 patent leather 262 pirate 407, 413 pointed 32, 186, 238, 405 Renaissance 111, 113 riding 151, 153, 159, 184, 186, 282, 346 Roman 34, 35 skating 347 soft-leather 118 Stuart era 118, 119 suede 413 thigh-high 371 top 217 turned down 151, 153, 156, 157 two-tone 178 unisex 345, 400 waterproof 187, 238 wellington 164, 405 wide-topped 118, 119 winklepicker ankle 339 women's (1870s) 201 women's ankle 229 women's wartime 238, 298 see also shoes borders, decorative 48 Bosch, Hieronymus 110, 111 Boué sisters 247 Bourgogne, Duchess of 138 Boussac, Marcel 319 boutiques 359, 366, 369, 380 vintage 412 Bow, Clara 255 Bow Wow Wow 407 Bowie, David 351, 364, 372, 383 bowling wear 346 bows at neck 215 on blouses 380 on breeches 130 on dresses 190, 241, 275 on dresses 190, 241, on hats 228 pussy 197, 272, 305 sash 329 on shoes 130, 397 side 322 on sleeves 121, 193 The Boy Friend 354 Boy George 407 braccas 40, 48, 49 bracelets, matching wrist 178, 179 braces 285, 341, 345, 407 braid 88, 94, 95, 130, 131, 136, 177, 211 braies 57, 72 brand names 415

brandenburgs 175 Brando, Marlon 315, 342–3, 344 Brandt, Isabella 98 brassieres 223, 252, 270, 277, 316 cone 387, 392 worn on outside 390, 395 breast ornaments 121 breastplates 69, 119 breeches (1635-49) 122-3 (1685-1720) 136, 137 (1720-70) 150, 151 (1770–89) 154, 156, 157 bathing 231 buckskin 163 fall front 152, 155 fly front 217 knee bands 155 knee-length 30, 105, 129, 130, 131, 157, 219, 226 laced 136 Land Army 298 linen 162 medieval 45, 73 mid-calf 118 padded 104, 218 petticoat 104, 122, 130, 219 Regency 173 Renaissance 88, 89, 100, 101, 104, 105 riding 186, 282 short 105 Stuart 118, 119 Venetians or Polaks 103, 105 see also plus fours; trousers brial 52 Britain Can Make It exhibition (1946) 310 British Board of Trade 304, 305 brocade 44, 78, 81, 141, 326, 367 broderie anglaise 193 Bronze Age 14, 15, 20-1, 41 brooches, shoulder 41 Browne, Thom 286 Brueghel the Elder, Pieter 110 Brummell, Beau 166, 182-3, 184, 368 brushing braid 203 Buchanan-Jardine, Sir John 288 buckles at neckline 352 Baroque and Rococo 119, 155 on belts 251, 273 closures 305 on hats 184 on shoes 130, 131, 153, 157, 229 budge (lambswool) 73 Buffalo Girls collection (Westwood) 390 buffon kerchief 168, 186 bum rolls 433 Burberry 216, 223, 230, 386 Burgundy medieval age 74 Renaissance 80, 81, 85, 104 Burrows, Stephen 382 Burton, Sarah 385, 419 bus conductors 239 Bus Stop 381 business suits (1950s) 338 Armani 396 busks 120, 179, 188, 190 bust bodices 228 hustier (1950s) 322, 344, 432 (1990s) 433 cross-over drape 322 sequined 392 hustles 18th-century 149 19th-century 197, 199, 200–1, 204–5, 209, 214, 215, 219, 422, 433

(1950s) 323, 327, 329 bustle pads (1930s) 188, 189 bustle skirt (1870s) 202–3

front 392

loose (1670s) 132 McQueen 419 side (1950s) 322 soft 200-1 Westwood 390 bustline, high and prominent 319 Butterfly dress (Dalí) 295 butterfly spur leathers 122, 123 buttonholes false 184 floral 224 medieval 63, 64 buttons baroque and rococo 155 big and bold 329, 330 decorative 136, 184, 228, 231, 241 emergence of 45, 60, 61 fake 251 gilt 249 horn 227 knotted silk 91 medieval 63, 71 Renaissance 91, 104, 105 Schiaparelli 297 sleeve 284 wartime restrictions on 304, 305 Women's Legion 301 Byzantium 13, 36-7, 44, 46, 49, 58, 59, 112 influence on fashion 236

Café Society collection (Westwood) 390 caftans see kaftans calash 146 calce see hose Caldwell, Ray 227 Calloway, Cab 341 Cambridge, Catherine, Duchess of 387, 397, 419 camel leather 334 camisa/camisia see shirts camisoles 228, 252 Campbell, Naomi 409 Canadian Women's Army Corps (CWAC) 299 canes 130, 132, 224, 225, 234, 261, 263, 368, 382 theatrical 290 canions 101, 122, 130 capes . (1890s) 206, 207 (1920s) 252 (1930s) 276 (1970s) 381 circular 61 cloaks with 188 on coats 332 feather 364 Hussar 159 integral 186 opera 181, 225 quilted 210 samurai fire warden 400 short, boxy 206 shoulder 64, 171 Stuart 118 see also cloaks; mantles Capezio 346 caps (1450–1500) 84, 85 (1500–60) 88, 89 (1560–90) 95, 100, 101 (1590–1624) 104, 105 (1800–09) 170 baker boy 382, 428 with bandeau edge 170 baretas 83 baseball 227, 406, 407 bathing 337 brimmed 186

calottes 131

CWAC 299

evening 175

cloth 281, 283

coifs 56, 60, 61, 128

peaked 187, 227, 281, 283 pillbox 58 Polish 103 riding 186 skullcaps 56, 219 small round 60, 83 small soft 73 smoking 211 soft-crowned 187 with streamers 196 tweed 231 uniforms 238 with veiling 111 Viking 46 with visor 281 wool 104 cardigan jackets 249 cardigan suits 251 cardigans (1901–14) 226 (1920s) 250 (1939–45) 304 (1950s) 344, 347 (1970s) 380, 381 cape 400 Cardin, Pierre 315, 354, 356, 359, 360, 361, 367, 372, 395 Carl Gustav of Sweden 116 Carnaby Street 359, 366, 368, 369 Carnival 108, 158 Carolingian empire 47 Caron, Leslie 317 Carpaccio, Vittore 82-3 Carter, Margaret 320 Cassini, Oleg 333 cassocks 57 Castile 61 Castillo, Antonio 323 casual wear (1985–2010) 388–9 men's (1930s) 282-3, 286 women's (1940s) 309 women's (1950–60) 346–7 women's (1970s) 380–1 Catherine, St. 108 celebrity culture 415 Céline 420, 421 Celts 14, 28, 29 Cerda, Don Fernando de la 61 chain stores 335, 386 chainmail see mail chainse 53 Chalayan, Hussein 243, 410 challis 192 Chanel, Coco 182, 222, 223, 243, 248–9, 250, 251, 255, 270, 275, 292, 293, 293, 392 chaperons 72, 73, 128 chapes 71 chaplets, perfumed 106 chapada 219, 10 charades 218–19 Charell, Eric 291 Charell, Eric 291
Charles I of England 116, 118, 119, 124, 125, 126, 128, 219
Charles II of England 116, 130, 131, 132, 135, 138
Charles II of the Franks 47
Charles, Prince of Wales 386, 419 Charles V of Spain 78 Charles the Bold 85 Charles, Caroline 359

feathered 92, 122, 170, 175, 204 field service 299 flat 226, 227, 230, 264, 282, 302

linen 104, 105, 128, 129, 131

Marie Stuart undercap 179

fontange 139 garrison 298 Greek 24

ieweled 97

iockey 217

lace 188

Jewish 45, 59

mail coifs 69

montero 131

naval style 230

muslin 178

half-mourning 204

Charleston 256 chasubles 36, 57 chatelaines 231 Chaucer, Geoffrey 45, 66 cheerleading 347La Chemise Lacoste 261 chemises 52, 171, 204, 228 see also shirts chemises à la reines 149 chemisettes 178, 200, 241 cheongsams 319 Chérie dress (1947) 316 chest padding 184, 185 Chesterfield, Lord 224 chiffon 232, 234, 243, 256, 257, 258-9 children's wear Puritan 129 sportswear 163 . Victorian era 192–3 China ancient 12, 13, 15, 30–1 dyes and pigments 39 fashion market 415 influence on fashion 213 chiton 24, 25, 33, 35, 278, 422 chlamys 24, 278 Choniates, Niketas 55 Choo, Jimmy 416, 426, 427 chopines 79, 94, 111, 426 chorister costume (1970s) 380 church textiles 57 Churchill, Winston 224 Ciapella, Christina 320 Cinderella (Cendrillon) 246 circle cut 400, 401 circlets 59, 60, 64 civil rights movement 374 Clairvaux, Bernard of 53 Clark, Ossie 351, 376, 377, 383 Clarks shoes 238, 280 Classical Greece 24-7 classicism (1930-44) 276-9 Clayton, Mme 308 Cleopatra 12 Clifford, Camille 232 Clinton, Hilary 397 The Cloakroom, Clifton Assembly Rooms, 1817 (Sharples) 172-3 cloaks (1560-90) 95, 100, 101 (1590–1624) 104, 105 (1635–49) 122, 123 (1685-1720) 137 (1770-89) 156, 157 (1830s) 191 ancient 14, 35 Byzantine 36 cashmere 393 circular 59 Confucius 243 costume 219 country-style 157 domino 158 early Victorian 193 Etruscan 32, 33 feathered 107 fur-lined 106 Greek 24 hooded 138 medieval 48, 55, 73 neoclassical 169 Rococo 188 short 119 Stuart 119 toga-style 170 see also capes; mantles cloth-of-gold 44, 75, 106, 107 clothes sellers 136 clubs influence of 406 urban (1979–90) 406–7 Cnut, King of Wessex 48 coats (1670–89) 154, 155, 156, 157 (1685–1720) 136, 137 (1720–70) 150–1

(1790–1839) 84–5

Colcombet, Charles 297

Cooper, Gary 270, 286

(1939–45) women's 299	collars	Cooper, Stirling 373	Crawford, Cindy 408, 409	de' Medici, Catherine 103
(1940s) 310, 311	(1625–35) 126	Copeland, Jo 295	Crawford, Joan 270, 292, 297,	de' Medici, Lorenzo 85
(1947–62) women's 332–3	band 201	copes 57 coral 75, 106	306, 307 Crood Charles 330	de Villeneuve, Justin 354
Afghan 374	broad falling 120 button down 239	Corbett, Jane 429	Creed, Charles 330 crêpe de Chine 234, 250, 252	Dean, James 315, 343, 345
ancient Chinese 30 beach (1950s) 336	cape 189, 204	cording 178, 193	crespinettes 64, 65	Deauville 223, 249, 261 debutantes 199, 292
belted mac 356	circular, turned-down 380	corduroy 366, 424	Cressy-Marcks, Violet 251	décolletage
belted Hac 330 belted Ulster 303	contrasting color 368	Corinthians 29	Crete 13, 20–3	(1590–1625) 98
"British Warm" 238, 239	cross-over 334	cornettes 64	cricket wear 162, 227	(1820s) 180
chainmail 68, 69	cross-over fichu-style 201	coronation robes, medieval 59	crin 192	(1890s) 206
Chesterfield 263	decorative 16, 17, 36, 111	corsages 205, 251, 363	crin lace 295	(1950s) 327
coat dresses 356	detachable 272	corselets, external 20	crinolette frames 214, 433	asymmetric 232
cocoon 243, 329	diaphanous 189	corsets 432–3	crinolines 195, 196-7, 199, 390, 433	Edwardian era 232, 233
collarless 156	embroidered chiffon 252	17th-century 133	crochet 380	fake 229
Cossack 238, 272	face-obscuring 411	(1560-90) 94	crocodile skin, faux 363	heart-shaped 382
cutaway frock 224, 263	falling band 104, 119	abandonment of 236, 243	Cromwell, Oliver 116, 128, 129	low 133, 180, 233
cutaway front 153, 186	flattened 381	back-closure 147, 200	croquet 214	plunging (1930s) 276
cutaway skirts 156	folded 80, 81	boned 190	cross-gender wear 371	Restoration 135
double-breasted 156, 157, 163,	folded-over 151, 157	early 20th-century 228	cross-over style 396	Stuart 121, 126
182, 288, 310, 332, 357, 360	frilled 187	empire line 170	Crusades 45, 52 , 55, 58, 59, 69	V-neck 275
dress 185, 262	fur 238, 253, 272, 347	flat-fronted 228	cuffs	deconstructivism 403, 410, 420
duster 340	gathered 87	French (1778–89) 146, 147	(1685–1720) 136	Defaka 332
frock 116, 150, 151, 152, 153,	high 72, 73, 74, 90, 91, 206–7,	Gaultier 395	(1720–70) 150	Delaunay, Sonia 266, 267
156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185,	208, 228, 229, 236, 237, 399	getting into 171	(1770–89) 155	Demeter 15
186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262,	highwayman 369	light sports 230 McQueen 419	ancient Eastern 30 artificial 366	Demeulemeester, Ann 410, 411 demobilization 302, 303
263, 333, 369, 424	lace 79, 98, 118, 119, 120, 122, 124, 219, 228, 229, 320, 321	New Look 316	boot sleeve 151	deodorants 256, 258, 281
fur 264, 315, 371 gabardine 357	linen 87, 128, 131	sporting 214	decorative 31	department stores 335
greatcoats 184, 238	M-notch 185	steel-boned 204, 206, 432	deep 272, 377	deportment 204
Indian embroidered 213	narrow 368	straight-fronted 207, 222	embroidered 136	Depression era 270, 272, 306
justaucorps 130, 424	open 74, 95, 98, 99, 228, 253,	strapless 190	fur 244, 272, 333	Designer Decades (1980 onward)
justaucorps à brevet 137	283, 369	wasp-waist 215	lace 98, 104, 118, 122, 123, 124,	384–421
knee-length 130–1	oversized 353, 356, 381	Westwood 390	131, 137, 200, 201, 219	time line 386–5
leather 129	padded 176	whalebone 149, 192	long 87, 177	designer labels 378, 386, 415, long-skirted frock 173	pelerine 189	worn on top 168	marinière 201	420, 424
lounge 216, 303	Peter Pan 240, 250	costume dress	non-stiffened shirt 286	Desoye, E. 213
military style 366	pleated 237	1800-1900 218-19	notched 273	Dessès, Jean 322
mini 346, 357, 360, 361	pointed 129	Baroque and Rococo 158–9	padded 176, 177	Deutsch, Roszika and Janszieka 246
morning 210, 224, 234, 263, 288	Prince of Wales or Windsor 286	early-20th-century 243, 244, 245	ruffled 154	devil costumes 219
Norfolk 216	Regency upright 173	Renaissance 108	tight 48, 208	Devonshire House Ball 218
opera 245	removable 192, 197	surrealist 294	trouser 302, 303	Diablesse 219
overcoats 157, 186, 211, 262	roll 184, 187	costume balls 108	turned-back 87, 111, 130, 150, 229	diadems 244
pea 319, 371	rollaway 329	Côte d'Azur 260	cuirasses 29 , 69, 93	Diaghilev, Sergei 244
pellote 58, 61	rounded 330	cote-hardie 62–3 , 64, 65, 74, 75	culottes 297, 346, 371	diagonal cut 205
pleated 90–1	sailor's 230, 241	Cotillard, Marion 417	Culture Club 407	Diamond, Michael 406
Puritan 129	scallop-edge 118	cotron 335	cummerbunds 215	diamonds 106, 256, 327
PVC Macintosh 361	scarflike 331	cotton 168	curls, hair 21, 25, 60, 61, 119, 123,	Diana, Princess of Wales 386, 393
raincoats 297	sharp revers 361	Couch & Hoskin 284	124, 125, 132, 133, 147, 165,	Diane 267
redingote 157, 178, 333	shawl 245, 253, 272, 288, 333, 338	Council of Fashion Designers of	168, 169, 181	Dickens, Charles 165, 195, 219
reefer 303	shirt 253	America (CFDA) 385, 395, 419	customization 374 cycling suits 215, 216, 227, 230	dieting 276
Regency 182	small falling 128	country dress (1837–1900) 216–17	Czechoslovakia 303	Dietrich, Marlene 270, 288 , 290, 297, 332
Renaissance 111 Restoration 135	soft 227, 265 square 91	Baroque and Rococo 150, 151,	CZECIIOSIOVAKIA 303	•
riding 162, 163, 178, 186, 282	stand 155	156, 157, 162–3	Б	dinner suits (1920s) 262
Saxon (mid-1600s) 90–1	stand-133 stand-away 319, 329, 416	revival 405		(1930s) 282 (1930s) 289
sheepskin 412	stand-away 313, 323, 410	Courrèges, André 329, 350, 353,	Dadaiste collection (Gaultier) 395	(1940s) 289
shooting 163	standing 30, 121, 124, 184, 214,	356, 357, 359, 360, 361, 372	dagging 72	(1950s) 338
side-pleated 156	218, 272, 273, 352, 356, 360	court dress	Daily Express 354, 355	Dior, Christian 271, 314, 315, 316, stiffened skirts 151	standing band 104	(1720–70) 142, 143	Daily Mirror 364	317, 318–19 , 322, 325, 326, surcoats 58, 60, 61, 64, 65, 68, 69	starched 124 , 211, 265	(1770–89) 148–9, 153, 154–5	Dalí, Salvador 294, 295, 297	327, 329, 331, 332, 338, 344, swallow-tailed 182, 184	Staurt 120	(1790–1800) 169	dalmatikon 36, 37	371, 415
swing 333	stiff 224, 225	(1810s) 175	damask 45, 47, 66, 91, 208, 209,	Dior Homme 371
tail 155, 185, 224, 262, 289	tab 286	(1820s) 180	232, 233	Directoire Revival look 243
tent-shaped 230	turn-down 263	Elizabethan 97	dance crazes 222, 223, 258, 344,	disco scene 371, 372, 383
tied belts 332, 333	turned-back 106, 184	French (1574–89) 102–3	406, 407	dogale 83
top coats 184, 211	velvet 340, 341	French (1685–1720) 116, 137	dancewear, inspiration from 389	Dolce and Gabbana 386
trench coats 238, 273, 280, 291,	waterproof 216	French (1852–70) 194–5	dandies	Dolly sisters 246 , 250
303, 306, 332, 395, 411, 425	wing 211, 225, 226, 262, 289	Italian (1650s) 129	(1770–89) 152–3	Dolores 429
tuxedo-fronted 311	see also ruffs	Stuart 125, 126	(1790–1839) 164, 184–5	domino 158
Ulster 303	color	Tudor 86–9	(1960s) 368–9	Don Carlos of Spain 100
waterproof 186, 297, 356, 361	and status 34, 35, 38, 51, 55	courtly love 52, 53, 60, 61	Beau Brummel 166, 182–3	doublets 118
wide-skirted trench coats 291	symbolism 38, 108	couters/cowters 69, 93	influence on fashion 412	(1300–80) 64, 70–1
wrap 231	Columbus, Christopher 78	couture houses, 21st-century 415	New Romantics 406, 407	(1380–1450) 72, 73
wraparound style 253, 333	columnar silhouette 168, 237, 243, 326, 417	cover-ups, beach 336, 337 Cowan, John 350	Renaissance 100, 103	(1450–1500) 83, 84, 85
cochineal 39, 106			Davies, Nigel see de Villeneuve, Justin	(1500–60) 89, 90–1 , 93, 94, 95
Cochrane, Eddie 344 cocked hats 123, 136, 137,	combinations 204, 214, 215 Comme des Garçons 400, 401,	Cragmile, Kate R. 208–9 Cranach the Elder, Lucas 107	Davies, Sybil 300 day dresses	(1560–90) 100, 104 (1590–1624) 104, 105
139, 163	402–3	cravat pins 217	(1837–55) 192–3, 422	(1625–35) 118, 119
cocktail dresses	Commedia dell'Arte 108, 117, 158, 159	cravats	(1860s) 197	(1635–49) 122–3
(1920s) 199	commodes 133, 139	19th-century 210, 211	(1880s) 204, 205	(1649–60) 128, 129
(1940s) 317	Commonwealth 116, 128	(1950s) 341	(1890s) 207	(1660–80) 130
(1950–8) 322–3	Conan Doyle, Sir Arthur 265	Ascot 263	(1900–14) 228, 229	deep basque 119
(1960s) 363	Condé Nast, Mme 237	dandies 184, 185	(1920s) 252–3, 423	jacket-style 118
Cocteau, Jean 294, 297	coney fur 73	early 20th-century 224, 230	(1945–55) 316, 317	leather 110, 111
codpieces 79, 88, 89 , 90, 100, 101	Connaught, Prince Arthur of 289	lace 135, 137	(1950s) 334, 335, 422	padded 69, 73, 118
coifs 56, 60, 61, 128	Constantinople 13, 36, 37, 112	Regency 173, 187	(1970s) Jean Muir classic 378–9	paned 118, 119
mail 69	Cookman, Helen 309	Restoration 131	de Hooch, Pieter 128, 129	Saxon (mid-1600s) 90-1

tiered 131

slashed 93, 119

de Jong, Piet 23

Stuart style 210
Stuart-style 219 tabbed 118
Doucet, Jacques 215, 233, 243
Drake, Francis 97
drapery
(600–1100) 46, 47, 48, 49
(1100-1200) 52, 53, 56, 57, 59 (1200–1300) 57, 60, 61
(1300–80) 59, 64
(1380–1450) 57
(1450–1500) 81, 84
(1500–60) 86, 87
(1635–49) 124, 125 (1770–89) 156, 157
(1870–1900) 200, 201, 204, 207, 214, 215
(1900–20) 233, 236, 237, 241 (1930s) 273, 274, 276–7, 278, 286, 291, 293
(1940s) 332
(1970s) 376, 401
(1980s) 393
(1990s) 410, 411 (2000s) 417, 420
Byzantine 59
Chanel 249
cross-over (1930s) 294
Egyptian 18 empire lines (1800–9) 170–1
English drape 286
Etruscan 32, 33
Greek 24–7
New Look 325, 329
Poiret 243 Roman 34–5, 48
drawers
early 19th-century 171
late 19th-century 201, 214
medieval 57 dresses
(1200–1300) 60–1
(1625-35) 120-1
(1635–49) 124–5
(1820-30) 178–9 (1830–37) 188–9
(1914–23) 240–1
(1930s) 272, 273, 308–9
2010 onward 420, 421
A-line 62, 352, 356, 371, 376 afternoon 171, 179, 189, 207, 423 American ready-to-wear (1935–44) 308–9 amphora 319
antifashion 1901–20 236–7
baby-doll 329, 354, 363 ball 175, 181, 190, 199, 205, 395 bandage 18
beach 336
boho chic and vintage (1990–2011) 412, 413 for boys 192
chainmail (1960s) 360
chemise 156
cheongsams 319
clinging (1930s) 274, 275, 278 coat 356 cocktail 199, 317, 322–3, 363
corset 393
cote-hardie 62–3 , 64, 65
couture gowns (1950–7) 326–7 on crinolines 1856–69 196–7 dance (1950s) 344
day 192-3, 197, 204, 205, 207, 228, 229, 252–3, 316, 317, 334, 335, 378–9, 422, 423 Delphos 222, 237 dinner 179
draped jersey (1979) 401
dream dresses 1935–45 294–5
drop-waisted (1920s) 255 dual-purpose (1820s) 179 Egyptian beaded 16 empire-line 174, 377
evening 171, 174, 175, 179, 180–1,
190–1, 196, 199, 201, 205, 206, 232–3, 258–9, 274–5, 276–7, 324–7, 361, 362–3, 382, 383,
392, 393, 420

(.I feathered 245, 362, 363, 371, 417, 419
flapper 258–9
flat-chested 240, 241 folk-style 252 halter-neck 377
house 334, 335 Japanese style (1973–2008) 400, 401
Jean Muir classic 378–9 knee-length 230
knit 400
little black dress 249, 250, 322 long printed 1970–9 376–7 luncheon (1930s) 308
maxi 376-7, 380
mini 350, 352–3, 356, 357, 360, 361, 362, 363, 383, 422
modernism 267
morning 170, 175, 204
mourning 178 neoclassicism 168–9
New Look (1947–55) 316–17
off-the-shoulder 180, 181 peplos style 41
pinafore 380, 381
Poiret evening (1910) 242–43 princess-line 319
prints and patterns 188–9
promenade 189, 229
reception 208–9 sack (1950s) 314, 329, 352
sack back 117, 143, 144–5 , 146, 157 sheath 17, 293, 322, 323, 326, 327, 410, 420
shift 352, 354, 361, 363, 410 shirt 273, 423 shirtwaisters 230, 231, 316, 317, 335 sleeveless 256–7, 352, 360, 361 slip-on 256, 257, 258, 308 soft bustles (1870s) 200-1 sports 214–15, 231, 309, 411 strapless 322, 323, 326, 327, 390 suede 378–9
tank 411
tea 232–3 trapezoid 371
trouser 362
tunic 319
utility 304, 422 wedding 60–1, 74, 94, 99, 189, 193, 200, 230–1 , 317, 360, 413
World War II 304–5 see also gowns dressing gowns
padded 211
Restoration 131 dressmaking, home 188
Drian, Etienne 244 drugs MDMA (ecstasy) 406
psychedelic 374
Duchamp, Marcel 297 Duff-Gordon, Lady Lucile 233, 234
Duffy, Raoul 243
Duncan, Isadora 222, 236, 237
Duran Duran 407 Durant, Will 83
dyes and pigments
ancient world 12, 18, 34, 38–9 medieval 56 , 72
Renaissance 106
synthetic 195, 204, 211
Е
E Earhart, Amelia 280 ebony 106
eco-fashion 413

eco-fashion 413 Eden, Anthony 288 Edward III of England 45, 68 Edward VII of Great Britain 224, 226, 234, 339 Edward VIII of Great Britain 222, 223, 271, 283, 284, 286–7, 288 Edwardian era evening and tea gowns 232–3 influence on fashion 292, 340, 404, 407 life of leisure 234–5 Eglington Tournament 218 Egypt, ancient 12, 13, 16–19, 28 dyes and pigments 38, 39 influence on fashion 12, 18, 223, 245, 257 Eldorado (Berlin) 290

Eleanor of Aquitaine 54–5 élégantes 152
Elephant dress (1945) 295 Elizabeth I of England 78, 96–7 , 106, 109, 162 Elizabeth II, Queen of Great Britain 314, 315, 335
Elizabeth, the Queen Mother 292 Elizabeth of Bavaria, Empress of Austria 198
Elizabethan age 94–7, 100–1, 109 influence on fashion 178, 206, 392 Elle 354
Ellis, Perry 351, 385, 412 Elton John 372
Emanuel, David and Elizabeth 393 embonpoint 192 embroidery
(1810s) 174, 175 (1820s) 179
(1840–1900) 210, 206 (1910s) 245 (1920s) 241, 244, 245, 246,
(1920s) 241, 244, 245, 246, 257, 258 (1930s) 274, 275, 277, 293, 295
(1950s) 327 (1960s and 1970s) 363, 372, 374
(2000s) 412, 416 ancient world 12, 30, 31 Baroque and Rococo 136, 139, 143, 144, 145, 150, 151, 154–5 Byzantine 13, 36, 37
chenille 169, 247 Edwardian 232, 233 Etruscan 33 gold 257 machine 372
medieval 44, 49, 51, 52, 55, 57, 74 Ottoman 112
Renaissance 79, 88, 94, 95, 99, 100, 101, 109
tambour-style 168 emeralds 106, 327 Empress Eugénie Surrounded by her Ladies in Waiting (Winterhalter) 194–5 engageantes 157, 197
English Civil War 126, 129 English cut 264
English drape 286 Enlightenment 152 ensembles knitwear 250, 251 Renaissance 84, 88, 100, 101 environmental issues 415 epaulettes 180 ermine 65, 78, 86, 87, 97, 192, 193
Erté (Romain de Tirtoff) 243 Estevez, Luis 326 Estoile, Pierre de l' 103
Etampes, Duchesse de 86 ethnic styles 374, 376, 412
Etruscans 28, 29, 32–3 , 38 Eugénie, Empress 187, 194–5 , 199 Evangelista, Linda 408, 409
Evans, Sir Arthur 23 evening dresses/gowns (1800–09) 171
(1811–20) 174, 175 (1820–30) 179, 180–1
(1830–37) 190–1 (1850s) 196 (1870s) 201
(1870s) 201 (1880s) 205 (1890s) 206
(1901–14) 232–3 (1920s) 199, 256–7, 258–9

(1930–44) 274–5, 276–7
(1950s) 324–7
(1960s) 361, 362–3 (1970s) 382, 383
(1970s) 382, 383 (1980s) 392, 393
(2012) 420
eye makeup
(1960s) 353, 354, 373
Egyptian 12, 13, 16, 18 Minoan 20, 21
Minoan 20, 21
eyelets 63, 71 eyelets, hand-punched 378, 379
eyelets, fland-punched 378, 379
Г
F
The Fair Nun Unmasked (Morland)
159 fancy backs 302
fans (1790–1800) 168
(1800–9) 171
(1820–30) 181
(1880s) 205
(1900–14) 229
(1920s) 247 , 291
Baroque and Rococo 132, 133
Renaissance 94 fantasy, Renaissance 108–9
Farrin, Mary 380
farthingales 78, 120, 126, 423, 433
French 79, 98
Spanish 80, 86, 95
Fashion Group International 403 fashion shoots 350, 409
Fassett, Kaffe 350
Fath, Jacques 323
feathers
boas 291
on bonnets 170, 171, 428, 429 on caps 92, 122, 170, 175, 204 on ceremonial garments 28 on cloaks/capes 107, 364 on dresses 245, 362, 363, 371, 417, 419
embroidered 295
on fans 247, 291
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fiin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 81, 87, 89, 95, 98, 108, 113 flappers 18, 222, 223, 255,
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 81, 87, 89, 95, 98, 108, 113 flappers 18, 222, 223, 255, 258–9, 354
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 81, 87, 89, 95, 98, 108, 113 flappers 18, 222, 223, 255, 258–9, 354 flaps, pleated 143
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 81, 87, 89, 95, 98, 108, 113 flappers 18, 222, 223, 255, 258–9, 354 flaps, pleated 143 Flashdance 389
on fans 247, 291 in hair 181, 233 on hats 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 171, 175, 178, 189, 206, 229, 234, 241, 244, 330, 428, 429 on headdresses 169, 179, 180, 190, 219, 244 protective 28 shoulder detail 382 on skirts 246, 247, 290 on turbans 112 fencing 347 Feragamo, Salvatore 416 Ferdinand of Tirol, Archduke 89 Ferré, Gianfranco 319 fez 113 fibulae 13, 34 fichu 163 fichu-pelerine 178 Fifth Avenue 308 fillets 48, 49, 52, 60, 61, 64 fin-de-siècle style 206 Firebird (Stravinsky) 245 Fish, Michael 367 fitness boom 388–9 Fitz-Simon, Stephen 364 Fitzroy, Augustus Henry, 3rd Duke of Grafton 153 flamenco 329 Flanders lace-making 118, 124, 132 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 81, 87, 89, 95, 98, 108, 113 flappers 18, 222, 223, 255, 258–9, 354 flaps, pleated 143

flounces 142, 143, 146, 147, 191, 257, 327 flower power 372, 374–5 flowers
artificial 246, 247
embroidered 252
in hair 174, 181
on hats 178, 189, 197, 252
silk 234 Foale, Marion 350, 359
Fogarty, Anne 317
folds, natural 84
folksy style 412
Fonda, Jane 361, 388
Fonteray, Jacques 361
Fonteyn, Margot 319
fops 152 Ford, Tom 286, 371, 425
Fortuny, Mariano 222, 237, 245
foulards 257
Four-Leaf Clover gown (1953) 327 fox fur 73, 272, 291, 305
Foxton, Bruce 405
France
(1778-89) 146-7
(1810s) 174, 175
(1820–30) 180, 181 (1837-55) 192
(1870s) 201
(1880s) 204
(1900–14) 228, 229
(1914–23) 240, 241
(1940s) 302, 310, 311
1950s couture gowns 326, 327
Baroque and Rococo 116, 117,
120, 123, 128, 130, 131, 132,
137, 138, 142, 143, 144–5, 146–7, 148–9, 150, 151, 154–5
146–7, 148–9, 150, 151, 154–5, 156, 157, 160–1, 163
Christian Dior 318–19
costume dress 219
Jean Paul Gaultier 394–5
medieval age 47, 49, 52, 53, 57, 61, 64, 69, 72, 74, 75
New Look 316, 317, 322, 323
Renaissance 80, 81, 84, 86, 88, 89, 95, 99, 101, 102–3, 105, 110, 111
Revolution 149
robes de style (1920-9) 246-7
Second Empire 194–5, 199
streamlined court suit (1780) 154–5
youth 302, 345
Yves Saint Laurent 370–1
see also Burgundy; Paris
François I of France 78 Franks 46, 47
Franz Joseph I, Emperor of Austria 227
Fratini, Gina 354
Freed, Alan 314
freedom of movement 214
Freeman, Gillian 343
French Riviera 260
Freud, Bella 364 Freud, Sigmund 294
frills
(1960s) 363
(1970s) 377
Baroque and Rococo 147, 154
early Victorian 192
medieval 48
New Romantics 390 fringes fringes beaded 256
fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, 186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262, fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, 186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262, 263, 333, 369, 424 fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, 186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262, 263, 333, 369, 424 frogging 185, 205, 241 fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, 186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262, 263, 333, 369, 424 frogging 185, 205, 241 Froitzheim, Otto 227
fringes beaded 256 on dresses 139, 180, 200, 201, 257, 259, 274, 290 hair 61, 123, 124, 205 on jackets 374 frock coats 116, 150, 151, 152, 153, 156, 157, 163, 173, 184, 185, 186, 211, 224, 225, 234, 262, 263, 333, 369, 424 frogging 185, 205, 241

coats 264, 315, 332, 333, 371	From Glamour to Utility	Grange, Harold "Red" 264	Greek 25	Cossack-style 311
collars 175, 238, 253, 267,	(1930–47) 272–311	Grant, Cary 270	medieval 47, 49, 52, 55, 57, 60,	costume 219
272, 347	time line 268–269	greasers 404	61, 64, 65, 73	creased crown (1950s) 339
cuffs 175, 244, 272, 333 fake 353, 367, 382	glasses horn-rimmed 265	greaves 69 Greek Orthodoxy 58, 59	Minoan 20, 21, 32 mohican 404	crushed crown (1940) 304 curled brim 216
hats 123, 128	see also sunglasses	Greeks, ancient 13, 24–7 , 41	mop top 367	dandies 184–5
linings 61, 65, 72, 73, 74, 80, 81,	Glastonbury 413	armor 28–9	mullet 383	derby 225, 265
86, 95, 106, 107, 112, 113	globalization 386, 387, 415	influence on fashion 12, 170,	neoclassical 168, 169	draped 72, 238
muffs 168 "necklace" (1940) 305	gloves Baroque and Rococo 123	213, 236, 237, 276–7, 278, 392, 395, 417	padded 146 permanent waves 272	feathered 75, 93, 95, 107, 111, 131, 136, 137, 153, 157, 175, 178, neckties 305	buckskin 184	medieval 58	pointed 99	189, 206, 229, 241, 244, 330
shawls 252	cocktail 322	pigments and dyes 38	"pouf" 149	fedora 225, 303, 406, 412
trimming 64, 87, 97, 170, 175, 243, 272, 346	kid leather 169, 175, 201 long 229	Renaissance 113 green dyes and pigments 38, 39	powdered 146, 152, 157 gueue 152	felt 131 fisherman's 421
wartime rationing 305	long evening 169, 171, 232, 362	Greenaway, Peter 395	Renaissance 95	floppy felt 364
wraps 383	motoring 281	Grès, Madame 276 , 322	Roman 34	fur 123, 128
furbelows 139	Regency 173	Greve, Wilhelm 212–13	side parting 216	Garter 137
Furness, Lord 289	Renaissance 94, 104 spiky gauntlets 272	gros de Naples 180 grosgrain 316, 322	spiked 405 tocas de cabos 87	halo 305 henin 158
	tabbed 120	Grumelli, Gian Gerolamo 101	tonsure 36, 44, 57	high felt cone 72
G	goatskin 178	grunge 387, 412 , 420	top knot 125, 205, 206	high-crowned 129, 146, 311
Gagelin, Maison (Paris) 199	godets 308	Gucci 329, 363, 371, 415, 417, 419	victory roll 299	homburg 224, 264, 265, 288,
Gainsborough, Thomas 157 gaiters	Godfrey, Oscar 226 Goethe, J.W. von 153, 157, 219	"guerilla" pop-up stores 403 Guinness, Gloria 327	World War II 298 half-mourning 204	289, 303, 338, 339 hunting 163
canvas 299	going-away outfits 214, 251	Gundestrup 29	Hall, Jerry 409	jauntily angled 304, 306
cycling 215	gold 17	gussets 70, 71	Halston Frowick, Roy 351, 382	knit 380
leather 216, 217 motorcycle 226	gold thread 20, 36, 51, 55, 58,		Hamnett, Katherine 413	Mandarin-style 31 medieval 57, 72
Gallenga, Maria 245	59, 85, 94, 97, 98, 100, 361 Golden Twenties (Berlin) 290	Н	Han Dynasty 31 Hand, Josef 431	military-style 366
Galliano, John 319, 387, 393,	golf wear 162, 226, 231, 281,	H&M 385, 403	handbags see bags	Minoan 20, 21
413, 416	283, 347	H. Huntsman & Sons 368	handkerchiefs	opera 185
galloon 130, 131, 136, 162	gollars 86 Gone with the Wind (movie) 271,	habit à la française 154–5 habits	in breast pocket 211, 225, 286, 338, 368	Panama 265
Garbo, Greta 297, 306 garçonne look 243, 252, 255, 354	292	1900–14 228	"buffon" 168, 186	Parliamentarian 129 pillbox 306, 330
Gardner, Ava 332	gorgets 119	Regency sportswear 186, 187	lace 118, 193, 197	porkpie 302, 339, 406
garters	Gorringes 251	women's sportswear (1870–1900)	medieval 45	Prince Charlie 162
Baroque and Rococo 131, 137, 153	gothic style 80, 81, 176, 179, 190, 405	214–15 haik 18	mourning 178 Renaissance 94	race day 215 Renaissance 111, 113
medieval 48	goths 384, 404, 405	haincelin 72	Hanoverian era 136–43, 150–3,	riding 346
Renaissance 104, 105	gowns	haircombs 191	156–7, 168–91, 218–19	rolled brim 265
women's (1900–16) 230	(1100–1200) 52, 53	hairnets 60, 61, 95	harem pants 243, 245, 367	Scotch bonnet 162
Garthwaite, Anna Maria 116, 117 gathering 214	(1200–1300) 61 (1389–1450) 66–7, 74–5, 423	hairpieces 229 hairstyles	Harlem Dancer 244 Harlequin 158, 159	sea captain's 280 shako 159, 174
Gaultier, Jean Paul 97, 297, 384, 387,	(1450-1500) 80–1, 83, 423	(1450–1500) 78, 81, 84, 87	Harlow, Jean 270, 275, 306	slouch 306
392, 393, 394–5 , 417	(1500–60) 86–7	(1500–60) 88	Harper's Bazaar 294, 311, 316, 319	soft-brimmed 381
gauntlets 60, 93, 104, 119, 272, 281 gauze 173	(1560–90) 94–5 (1625–35) 120–1	(1590–1625) 99, 104 (1625–35) 118, 119, 121, 126	Hartnell, Norman 304, 310, 317 Harvey, Gary 413	sombrero 121 Spanish-style 61
gay culture 290, 406	(1660–80) 132–3	(1635–49) 123, 124, 125	Hasidic Jews 395	stovepipe 174, 211, 210
gemstones 17, 31, 121, 232, 249	(1720–70) 142–3	(1649–60) 129	Hathaway, Anne 417	straw 57, 72, 73, 163, 168, 200, gender bending 395	(1778–89) 149	(1660–80) 132, 133	hat pins 206, 229	207, 229, 240, 251, 253, 309,
Genoa 120 geometric shapes 98–9, 104, 360	(1830–44) 276–7 (1920s) 256–7	(1681–1720) 138 (1720–70) 150, 151, 160	hats 200 years of women's 428–9	337, 401, 428, 429 straw boaters 211, 214, 215, 217,
George II of Great Britain 143	(1950–57) 326–7	(1778–89) 146, 147, 149, 152,	(1450–1500) 80 , 85	231, 265, 341
George III of Great Britain 117, 153	ball 175, 181, 190, 199, 205, 395	153, 156, 157	(1500–60) 88, 89	sugarloaf 73, 123
George IV of Great Britain 178, 180, 182	bouffant 190 Byzantine 36	(1800–9) 170, 171 (1810c) 175	(1560–90) 100, 101 (1590–1624) 104	surrealist 294 tasseled 378
georgette 252	classical (1930-44) 276–7	(1810s) 175 (1820–30) 180, 181	(1635–45) 122, 123	tea 429
Georgian era 136–43, 150–3, 156–7	couture gowns (1950-7) 326-7	(1870s) 165, 200, 201	(1660–85) 130, 131	tilted 179, 201
costume dress 218–19	dinner 233	(1920s) 240, 250, 255	(1685–1720) 136, 137	top 182, 184, 185, 186, 210,
Germany Baroque and Rococo 120, 157	Elizabethan 97 empire-line 170–1, 173, 232, 329	(1930s) 272, 291, 308 (1950s) men's 339, 340	(1778–89) 149 1820s women's 178 , 179	224, 225, 262, 263, 288 toque 175, 231, 240, 241,
Berliner chic 1917–35 290–1	evening 232–3, 256–7, 274–5,	(1950s) teenage 345	1900–14 women's 229	272, 291
formal wear for men 211	276–7	(1950s) women's 346, 347	1920s 265	toreador-style 330
knights 68, 69, 93 Landsknecht 93	figure-hugging 52, 53 knee-length (1920s) 256–7	(1960s) men's 367, 369 (1960s) women's 354, 357, 361	1930s women's 272, 273 1950s men's 339	tricorne 136, 151, 153, 157, 158, 162, 244, 309
medieval 61, 68	laced 81	(1980–2012) 396, 397, 404, 405,	1950s Men's 339 1950s women's 330	trilby 265, 283, 429
Renaissance 80, 86, 89, 90-1, 93,	Letty Lynton (1932) 292, 293, 306	407, 412	ancient oriental 31	turban-style 332, 429
95, 101, 107	mantua 116, 132, 133, 138–9,	à la ninon 175	Assyrian-style 58	Tyrolean style 273, 299, 308
women 1880s 205 Gernreich, Rudi 360	140–1, 142–3, 159 middle-class Renaissance 111	à la Titus 170, 171 ancient 14, 15	beanie 412 berets 83, 162, 309, 330, 396,	veiled 206, 320, 322 wide-brimmed 128, 130, 131,
Gert, Valeska 290	morning 168	antifashion 236	397, 429	136, 157, 184, 207, 217, 241,
Ghesquière, Nicolas 329	neoclassical 168–9	Apollo knot 180, 181	bergère (shepherdess) 200, 428	252, 253
Giacometti, Alberto 294, 297 Gibb, Bill 351, 376	open front 95, 219 red carpet 2002–11 416–17	bobs 240, 241, 247, 255, 357 bouffant 361	black felt 341	see also bonnets; caps hauberk (mail tunic) 69
Gibson, Charles Dana 232	Regency 173, 174–5	braiding 55	bowler 210, 225, 265, 338, 407 brimless 231, 240, 241	Hawes, Elizabeth 275, 294
Gibson Girl 232	romantic nostalgia (1930–44)	Byzantine 59	brimmed 238, 239, 240	Hayworth, Rita 319
Gieves and Hawkes 419	292–3	crop style 354	capotaine-style 128	Head, Edith 306, 314
Gigli, Romeo 419 giornea 81	tea 232–3 V-neck 80, 81	cropped 250 dandies 184, 185	captain's 392 cartwheel 319, 330	headbands 60, 61, 64, 244 headdresses
girdles 432, 433	v-neck 80, 81 vestas 83	dandles 184, 185 dreadlocks 407	chaperons 72, 73	(1380–1450) 45, 66–7, 74, 75
(1920s) 252	wedding 60-1, 74, 94, 99, 189,	dyed 383	cloche 223, 240, 241, 245, 250,	(1450–1500) 80 , 81
New Look 316	193, 200, 230–1 , 317, 360, 413	early Victorian 193	251, 252, 267, 272, 330, 429	(1500–60) 86, 87
see also sashes and girdles Gish, Lilian 237	wrapping 139 see also dresses	Edwardian 234 Elizabethan 97	with cockade 153 cocked 136, 137, 139, 163	(1800–9) 171 (1820s) 179
Givenchy, Hubert de 317, 326, 329,	Graham, Thomas, Baron Lynedoch	Eton crop 223, 255	cocktail 322, 330, 429	(1830s) 190, 191
362, 419, 428	151	Etruscan 32, 33	coke 265	(1837–55) 193
Gladstone, William Ewart 164, 217 glam rock 383	le grand habit 116, 142 Grand Tour 117, 150, 152	forelocks 339, 340, 404, 405	conical/cylindrical 45, 80, 109	(1890s) 206 (1960s) 360
giaili luck 202	Graniu 10ui 117, 130, 132	greased 340	coolie 319	(1960s) 360

hipsters 340-1 Hitchcock, Alfred 314, 419 H.J. Nicoll 231 Hobe, Jacob 290 hockey wear 281 Hoffman, Josef 237 Holbein the Younger, Hans 88, 111 holes, random 401, 403 Hollar, Wenceslas 124 Hollywood 222, 262, 263, 270, 288, 289, 306-7, 314, 315, 323, 332, 339, 342-3, 346, 361, 364, 376, 416-17 Holt, Arden 218 Holy Roman Empire 44, 48 hooded tops 337 hoodies 406 hoods ancient 28 French 86, 87, 95, 97 fur-lined 73 fur-trimmed 346 made from scarves 139 medieval 56, 57, 72 Renaissance 81, 86, 97, 110 riding 138 sweatshirt 389, 406 with tails 56, 57, 64, 72, 85 hoops 86, 117, 140, 141, 142, 146, 157, 169, 180, 246, 433 Hope, Thomas 32, 33 hoplites 28 Horn of Plenty (McQueen) 418, 419 Hornby, Lesley see Twiggy Horowitz, Adam 406 Horrockses 335 horsehair net 295 hose footed 65, 73 full-bottomed 72 laced to doublet 73 leather-soled 64, 70, 90 medieval 49, 52, 53, 56, 61, 65, 70-1, 72, 73 Renaissance 83, 84, 85, 88, 89, 90-1, 92, 93, 100, 101, 105, 111. 219 silk 184 striped/banded 92, 93 trunk 90, 100, 118, 218 hot pants 382 houppelandes 64, 66, 72, 73, 74, 75, 80 hourglass shape 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 House of Creed 228 House of Dereon 416 House of Dior 319, 387, 395 House of Doucet 233, 243 House of Douillet 246 House of Drécoll 229 House of Fontenoy 366 House of Grès 276 House of Lanvin 295, 361 House of Louiseboulanger 247 House of Lucien Lelong 319 House of Lucile 222, 233 House of Mybor 246 House of Paquin 222, 223, 233 House of Patou 326 House of Torrente 382 House of Weeks 232 House of Worth 199, 232, 243, 244, 247 house dresses 334, 335 housewives (1950s) 334–5 Howell, Margaret 412 Hoyningen-Huene, George 278-9 Hughes, Howard 275 Huguenots 116, 117 Hulanicki, Barbara 350, 364, 373 Hung On You 369 Hungary 113, 159 hunting wear 60, 64, 163, 186,

Hussars 159

Hutchinson, Colonel 129 Hutton, E.F. 260 Hyde, Anne, Duchess of York 133 Ibiza 406 iconography, Renaissance 108, 109 Iggy Pop 404 Ilincic, Roksanda 421 Incorporated Society of London Fashion Designers 304 incroyables 185, 218 India, influence on fashion 190, 213, 374, 376, 377 indie kids 404 indigo 38, 39 industrial revolution 166 Infanta silhouette (Balenciaga) 329 Iron Age 14, 41 Irvine, Shirley June Fry 347 Irving, Sir Henry 219 Isabella Clara Eugenia, Infanta 99 Islamic styles 45, 58, 59, 83 Isola, Maija 350 Italian Futurists 266 Italy Baroque and Rococo 120, 129, 158, 159 Elsa Schiaparelli 296-7 lightweight suits (1950s) 338 masquerade 158, 159 medieval age 53, 56, 57, 64, 65, 72, 73, 74, 75, 423 Missoni 381 postwar 314 . Renaissance 81, 82–3, 84, 85, 87, 88, 93, 94, 95, 100, 101, 108, 112 shoe design 309 see also Venice It's A Jungle Out There (McQueen) 419 ivory 106, 205 jabot 152, 154, 208 Jack the Ripper Stalks His Victims (McQueen) 419 iackets alpaca dinner spencer 373 ancient Chinese 30 balloon 329 baseball 389 basketball 406 belted 424 biker-style 371 blazers 216, 217, 282, 283 bomber 406, 407 braid-trimmed collarless 249 bustled 419 caraco 117, 163 close-fitting, waisted (1920) 264 coach 406 collarless 331 dinner 289 dolman 159 double-breasted 289, 302, 303, 331, 338, 341, 366, 425 down 346 drape 286, 340, 341, 404 fingertip 341 fitted box 368 flying 280 golf 162 half-sleeve 330 hunting 217 knit (1970s) 381 leather 280, 343, 344, 371, 395, 405, 406 linen 425 loden 227 long-line 302-3, 339, 396, 425 loose or cardigan 249 lounge 211 men's 1950-55 338, 339 mess 289

military-style 187, 366

mini (1960s) 356

Norfolk 224

over crinolines 196 oversized 389, 401 padded shoulders 396, 397, 398–9 paletot 216 paneled and draped (1950) 331 reefer 211 riding 132, 186, 187 safari 371 shooting 217 single-breasted 216, 302, 303, 368 ski 346 spencer 171, 174, 178, 187, 373 sports 217, 282, 283, 286 suede 374 tailless 289 tailed 214 Turkish-style 160 tuxedos 224, 286, 338, 371 tweed 226, 286, 369 unstructured 401 waterproof 283 wax 405 windbreaker 343 women's (1900-14) 228, 229, 230 women's (1920s) 255 women's (1948-59) 330-1 women's 1980-2012 396, 397 women's sportswear (1870-1900) 214, 215 World War II 299 Jackson, Betty 249 Jacobs, Marc 385 jaconet 189 Jaeger 283, 310 Jaeger, Dr 214 Jagger, Bianca 373, 382 Jagger, Mick 182, 382, 383 The Jam 405 Jamaica 406, 407 James Bond 395 James, Charles 293, 294, 311, 324–5, 326, 327, 330 James I of England 104, 118 Jane and Jane 362 Japan ancient 12, 30-1 gothic 405 influence on Western fashion 213, 244 Japanese style 1973–2008 400–1 Rei Kawakubo 402–3 youth 344 Japonism 244 Jazz Age 254–5, 258 influence on fashion 340, 341 see also Belle Epoque and Jazz Age J.C. Penney 222, 335, 350 jeans 314, 340, 343, 344, 345, 372, 373, 374, 424, 425 cuff 345 distressed 406 drainpipe 344 hipster 359 ripped 404 rolled 404 stonewashed 389 Wranglers 345 Jensen, Karin 360 jerkins (1450-1500) 83, 425 (1500–60) 88, 89 (1560-90) 100, 101 (1650s) 129 leather 119, 129 Renaissance-style 218 Stuart 119 jersey 249, 380 iersevs cycling 407 see also knitwear; pullovers; sweaters jewelry (1950s) 327

(1960s) 361

dandies 185

Byzantine 36, 37

costume 249, 327

Baroque and Rococo 121

Egyptian 13, 16, 17 Elizabethan 97 Etruscan 32 in hair 181 medieval 46, 47, 49 Minoan 20, 21, 23 prehistoric 15 Regency 175 Renaissance female 106, 107 Renaissance male 100, 103, 104, 107 see also pearls Jewish styles 45, 58, 59, 83 Jil Sander-Uniqlo 397 jitterbug 344, 345 jive 344 Joan of Arc 45 jodhpurs 238, 280 Johnson, Beverly 381 Jolibois 247 Jones, Inigo 109, 126 Jones, Stephen 429 Jonson, Ben 126 Jourdan, Charles 416 jousting 68, 93 Jovovich, Mila 417 Juan II of Portugal 85 Juan-les-Pins 260 Judith, Countess of Flanders 48 Juicy Couture 389 jumpers (see sweaters) 226, 298 cricket 389 turtleneck 352, 359 see also knitwear; pullovers; sweaters jumpsuits 372, 373, 382, 383, 410 jupon 68 Just Looking (boutique) 359 Justinian I, Emperor 26

kabbadion 58 kabuki costumes 400 KaDeWe (Kaufhaus des Westerns) 290 kaftans (1910s) 237 (1970s) 377 African-style 243 hippies 374 Ottoman 112, 113 Persian 59 Sassanid 31 kalasiris 16, 18 Kamali, Norma 388 Kaminari zoku (Thunder Tribe) 344 Kane, Christopher 420, 421 Kane, Tammy 421 Karan, Donna 386, 387, 388, 396 Karsavina, Tamara Platnovna 245 kataseista 36 Katrantzou, Mary 421 kaunakes 15, 21 Kawakubo, Rei 243, 400, 401, 402-3 Kelly, Grace 314, 315, 320, 346, 431 Kennan, George Frost 338 Kennedy, Jacqueline 249, 314, 320, 333, 373 Kennedy, John F. 315, 333 Kerouac, Jack 314 Kestos 277 key chains 302

402–3
Kelly, Grace 314, 315, 320, 346, 431
Kennan, George Frost 338
Kennedy, Jacqueline 249, 314, 320, 333, 373
Kennedy, John F. 315, 333
Kenouac, Jack 314
Kestos 277
key chains 302
khaki 298, 299, 300–1
Khan, Charles S. 430 Khanh, Emmanuelle 354
kick lines 290, 291
Kidman, Nicole 329
Kilgour French & Stanbury 289
kimonos 30, 31, 213, 243, 245, 400
King's Road 359, 404
Kirkwood, Nicholas 416 kirtles
medieval 48, 49, 62, 75
Renaissance 81, 86, 87, 111
Klein, Calvin 373, 386, 396, 410
Klimt, Gustav 237

exotic 211

men's (1840-1900) 210, 211 resort wear (1950-61) 336-7 see also sportswear Lelong, Lucien 306, 310, 319 Lely, Sir Peter 133 Lenglen, Suzanne 250, 261 Léon 61 leopard skin, faux 333, 353 Léotard, Jules 217 leotards 217, 388 Lesage 297 Leser, Tina 314 Let It Rock 390 Letty Lynton gown (1932) 270, 292, 293, 306 Levi's 373 Lewis, Jerry 339 Leyendecker, J.C. 262 Libération collection (Saint Laurent) Liberty & Co. 167, 213, 237 Liberty, Arthur Lazenby 213 Lido pajamas260 La Ligne Muguet (1954) 327 linen 16, 56, 110, 128 lingerie (1920s) 252 early 20th-century 228 Linhart, Georgina 383 checked and tartan 216 contrasting colors 272 fur 61, 65, 72, 73, 74, 80, 81, 86, 95, 106, 107, 112, 113 luxurious fabric 210 visible 257 Linley, Elizabeth 156 liripipe 56, 57, 72, 85 Little Ice Age 73 livery 84 Lobster dress (1937) 294 loincloths Minoan 20, 21 Nubian 15 Roman 35 London, Regency 182 London cut 288 London Fashion Week 381 London look 356 longbowmen 68 Lord & Taylor 308, 314 Los Angeles 271, 302 Louboutin, Christian 416, 426 Louis VII of France 55 Louis XIII of France 123 Louis XIV of France 116, 117, 130, 131, 132, 137 Louis XV of France 142, 160 Louis XVI of France 149 Louis the Pious 47 Love, Diane 430 Lowe, Marcus 265 lunulae 15 lurex 361, 367 lutestring 180 Luttrell Psalter 56 luxuries, trade in 106-7 Lycra 315, 382, 383, 388

lynx 78, 107 M macaronis 116, 152–3, 185 McCardell, Claire 249, 308, 309, 314, 335 McCartney, Stella 371, 389 mackinaws 231 McLaren, Malcolm 350, 390, 404, 407 McLuhan, Marshall 374 McNicoll, Carol 382 McQueen, Alexander 97, 384, 418–19 McSharry, Deirdre 354 Macv's 306 Madame de Pompadour (van Loo) 160-1 Madonna 384, 385, 389, 395

Maes, Nicolaes 128 mail 28, 68, 69, 360 maillot 217 Mainbocher 270, 275 Maison Fourrures Max 267 make do and mend 305 makeup doll-like 401 eye 12, 13, 16, 18, 20, 21, 353, 354, 373 "making a leg" 104, 105 Malcolm X 341 male models 369 Malibu 260, 266 mancherons 176 Mango 415 mannequins 199 Mansfield, Jayne 323 mantillas 193 mantles Byzantine 59 Japanese-style (1909) 244 medieval 46, 47, 48, 49, 53, 61, 65 Renaissance 99, 111 mantua gowns 116, 132, 133, 138-9, 140-1, 142-3, 159 Marais, Jean 294 Marchesa label 319, 417 Margaret, Princess 317, 319 Margiela, Martin 97, 410, 411 Margueritte, Victor 252, 255 Maria of Austria, Empress 87 Marie-Antoinette, Queen 117, 147, 148-9, 195 Marie-Thérèse, Queen of France 132 Marimekko 350, 372 Marks & Spencer 354 Marshall & Snelgrove 241 Marshall, Mary 346 marten fur 73, 305 Martin, Dean 339 Marty, André 246 Mary I of England 87 masks ancient oriental 30 Baroque and Rococo 158, 159 Etruscan-Corinthian 29 Venetian 108 masquerade 117, 158–9 masques 99, 108, 109, 126, 218 massproduction 308 mature women, promoting 354 Maxwell, Vera 309 measurements 195 Medieval Romance and Trade (600-1449) 42-75 time line 44-5 Mediterranean 52, 58 Melly, George 359 Men's Dress Reform Party (MDRP) 283 menswear, 3000 years of 424-5 Mephistopheles 219 merchant class see middle class metallic thread 151, 247, 253, 275, 327 metalworking 68 Metternich, Princess Pauline 199 Michaheles, Ernesto 266 middle class 19th-century 166, 188 Edwardian 234 medieval 60, 72 postwar 322 Renaissance 110, 111 Middle Eastern influence 244, 245

Middleton, Kate see Cambridge,

Duchess of migrations, age of 46–7 Milan 384, 401

English Civil War 129 inspiration of 288, 330 medieval knights 68–9

Les Mignons 103

military dress

Byzantine 37

fashion for 153

Scottish soldiers 29 see also armor Millar, Gertie 233 Miller, Lee 290 Miller, Sienna 413 Mini-Crin 390 mink 95, 106, 107 Minoan civilization 13, 20–3 The Miracle of the Relic of the True Cross (Carpaccio) 82-3 Mirman, Simone 428 Miss Modern 272, 272 Missoni 381 mix-and-match collections 380 Miyake, Issey 400, 401 Miyake Design Studio 400 mod image 354 mod revival 404, 405, 406 modernism 243, 249, 255, 266–7, 275, 290 Moholy-Nagy, Laszlo 266 Mollison, Amy Johnson 280 Molyneux, Edward 256, 305 Monasterio de las Huelgas (Burgos) 61 Mondrian, Piet 350, 371 Monet, Claude 213 monks/monasticism 36, 48, 83 monobosom 228, 229, 234 Monreale Cathedral, Palermo 36 Monroe, Marilyn 323 Mont, Vera 392 Montagu, Lady Mary Wortley 160 Montana, Claude 397 Monte-Sano 310 Moors 44, 58, 61 Moralioglu, Erdem 421 Morgen, Heinrich Joachim von 283 Mori, Hanae 400 Morland, Henry 159 morning dresses/gowns (1790s) 168 (1810s) 175 (1811–20) 170 (1880s) 204 Morris, Jane 214 Moschino 297 Moser, Koloman 236 Moss, Kate 413, 414–15 Moss Bros 298 mother-of-pearl 205 Motley 277 Motor Corps 239 motor racing 283 motorcycling 226, 343, 371, 3 90, 404 motoring wear 230 mountaineering 231 mourning wear 178, 196, 204 mousseline de soie 234, 292 movies, influence of 222, 255, 270, 275, 282, 286, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 297, 306, 306-7, 314, 315, 323, 331, 332, 339, 341, 342-3, 346, 361, 376, 389, 395, 416-17, 419 movie stars 222, 255, 262, 263, 270, 275, 282, 286, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 297, 306-7, 314, 315, 323, 331, 332, 339, 341, 342-3, 346, 361, 376, 389, 416-17 moygashel 304 mss 16 muffs 125, 168, 178, 192, 231 Mugler, Thierry 392, 398-9 Muir, Jean 359, 362, 378-9 multiculturalism 395 mummers 158 Munn, Charles 283 music festivals 351, 405, 413 muslin 168, 169, 173, 195 mustaches The Beatles 360 early 20th-century 225 handlebar 14, 366

Norman 49

mess dress 289

Scythian 14 spivs 302

Muthesius, Anna 236 ΝO nankeens 210 Naples 65 Napoleon, Emperor 164, 170 Napoleon III, Emperor 195, 199 Napoleonic Wars 174 naturalism 98 nautical styles 215, 280, 353 neck gorget 69 neck cloths 182 neckerchiefs 156, 170, 187 necklines arched 81 asymmetric 416 boat 65, 190, 295, 320-1, 335 bust level 94 cowl 273, 278, 326, 364 curved 63 deep (men's) 338 draped 293 drawstring 156, 168 extended V 376 folded 327 frilled 378, 379 gathered 378 halter neck 275, 277, 309, 337, 352, 377, 382, 383 high 94, 99, 234, 275, 377 keyhole 48 low, round 98, 146, 247 plunging 361 Regency low, wide 173 rolled-edge 335 rollneck 368 round 256 rounded 80 scoop 74, 121, 237, 344 square 61, 81, 86, 140, 200, 344, 377 straight 86, 241 swimsuit-style 417 turtleneck 280, 352, 367, 371, 421 V- 52, 53, 74, 80, 81, 193, 251, 253, 258, 261, 264, 275, 310, 352, 367, 381 wide 74, 219, 362 zipped 308 see also décolletage neck pieces, fox 291 Nefertari, Queen 13, 16 Nefertiti, Queen 18-19 Neiman Marcus 293 Neo-Edwardian style 338 neoclassicism 150, 174, 176 (1790–1800) 164, 168–9, 190 (1930–44) 276–9 net 173, 295, 322, 323, 327 Netherlands Baroque and Rococo 118, 120, 121, 124, 128, 129 medieval age 73, 74, 75 Renaissance 80, 100, 110, 111 see also Flanders New Look (1947–55) 271, 314, 316–17, 319, 322, 325, 329, 330, 344 New Model Army 129 New Romantics 390, 406, 407 New Wave 406 New World, discovery of the 78, 79, 106, 107 New York (1980–2011) 384 Fifth Avenue 308 postwar 325, 350 ready-to-wear 270 New York Dolls 350, 404 Nichol, S.S. 226 nightgowns, Baroque and Rococo 131, 138, 139

Nihilism (McQueen) 419

Nirvana 387

				INDEX
1.99		("W" 262		1 (6 + 244
nobility French 146, 147	overtunics medieval 58, 60, 61	narrow fitting 262 Ottoman 112	geometric 12, 237, 251, 252, 253, 258, 266, 267, 357, 362,	bouffant 344 eiderdown feather 204
medieval 51, 60	neoclassical 168	oxford bags 283	367, 380	farthingale 80, 86, 95, 98, Restoration 135	Ozbek, Rifat 385	padded 69	gingham 316, 364, 413, 423	120, 126
nomadic peoples 30, 31	_	pegged 302, 303, 340, 341	"granny" prints 364	flounced 146, 147
Norell, Norman 330, 350	P	pleated 262, 285, 289, 303, 338	harlequin 267	hooped 140, 141, 157
Normans 44, 49, 51, 59, 68 nosegays 147, 168	■ padding	Regency 173 Renaissance 100	Hawaiian 336 herringbone 311	multiple layers 192 neoclassical 169
Nostalgia of Mud (Westwood) 390	breeches 104, 218	side-closure 281, 298	hippy 374	New Look 316, 322, 323
Nouveau Réalisme movement 315	bulbous 403	skater-style 412	Islamic 112	pleated 144, 157
Nubians 15	chest 64, 184, 211	slacks 346	Japanese 213	princess 200
Nutter, Tommy 182, 369	collars 176	stirrup pants 346	medieval 48, 66	quilted 219
nylon 271, 315 Obama, Michelle 385, 420	cuffs 176, 177 doublets 69, 73, 118	tapered 225, 264, 338 tight-fitting 366, 367, 368, 369	mi-parti 45, 62, 84 Minoan 20	Renaissance 95, 98, 99, 109, 110 short length 219
ocher dyes 39	dressing gowns 211	track pants 347	paisley 366, 377	Stuart 126
Oldfield, Bruce 393	hairstyles 146	tracksuit bottoms 388	plaids 216, 272, 286, 345	tin-weighted 206
Oliverian clothing 129	hips 316	pantsuits 359, 371, 372,	polka dot 165, 352	waist 188
ombré effect 411 Onassis, Jackie see Kennedy,	peascod belly 100, 105 shoulders 88, 89, 100, 306, 310,	373, 382 white ducks 282, 283	pop art 352 psychedelic 353, 354, 374	Peyton, Lady Margaret 81 Philip II of Spain 78, 93, 100
Jacqueline	340, 366, 382, 393, 396, 397,	wide-legged 283, 302–3, 338, 396	Renaissance 108–9	Philo, Phoebe 420, 421
opera wear	398–9	women's leisure and sports 260,	Russian folk 241	Picabia, Francis and Gaby 297
(1820–30) 181, 185	skirts 146	261, 280, 281, 346	sawtooth 267	Piccolomini, Ottavio 129
(1901–14) 225, 245	sleeves 206	women's wartime 298	scrolls 276, 277	pickadil 118
(1920s) 262 Opéra-Ballet Russes collection	small of back 188, 189 pants 69	women's wide-bottomed 249, 261, 280	small prints (1940s) 305 stripes 37, 152, 175, 179, 251,	picnicking 214 Picts 108
(Saint Laurent) 371	vests 184, 211	see also braccas; breeches;	288, 302, 311, 327, 336, 357,	Piedmont 75
Oppenheim, Meret 294	see also bustles	knickerbockers; pantaloons; plus	361, 366, 381, 383	pigments see dyes and pigments
Optimism and Youth (1947–63)	waistcoats (see vests)	fours	surrealist 294–5	Piguet, Robert 319
312–347	pageants 158	pantsuits 382 pantyhose see tights	tartan 193, 197, 273, 390	pikemen 92
time line 314–15 opus anglicanum 57	pagne 35 paillettes 256	Paracas culture 39	tie-dyed 376 wool and silk weaves (1860s) 197	Pilati, Stefano 371 pilgrims 57
L'Orage (Storm) dress 267	palla 34	parasols 174, 177, 192, 193, 201,	zigzag 178, 179, 197, 251, 261,	pinking 99
orange dyes 39	pallium 35, 36, 57	205, 229, 234, 240, 260	272, 361	pinning 99
Order of the Garter 137	Palm Beach 260, 261, 264, 265, 283	pardessus 186	pauldrons 93	pintucking 174
Order of the Holy Spirit 105 organdie 306	paltocks 70 Pancaldi & B. 376	Paris (1810s) 175	peace movement 374, 376 peacock dress 232	piping 178, 179, 181, 188 Pirate collection (Westwood) 390
organiae 306 organza 293, 323, 327	pantalettes 192	(1830s) 191	Pearl Jam 412	plackart 92
oriental styles 112–13, 131, 158,	pantaloons 103, 130, 182, 184,	(1950s) 331	pearls 59, 74, 75, 95, 97, 104,	plastic 329, 352, 356, 360, 361, 376
160, 190, 213, 218, 243, 319	185, 210	(1980-2011) 384	106, 107 , 121, 126, 133, 160,	plastron 64, 65, 81
Orientalism 1909–26 222, 244–5	riding 186	Baroque and Rococo 122, 150	175, 319, 327 artificial 249	plate armor
244-3 Oscars 416–17	pants (trousers) (1790–1839) men's 184–5	Coco Chanel 248–9 Left Bank 345, 371	peasants	medieval 68, 69 Renaissance 92–3
Ossendrijver, Lucas 286	(1840–1900) men's 210–11	Liberation of 310	medieval 56–7	Plato's Atlantis (McQueen) 419
ostrich feathers 106, 107, 122,	(1901–14) men's 224–5	Madeleine Vionnet 278–9	Renaissance 110–11	playsuits 309, 336
123, 136, 137, 149, 169, 180,	(1920s) men's 262, 263	Paul Poiret 242–3	peascod belly, padded 100, 105	pleating
190, 205, 206, 229, 241, 244, 247, 290, 291, 417, 419	(1920s) women's 260, 261 (1930–40) men's 288–9	postwar revival 314 Second Empire 195, 199	pelerines 191 pelisses	blouse 206, 228 bodices 75, 188, 189
Otto III, Emperor 46	(1930s) women's 280, 281	World War II 270, 302, 308	(1800–09) 171	box 145, 207, 226, 304,
Ottomans 78, 112–13	(1939–45) men's 302–3	Yves Saint Laurent 370–1	(1811–20) 174–5	320–1, 347
overalls	(1939–45) women's 298	Parr, Catherine 86	(1820s) 178	cartridge 145, 178, 179, 188,
(1919–28) 266 World War I 330	(1950–55) men's 338–9	partlets 86, 87, 94, 95, 98, 121	(1840s) 193 Brandenburg-closure 175	243, 295 coats 90–1, 156
World War I 239 World War II 298	(1950–60) women's 346 (1964–79) women's 372–3	party wear (1450–1624) 108–9	pelisse-robe (1830s) 188	collars 237
over bodices	(1980–2012) women's 396, 397	(1625–1790) 158–9	Regency 176–7	deep 91
cuirasse 200	ancient 14, 15	(1800–1900) 218–29	pellanda 75	diagonal 247
unfastened 218	baggy 158, 160, 244, 340,	(1850s) 193 (1000, 36) 343, 344, 345	pellote 58, 61	Egyptian 16, 18
overdresses/gowns (1890s) 206, 208–9	341, 390 bell-bottoms 374	(1909–26) 243, 244, 245 passementerie knots 91	peplos 13, 24, 25, 33, 277, 278 peplos style 41	fan 204 Greek-style 237
(1920s) 256	bondage 404	patchwork 371, 374, 381	peplum 197, 333	inverted 272, 273, 281, 335
(1930s) 275	capri 337, 346	patka 218	flared 273	knife 230
(1940s) 277	center crease 338, 397	Patou, Jean 222, 249, 250 , 251,	pleated 73, 277	narrow 276
costume dress 218 Edwardian 232	clam diggers 346 clownlike 341	255, 277 pattern books 79, 105	pointed 203 short 397	pencil 250 pants 262, 285, 303, 338
gauze 171	Cossack 184	patterns	Pepys, Samuel 135	petticoats 144, 157
neoclassical 169	cropped 286, 340	(1830–7) 188–9	perfumes	pleated frills 363
split 80	cuffs 225, 227, 283, 286, 288, 298,	abstract 245, 266, 267, 334, 336,	ancient 17, 25	Regency pelisse 177 trained 175 overshirts 366	303, 338, 340, 345, 373	367, 421 ancient Greek 24, 38	Chanel 249 dandies 185	Renaissance 80, 84, 86 shoulder 193, 295
overskirts 215, 232	culottes 346, 371 development of 72	ancient Greek 24, 36	global 386, 415	side 156, 251
(1660–80) 132, 133	drainpipe 340, 344, 369	animal prints 306, 336	Renaissance 106	skirts 52, 86, 95, 107, 228, 250,
(1820s) 259	draped 339	art deco 253, 259, 364, 372,	Schiaparelli 297	251, 252, 253, 255, 276, 277,
(1830s) 191 (1870s) 200, 201	flannels 227, 265, 282, 283, 289	382, 431	periwigs 135	281, 291, 310, 316, 320, 321,
(1870s) 200, 201 cut away at back (1950s) 323	flared 366, 367, 372, 373, 374, 382, 383	art nouveau 236, 237, 364, 367 batik 336	Perry, Fred 282, 406 Persia	330, 331, 380, 382 sleeves 53, 73
diaphanous 191	front crease 225, 264, 265, 282,	Byzantine 36, 37	ancient 30, 31	soft vertical 215
draped (1950s) 327	283, 289	Celtic 49	inspiration from 244	tight 135
lamp shade 233, 241, 245	harem-style 367	checks 193, 197, 205, 272, 273,	medieval 58, 59	trompe l'oeil 277
net 171 peplum 197	high-waisted 262, 407 hipsters 359	286, 302, 345, 381, 422, 423 chiné 157	Peru 28, 39 Perugia, André 416	wartime limitations on 304 wide 317
polonaise 200	jama 211	circular 360	Petits Swings 302	Pliny the Elder 56
sack back dress 145	jeans 314, 340, 343, 344, 345 ,	diamond 159, 267	petticoat breeches 104, 122,	Plunkett, Walter 270, 292, 306
short 246, 277	359, 372, 373 , 374, 389, 404,	digital prints 421	130, 219	plus fours 216, 223, 226, 286
swagged 147, 200	405, 406, 424, 425	disposition 205 dot and teardrop 378	petticoats (1660–80) 132, 135	suit (1930s) 284–5 Plymouth (Massachusetts) 79, 128
trailing 146 wide, see-through (1920s) 247	jodhpurs 238, 280, 346, 388 linen 425	Egyptian 39	(1681–1720) 139	Plymouth (Massachusetts) 79, 128 pockets
oversleeves	loon pants 374	Fair Isle 222, 283, 286, 304	(1720–70) 140, 142	breast 265, 284 bouffant 190	low-slung 419	floral 189, 205, 272, 317, 334,	(1770–89) 146, 157	buttoned 136, 239, 300, 356 transparent 190	medieval 48, 49	356, 363, 372, 373, 376, 377	(1950s) 344	coat 155, 184, 186

deep 298
deep 298 external 201 false 353
flap 136, 265, 289, 304, 356, 357 hidden 191
internal skirt 203
notebook 300
patch 226, 298, 302, 335, 336, 356, 357, 373
practical 227
separate 188
slanted hip 264, 330, 331
slanting 272
straight flap 265
welt 399
zippered 367
points 73, 118, 119
Poiret, Denise 242, 243
Poiret, Paul 199, 222, 242–3 , 244, 245, 393
Poisson, Jeanne Antoinette see
Pompadour, Madame de Pollock, Jackson 334
Polo, Marco 45
Polonaise style 144, 145, 147, 149, 200, 202
•
polyester, pleated 401
pom-poms 347
Pompadour, Madame de 117, 160-Pompeii 34, 35, 39
pop art 352 , 371
Pop Art collection (Saint Laurent) 371 pop culture 315, 351, 364, 366–7, 368, 372, 376, 382, 383, 386,
387, 388, 389, 404, 405,
406–7, 412
Popova, Lyubov 266, 267
Porto, Countess Livia da 107
Portugal 85, 107
postwar clothing 324–5
Potter, Claire 308
poulaine shoes 65, 84
pour le sport 255
pourpoint 64, 70–1
pouter pigeon look 185
poverty look 403
power dressing 390, 396–7, 410, 423
power suit 398–9
practical clothing
practical clothing
house drosses (10E0s) 224 22E house dresses (1950s) 334, 335
medieval 56, 57
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404,
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404, 406, 407
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404,
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404, 406, 407
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404, 406, 407 Puritans 79, 124, 126, 128–9 , 397
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404, 406, 407 Puritans 79, 124, 126, 128–9 , 397 purple
medieval 56, 57 modernism 266 Renaissance 110–11 women's wartime 300–1, 330, 396–9 Prada 243, 387 praipendula 36, 37 pre-Columbian cultures 12, 28, 39, 79, 107 Pre-Raphaelite movement 214 prehistory 14–15 Presley, Elvis 314, 315, 344 prêt-à-porter 249 priesthood Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 16, 17 medieval 56–7 Renaissance 108 Productivism 267 propoloma 36 Provence 53 psychobillies 404 Pucci, Emilio 314, 362, 363, 367 Pulcinella 158, 159 pullovers Chanel 249 golf 283 Puma 406 Punch and Judy 159 punk 350, 351, 390, 395, 404, 406, 407 Puritans 79, 124, 126, 128–9 , 397

purses 430–1
puttees 239
PVC 352, 360, 361 pajamas 211, 213, 218
all-in-one 362 beach (1920s and 1930s) 222, 260, 261, 266, 280
de bateau (1930s) 280 lounging (1935–45) 294
O D QR
Qatar 15, 414 Quant, Mary 315, 350, 352, 356 , 359, 361, 363, 364, 380 quilting 69, 70, 71, 210, 219, 295, 377
Rabanne, Paco 350, 360, 361, 430 race wear
(1870–1900) 215 (1901–14) 225, 234
(1920s) 265
(1930s) 282, 288 racial inequality 374
racoon fur 264 Radcliffe, Robert, Earl of Sussex 93
Radiziwill, Princess Stanislaus 363
Rahvia 305 rainwear 186, 297, 329 rap 389, 406 Raspaigne, Nicolas de 113
ratiné 240 ration coupons 270, 271, 298, 299, 301, 304, 305, 310, 314
rave scene 406, 407 Ravenna mosaics 37
Ravi-Sher Singh, Raja of Kalsia 283 Ray, Man 294, 297 rayon 222, 252, 274, 292, 352 ready-to-wear styles (1935–44) 308–9
(1980–2012) 403, 415 postwar 310
Rebel Without a Cause (movie) 315, 343, 345 recycling 413 red
dyes 38, 39, 46, 49, 56, 106
symbolism of 108 Red Cross 238, 298 redingote 157, 178, 333 Regency era Beau Brummel 182–3
belles 174–5 dandies 184, 368
pelisse 176–7 society 172–3
sportswear 186–7
Regny, Jane 280 religious garments ancient 16, 17, 36, 37, 434 medieval 44, 45, 48, 56–7
Renaissance 83, 108
Renaissance Splendor (1450–1624) 76–113
time line 78–79 Renta, Oscar de la 329, 397 Reptile dress (1920s) 256 reptile skins 334
rerebrace 68
resort wear (1930s) 280, 288
(1940s) 309 (1950–61) 336–7
Restoration 130-1, 132, 135,
138, 424 revers, velvet 185
Reville and Rossiter 258 From Revolution to Frivolity
(1790–1900) 164–219 time line 166–167
revolutionaries, support for 168, 184 rhinestones 232, 246, 256, 257, 258, 259, 327
Rhodes, Zandra 377 ribbons
(1820s) 178, 180, 181 (1830s) 188, 189

(1870s) 201
(1950s) 327
Baroque and Rococo 118, 121, 130, 146, 152, 157
costume dress 219
early 20th-century 228, 229, 234, 247 early Victorian 193
neoclassical 168, 169
Renaissance 94, 95, 98, 104
Second Empire 195
Richard II of England 45 riding wear
19th-century 217
(1950s) 346
Baroque and Rococo 132, 139, 162 habits 149, 162, 163, 186, 187, 214, 228 inspiration from 388
ringlets 20, 23, 125, 126, 133, 192
Rive Gauche 371
Roaring Twenties 255, 256, 270 robe à danser 247 robe à la française 144–5 , 146, 423, 433
robe à la polonaise 147, 149 robe de style 246–7 , 292 robes ancient oriental 30, 31
clerical 57
Egyptian royal 17
Etruscan 33 Garter 137
medieval 64, 72, 73
open 142, 144
Ottoman 112, 113
Renaissance 83, 84, 85, 88, 95, 100, 101 Rococo 142
scholarly 56
robings 142
Rochas 310 rock 'n' roll 314, 344 rock stars 383, 404, 405
rockabilly 405
rockers 344, 404
Rocket (Fusée) dress (1938) 295 Rococo 116, 142, 150, 405 see also Baroque and Rococo
Rodchenko, Aleksandr 266
Rodney Dresses 323
Roger II of Sicily 59 Rogers, Millicent 267, 293
Rolling Stones 366
Romanesque style 48
Romans, ancient dyes and pigments 39 Empire 13, 26, 32, 34–5 , 41, 44 influence on fashion 12, 170, 276, 277, 278, 417
rompers, beach (1920s) 261
Rooney, Coleen 405 Roosevelt, Eleanor 298
Rose, Helen 314, 315
Rosenstein, Nettie 431
rosettes 98, 104, 131, 152, 153
garters 131 shoe 94, 99, 104, 123, 152, 169
Rosie the Riveter 271, 299
Rosier, Michèle 350, 353
Ross, Diana 383
Rossi, Tino 288 rouleau band, padded 181 Roundheads 129
rowing 282, 283
Roxburghe, Duke of 224
Daniel Carleti fantla Dantastian
Royal Society for the Protection of Rirds 206 of Birds 206
of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113
of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327 of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327 ruches 181, 203, 228, 277, 292
of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327
of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327 ruches 181, 203, 228, 277, 292 rude boys 404, 405 ruffles on blouses 397 of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327 ruches 181, 203, 228, 277, 292 rude boys 404, 405 ruffles on blouses 397 on dresses 207, 421 of Birds 206 rubber 337, 390 Rubens, Pieter Paul 98, 113 rubies 106, 327 ruches 181, 203, 228, 277, 292 rude boys 404, 405 ruffles on blouses 397

1 445 000
lace 145, 233 macaronis and dandies 153 on skirts 174, 197, 241, 292, 293 on sleeves 140, 141, 145, 152, 154, 157, 189, 229, 233, 237, 292, 293 on swimwear 337
ruffs
(1890s) 206-7 cartwheel 98, 120
circular 118 double 98, 99
Elizabethan 97, 109, 178
falling 119
layered 118 pleated 121
Regency 187
Renaissance 79, 87, 94, 95, 98, 99, 103, 104, 105, 109
99, 103, 104, 105, 109 Stuart 118, 119, 120, 121, 124
Run DMC 406
Russell, Ken 354
Russell, Rosalind 307
Russian style Cossack coats 238, 272
Cossack toats 238, 272 folk costume 241, 245
postrevolutionary 266, 267
Ryder, Winona 413
C
2 Saab, Elie 416
sabautons 68, 92 sable 73, 78
Sackville, Edward, 4th Earl of Dorset 104
Sackville, Richard, 3rd Earl of Dorset 109 Sackville, Sir Thomas 92 sailor suits 215
Saint Laurent, Yves 315, 319, 350, 354, 361, 362, 363, 370–1 , 372
354, 361, 362, 363, 370–1 , 372 Sambo 334 341100 334
samplers 188
samplers 188 San Francisco 374–5
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125,
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125,
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sasson, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sasson, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood)
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, Balville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage Collection (Westwood) 390, 392
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood)
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sasson, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, August, Elector of 101
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sasson, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, Duchess of 107 Saxony, Maurice, Elector of 90–1 saya 64, 94
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, August, Elector of 101 Saxony, Duchess of 107 Saxony, Maurice, Elector of 90–1 saya 64, 94 saya encordada 61
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, Duchess of 107 Saxony, Maurice, Elector of 90–1 saya 64, 94
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, August, Elector of 101 Saxony, Duchess of 107 Saxony, Maurice, Elector of 90–1 saya 64, 94 saya encordada 61 sayon 61 scarves (1681–1720) 138, 139
San Francisco 374–5 Sander, Jil 397 Sandow, Eugen 217 Saracens 59 Sardinian chieftains 14 secondhand stores 412 saris 299 sarongs 395 sashes and girdles (1920s) 252, 253, 290 Baroque and Rococo 119, 125, 130, 131, 136, 137, 150, 156 Byzantine 37 early 20th-century 229, 240 Greek 25 medieval 58, 75 Middle Eastern 218 Minoan 20 Renaissance 81, 87, 95, 104 shoulder sash 130 Sassanids 31 Sassoon, Belville 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, David 199, 393 Sassoon, Vidal 354, 357 sateen 334 satin 106, 125, 173, 207, 232, 272, 273, 325, 377, 382, 417 Savage Beauty (McQueen) 419 Savage collection (Westwood) 390, 392 Savile Row 182, 264, 270, 286, 289, 338, 340, 368, 369 Saxons 40, 41, 51 Saxony, August, Elector of 101 Saxony, Duchess of 107 Saxony, Maurice, Elector of 90–1 saya 64, 94 saya encordada 61 sayon 61 scarves

(1920s) 247, 253, 257, 266
(1960s) 366
ancient Chinese 15, 30
Baroque and Rococo 132, 133, 156, 163
flowing (1950s) 326 head scarves 239, 310, 383, 406
long 138
long, diaphanous 181
men's sports 282
neck 156
Regency 175
Renaissance 110
trailing (1930s) 277, 278 schenti 16, 17
Schiaparelli, Elsa 271, 294, 295, 296–7 , 429
scholars 56
Scholte, Frederick 288
Schön, Mila 329
Schouler, Proenza 243, 388
science fiction, influence of (1960s) 361 (1970s) 373
(1970s) 373 (1990s) 410
sclavein 57
sculptural clothes 400
Scythians 14, 15
seams faggotted 292
mantua gown center back 141 plus fours suit 284 princess 321, 326
topstiched 378
wartime restrictions on 305
zigzag 272
Sears Roebuck 231
Seattle 412
second-hand clothing 374
see-through fabrics 168, 169
Selim II, Sultan 112 separates, 1950s 336
sequins 293, 361, 382, 383, 412, 41.
3cquii 5 255, 501, 502, 505, 412, 41.
Serbia 59
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60)
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60)
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331,
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396,
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325,
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330 oversize 389, 397, 407 pagoda 244 Princess line 200, 319
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330 oversize 389, 397, 407 pagoda 244 Princess line 200, 319 S-bend 222, 228, 229, 422
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330 oversize 389, 397, 407 pagoda 244 Princess line 200, 319 S-bend 222, 228, 229, 422 simpler silhouette (1900–14) 228–9
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330 oversize 389, 397, 407 pagoda 244 Princess line 200, 319 S-bend 222, 228, 229, 422 simpler silhouette (1900–14) 228–9 square silhouette 78, 90–1
Serbia 59 sewing machines 166, 200, 204, 210, 214 Sex (store) 390 sex appeal 337, 361 Sex Pistols 351, 390, 404 sexual discrimination 374 sexual revolution 372 shalvar 158 shape (1920s) 240 1930s long and lean 272 1930s smooth unbroken line 274 1950s silhouette 344 A-line silhouette 12, 319, 362 architectural 330 Barrel line 329 bell 174, 237 boxy silhouette 311 columnar silhouette 168, 170–1, 237, 243, 326, 417 cone 144 figure-hugging 382, 383 fitting the body (1300-80) 64–5 from drape to shape (1500–60) 86–7 geometric 98–9, 104, 360 H shape 319 hourglass 180–1, 190, 206, 208, 319, 321, 325, 326, 331, 332, 335, 336, 337, 392, 396, 398–9, 417 Infanta silhouette 329 lamp shade-minaret 243 New Look 316, 319, 322, 325, 326, 329, 330 oversize 389, 397, 407 pagoda 244 Princess line 200, 319 S-bend 222, 228, 229, 422 simpler silhouette (1900–14) 228–9

World War II 304
Y-line 319
Sharples, Rolinda 172–3
Shaver, Dorothy 308, 314 shaving, women 256, 258, 281
Shaw, Sandie 376
shawls Cashmere/Kashmir 169, 170, 193, 197
fur 252
Roman 34 square 188
trailing 256, 274, 276, 277
Victorian 192
Shearer, Norma 307 Sherman, Samuel 334 shields 28, 29
shifts
linen 138 neoclassical 168
sleeved linen 41
Turkish-style 160
visible linen 62, 80, 133 shirring 337 shirts
Baroque and Rococo 123, 154, 156 billowing 390, 407 checked 286, 345
dress 185, 289
flannelette 412 Fred Perry 406
linen 57, 87 , 136, 156, 182
mail 28
medieval 57 pirate 407
polo 282, 346, 405, 406
preppy button-down 406 Renaissance 81, 83, 87 , 95
satin 383
short-sleeved 336, 345
silk rollneck 368 sports 265, 303 stiff bosom 262
striped 225 tunic 372
women's 238, 298, 299
shirtwaists/shirtwaisters 230, 231,
316, 317 shoes
400 years of women's 426–7
1870s women's 201 1900–14 women's 229
1920s men's 265
1920s women's 253
1930s women's 273 , 309 1940s women's 309
1950s men's 339 , 341
1970s 376 ankle-strap sandals 316 ankle-wrap 411
austerity 304
ballet 245 ballet flats 340
bar-shoes 241, 250, 251, 252, 253, 273 Barogue and Rococo 123, 130, 131, 135, 136, 137, 142
bathing 231, 261
block heels 353 booties 189
bowling 346
brogues 253, 301, 338, 339 brothel creepers 341, 404 canvas 227, 230, 288 carriage 179
Chinese-style 244 corespondent 298, 303
cocktail (1950s) 323
converse sneakers 389 country 253
crêpe-soled 341
Cromwell 253
Cuban heels 229 cutaway sides 309 dance 290
dancing 152 218

dancing 152, 218

detachable heels 256, 257

Derby 253, 341

dress 185, 253 embroidered 36, 37, 46
espadrilles 337, 406
fenestrated 65
flip-flops 337
Gibson 253 golf 226
Haferlschuh 304
high-heeled 98, 104, 128, 135, 147, 201, 219, 388 high-heeled pumps 299 high-laced 179
high-tongued 136, 137
Italian heels 169 Japanese geta 400 jogging 388
kid 175, 189
kilties 231 lace-up 229, 253, 281, 283
latchet 104, 142, 427
leather 65
loafers 339, 407, 421 Louis heels 229
medieval 52, 53, 56, 57, 65
men's heeled (1840-1900) 210, 211 men's heeled (1960–79) 372
mules 337, 426, 427
neoclassical 169
open 37
open-toe 273, 323 Oxfords 253, 263, 265, 273, 302, 339
patent leather pumps 262
peep-toe 298, 309, 311, 323 platform 94, 111, 337, 372 , 376, 380, 381, 390, 401,
421 426 427
pointed 32, 52, 53, 56, 84, 85, 142, 169, 341
poulaine 65, 84
pumps 169, 180, 189, 218, 225, 253, 257, 262, 273, 340 pump (modern) 273, 397, 426 red carpet 416
red-heeled 150, 151
Renaissance 84, 85, 94, 98, 99, 100, 101, 111
Roman 34, 35
rubber 216
saddle 347 sandals 12, 30, 32, 34, 35, 253, 265, 273, 282, 376, 427
slashed 100, 101, 219
slippers 211, 427
sneakers 339, 347, 389, 406 spiked heels 396 square-toed 136, 211
stilettos 315, 388, 398, 426, 427 strapped pumps (1920s) 257 strapped pumps (1920s) 237 strapless opera pumps 273
suede 339, 341
T-strap 357
tango 223 tip-up 142
trainers 388, 389, 406, 407
two-tone 240, 250, 265, 286, 288, 303, 341, 405 upturned toes 31, 244 wedding 189
wedge heels 273, 305, 376
wood pattens 73 wood slides 337
wood soled 304
World War II 304
see also boots shooting outfits 163, 187, 217, 424
shopping 174
shopping malls 335, 385
shorts bike 407 denim 407 gym 388
men's 216, 282, 283, 336
women's 270, 281 shoulder lines

asymmetric 277

broad 179, 208, 239, 295, 319

exaggerated 295 gathered 276, 277, 373, 381 low 192, 193 narrow 371
narrow, inset 364 natural (1950s) 338 naturally falling 237
padded 88, 89, 100, 306, 340, 366, 382, 393, 396, 397, 398–9 puffe 304
rounded or sloped 316, 319, 330, 331
square 310 tied 323
wide 78, 288, 310, 311
shoulder straps thin 247, 257, 274, 275, 277
wide 256, 274, 294
Shrimpton, Jean 350, 409
Shunsho, Katsukawa 213 Shurmann, Petra 332 Sicily 59
sideburns 185 silk
(1930s) 292, 293
(1950s) 338
(1970s) 376 artificial 222, 240, 252, 283
Baroque and Rococo 116, 117,
121, 126, 133, 147 bizarre 133
Byzantine 36, 37, 46
Chinese and Japanese 12, 13, 30, 31, 143, 188
Edwardian 232, 233, 234
fur-trimmed 243
Gazaar 329 lingerie 252
Lyons 146
medieval 44, 48, 51, 52 , 55, 61, 70, 73
New Look 316, 317, 322, 323, 325
Renaissance 85, 112
roller-printed 188 Second Empire 195, 199
Sicilian 59
Victorian 192, 193 weaves 197
see also brocade; damask; organza; satin; taffeta Silk Road 30, 31 , 45, 58
silkscreen 377
silver thread 94, 98, 101, 140,
151, 361 Simmons, Joseph "Run" 406
Simons, Raf 319
Simpson, Wallis 271, 286, 287, 294, 297
Sinatra, Frank 303
ska 406
skater style 412 skating wear 231, 347 Skeleton dress (1938) 295
skinheads 404, 405 skirts
(1778–89) 149
(1901–16) sports 230, 231 (1930s) 272, 273
(1948–59) 330–1
(1950s) sports 346, 347 A-line 31, 239, 292, 322
apron 200, 214, 293
asymmetric 421
balloon 329 beach 336, 337
bell-shaped 99, 179, 192, 234 bifurcated 215 bouffant 322
bustle 199, 202-3
Chanel 249 circular 344
columnar 228, 229
cone-shaped 206

coq 362

cupcake 405

draped 146, 393

divided 49, 230, 231, 297

cutoff 413

sleeves

batwing 245

Baroque and Rococo 118, 126, 135, 149

```
feathered 247, 290
 fishtail 200-1, 294, 416
 flared 53, 237, 275, 294, 322, 378 flat-fronted 199, 202-3, 206, 310 flounced 20, 21, 191, 193, 327
 froufrou 323
 full 178, 214, 228, 246, 311, 320, 322, 326, 344, 345
 gathered 327
 gently widening 208-9
 gored 40, 197, 207, 215, 304
 handkerchief 377
 hobble 243, 244, 319, 416
 juppes 162
 kilts 390, 395
 looped-up 214, 218, 219
 lower at back 200, 247, 291
 maxi 359, 374, 380, 395
 mega-micro 356
 micromini 361
 midi 359
 mini 352, 356, 359, 360, 381
 Minoan 20-1
 narrow 304, 305
 narrowing to hem 229, 233
 New Look 316-17, 319
 open-front 95, 99, 135
 padded 146
 paneled 201, 206, 376
 pannier 146, 149, 200, 433 pencil 330, 331, 345, 397, 398-9
 pencil-pleated 250
 pleated 52, 86, 95, 107, 228, 250, 251, 252, 253, 255, 276, 277,
    281, 291, 310, 316, 320, 321, 330, 331, 380, 382
 polonaise 219
 poodle 314, 344
 pyramid 206
 quilted field 388
 Renaissance 80, 86, 94, 95,
   110, 111
 Renaissance male 85, 88, 89, 100 Restoration 135
 riding 214
 ruffled 174, 197, 241, 292, 293
 safeguard 132, 162
 Sassanid 30, 31
 Second Empire 195
 see-through kick panels 396
 short (1927-8) 253
 short (power dressing) 397, 398-9 slightly flaring 273 slit 392, 421 split 233, 244 straight 272
 Stuart 126
 support structures 433
 tapered 319
tiered 192, 200, 207, 293, 380, 405, 410
 trained 170, 171
 voluminous 253, 319
 Women's Legion 300-1
 wood 410
 World War II 299, 304, 305 wrap 345
 wraparound 377
 see also bustles; dresses; gowns
skiwear
 (1901–14) 226, 227
 (1930s) 281
 (1950s) 346
slashing 71, 78, 81, 84, 85, 89, 90, 93, 97, 99, 101, 119, 122, 176, 197, 218, 219, 390
sleeve heads gathered 72
 pleated 73
sleeveless styles
 (1870s) 200, 201
 (1920s) 253, 256–7
(1930s) 274, 275, 280
 (1950s) 335
```

bell 364 bishop 196, 210, 237, 241, 293, 309 bouffant 189 bracelet 333 cap 196, 258, 275, 326, 363 cropped 411 cuffed 373 dolman 329, 331 double 181 elbow-length 65, 121, 132, 138, 142, 149, 171 fitted 240 fitted to elbow 145 flared 74, 367, 377 flared wrist 369 flounced 142, 143, 193 gigot 178, 179, 186, 199 half- 86, 330 hanging 52, 64, 74, 75, 81, 85, 90, 91, 112 leg-of-mutton 206, 207, 208–9, 214, 215, 392 long, pointed 94 manche à la Montespan 189 medieval 55, 56, 66, 72 open 118, 133 padded 206 pagoda 196, 197 paned 110, 121, 126 piecing (1930s) 274 pleated 53 puffed 88, 90, 91, 94, 95, 97, 100, 108, 120, 121, 126, 135, 171, 173, 174, 175, 180, 181, 184, 273, 292, 294, 295, 410 raglan 347, 399 Renaissance 80, 81, 84, 86, 88, 94, 100 restricting movement 132, 190, 192, 193 ruched 233 ruffled 140, 141, 145, 157, 189, 229, 233, 237, 292, 293 see-through 244 separate 37, 86 seven-eighths-length 329 short 20, 21, 169, 170, 232, 334, 377 single 383, 393 slashed 81, 84, 85, 90, 119, 197 split 81 stuffed 103 three-quarter length 200, 201, 320, 345 tight with open seam 80 tight-fitting 49, 53, 56, 61, 64, 65, 98, 119, 364, 369 tippet 56 two-part 73 Virago 126 voluminous 87, 236 waterfall 401 wide 30, 37, 52, 53, 56, 193 Slimane, Hedi 286, 371 slippers 113 slips, 1920s 252 Sloan, Alfred P., Jr 263 Small, Susan 317 smiley face emblem 406 Smith, Will 389, 425 smocking 205, 228, 241, 413 smocks 124, 138, 139, 364, 371 Le smoking tuxedo suit 371, 372, 373 snake goddesses 20, 21 snakeskin 353, 430 snoods 87 Snow, Carmel 314, 319 social issues 415 social season 172 social statements Baroque and Rococo 150 medieval age 44, 45, 60–1, 64 Renaissance 85, 110–11 socks (1901–14) 224, 226, 227

ankle 344, 345, 407

bobby sox 344, 347 Byzantine 37 fishnet 401 golf 283 medieval 48 patterned 283 see also stockings Souper Dress (1960s) 352 Southampton, Countess of 99 space age 351, 360–1, 373, 410 Spain Baroque and Rococo 121 Cristóbal Balenciaga 328–9 medieval age 47, 58, 59, 61, 64, 73, 74 Moorish kingdom 44, 58 New Look 317, 326 Renaissance 80, 87, 93, 94, 99, 100, 111 Spanish empire 94, 106 women 1880s 204, 205 spangles 232, 244, 245, 246, 257, 275 Spanish Civil War 329 Spartans 28 spats 185, 263, 264, 265 spaulders 69 The Specials 406 Spencer "Spen-support" 316 spivs 302 sportswear . (1625–1789) 150, 151, 162–3 (1979-90) 406, 407 (1985-2010) 388-9 men's (1837-1900) 216-17 men's (1901-14) 226-7 men's (1931-44) 282-3 Regency (1790-1840) 186-7 women's (1870-1900) 214-15 women's (1901-16) 230-1 women's (1920s) 250, 255, 261 women's (1930s) 280-1 women's (1950-60) 346-7 women's (1990s) 411 spurs 93, 119 squirrel fur 61, 73, 75 Stack, Mary Bagot 281 Stack, Prunella 281 Stallion dress (1944) 295 starching 79, 124 status clothing and 85, 88-9, 396-7 color and 34, 35, 51, 55 stays 94, 132, 133, 135, 139, 144, 145, 432 collar 206 half-stays 168 whalebone 186 Stepanova, Varvara 266 Stephen, John 366 Stewart, Rod 383 Stiebel, Victor 305, 327 stiffening 86, 105, 214 stockings 1920s 253 artificial silk 240 bathing 231 flesh and pastel color 240 Renaissance 104, 105, 111 silk 151, 173, 225, 290 see also socks; tights stocks 132, 151, 152, 153, 184, 185 stola 34, 35, 36, 37, 59 stoles 170, 236, 401 stomachers 97, 99, 109, 126, 138, 139, 142 laced 128, 219 triangular 98, 140, 141, 144, 145 Strange, Steve 406, 407 straps 119, 285 Stravinsky, Igor 245 straw hats 149 streamers 63, 65, 246 street cred 389, 420 street style 1977–2011 384, 404–5 street-urchin style 401 Strong, Roy 368 strophium 35

Stuart era 118-27, 130-9 subucula 34 subversive style 411 Sui, Anna 409 suits (1685–1720) 136–7 (1720-70) 150-1 (1840-1900) men's 210-11 (1901–14) men's 224–5 (1914-18) women's 239, 241 (1920s) men's 261, 262-3, 264-5 (1930-40) men's 288-9 (1930s) women's 272, 273, 288 (1939-45) men's 302-3 (1939-45) women's 305 (1940s) women's 311 (1948-54) women's 330-1 (1950-5) men's 338-9 (1960s) men's 366, 367, 368-9 (1980-2012) women's 396-9 A-line 319 of armor 68, 69, 92, 93 Bar Suit (1947) 316 boxy 361 business 263 cardigan 251 Chanel 249 demob 303 dinner 262, 289, 338 double-breasted 225, 265, 289, 302, 303, 366, 368, 424 drape 425 dress 210 French style 264 honeymoon 289 jump suits 372, 373 lounge 224, 234, 264, 265, 286, 288, 303 mod-style 406 morning 425 New Look 316, 317 Palm Beach (1920s) 264, 265 pantsuits (women's) 359, 371, 372, 373, 397 pinstripe 225, 302, 338, 339, 425 plus fours (1930s) 284-5 power suit (1980s) 398-9 reefer 303 Renaissance three-piece 100-1 sack 264 single-breasted 302, 303, 368, 369 Le smoking tuxedo suit 371, 372, 373 sports 302 streamlined court suit (1780) 154–5 Stresemann 263 summer 261 three-piece 210, 211, 224-5, 284-5, 303, 338, 368, 425 tweed 264, 284–5 white 288 women's hiking 231 women's morning 229 women's wartime 239, 241, 305 zoot 271, 340, 341, 407 Suleiman the Magnificent, Sultan 78 Sumerians 15 sumptuary laws 60, 74, 85, 116 sun tops 336 sun visors 389 sunglasses 337, 361, 405, 413 suntans 222, 260 supermodels 408-9 supportasse 104, 118 surcoats 58, 60, 61, 65, 68, 69, 422 sideless 64 surrealism 294-5 Sutton Hoo 29 swagging 147, 200 Swan & Edgar, London 199 Swank, Hilary 417 Swanson, Gloria 249 sweater-girl style 344 sweaters 1910s 226

1920s 250, 251, 255, 264, 291, 297

1930s 280, 281, 282, 286

1950s 347 cable-knit 281, 282 chunky homemade 412 Fair Isle 283, 286 striped Breton fisherman's 395 turtleneck 421 sweatshirts 389, 406 Sweden 116 swimwear 1625-1789 162 1790-1900 165 1900-16 215, 217, 226, 230, 231 1920s 250, 260-1, 267 1937-1900 215, 217 1950-61 227, 336 Swinging Sixties to Glam Rock (1964–70) 348–383 time line 350-1 Switzerlands, Renaissance 92 symbolism armor and weaponry 29 Renaissance 108–9 Syon Cope 57 T-shirts 343, 345, 366 ripped 350, 389 tabards 39, 168 tablion 36, 37 tabs 99, 209 taffeta 66, 124, 125, 192, 195, 199, 247, 297, 323, 325, 327, 390 tailoring 64, 71, 78, 104, 105, 182, 184, 186, 210, 228, 264, 288, 368, 419 conceptual 411 for women 330, 331, 396, 397 Takada, Kenzo 350, 400 tank tops 381, 413 Tarquinia 32 Tarrant, Frank 227 tartan 193, 197, 273, 390 Tashman, Lilyan 266 tassels 137, 169, 179, 180, 193, 211, 232, 233, 256, 259, 261, 367, 376, 378, 379 Tatsuno, Koji 419 Taylor, Elizabeth 314 team sports 216 Tears dress (Schiaparelli) 297 tebenna 32 teddies 252 teddy boys and girls 340-1, 344, 390, 404, 424 teenagers, 1950s 314, 343, 344–5 television, influence of 351, 386, 387, 396 Temperley, Alice 412 tennis wear men's 162, 216, 226, 227, 282 women's 214, 230, 250, 261, 270, 297, 347, 389 terracotta warriors 15 textiles 19th-century 166, 210 ancient oriental 12, 13, 30, 31 Byzantine 36, 37 denim 344, 345, 372, 374 diaphanous 292, 293 distressed 403, 413 Edwardian 232, 234 Egyptian 12, 16 elastic 336, 337 Elizabethan 97 Far East 12, 13, 30, 31 flannel 338, 339 knit 250-1 Knitted Circles 377 medieval 44, 45, 46, 48, 58, 59, 60, 66 metallic 274, 291, 360, 361 Minoan 20 Ottoman 112 prehistoric 14 Regency 172 Renaissance 105, 110

roller printing 188

Roman 34 synthetic 274, 297 techno fabrics 411 technological developments 117, 166 transparent 329 wash-and-wear 315, 334 wool and silk weaves 197 see also fabrics by name Thayaht 266, 267 theater 233, 243, 290, 351, 382 Theater de la Mode 311 Thebes 16, 17, 18 Theodora, Empress 13, 36 Thira 20 Third World cultures 390 Thursfield, Sarah 40, 62, 70 tiaras 256 The Tichborne Dole (van Tilborgh) 134-5 tie clips 338 tiepins 224, 261 ties (1840-1900) 210 (1960s) 366, 367 bow 211, 224, 262, 339, 369, 373 butterfly bow 289 four-in-hand 263, 265, 288, 303 patterned 271, 366, 367 string 340 striped 286 thin black 338 tight knot 405 white bow 289 wide 303 Windsor tie knot 286 women's 230, 238, 280, 298, 299, 373 see also cravats tights 352, 359, 360 thick 290 Tiller Girls 291 tippets fur 63, 125, 168 hanging 64 tiraz 58 Tire 39 Tischbein, Johann 157 Titian 87 togas 32, 34, 35, 36, 170, 417 Tokyo 400 tomboys 252, 255 tonsure 36, 44, 57 Torimaru, Gnuyki 401 tournaments 69, 93 Townley Frocks 309 tracksuits 388, 389 trade 12, 58–9, 78, 83, 106–7, 116 Traina, Anthony 330 trains (1870s) 202, 203 (1890s) 209 (1901–20) 229, 233, 237, 244 (1920s) 245 (1930s) 276 (2000s) 416, 417 Baroque and Rococo 139, 144, 145. 146 empire lines 170, 171 fishtails 200–1, 204 medieval 66-7 neoclassical 169 Regency 174, 175 Renaissance 80, 81, 86 Westwood 390 transvestites 290 Trapeze collection (Saint Laurent) 315, 371 trapunto (stuffed technique) quilting 295 travel wear coats (1820s) 178 dresses 162, 201, 214, 228, 229 skirt and cape (1890s) 207 Treacy, Philip 429

Les tres riches heures du Duc de triangular shape 86, 87, 96, 98, 99

Berry 66–7

Trigère, Paulene 333 trimmings (1837–55) 192, 193 (1960s) 362 Baroque and Rococo 131, 145 Edwardian 234 Poiret 243 Tristan and Isolde 61 trompe l'oeil 196, 232, 277 trousers (see pants) trousseau 188 trunk hose 90, 100, 118, 218 tu-way stretch 274 Tudor era 186–9, 292 see also Elizabethan age Tuffin, Sally 350, 359 tulle 195, 234, 246, 293, 325, 344 (prehistory-600) 40-41 (600–1100) 46, 47, 48, 49 (1100–1200) 52, 53, 56 (1200-1300) 57, 58, 60, 61 (1300-80) 45, 56, 59, 65, 425 (1380–1450) 57, 72, 425 (1450-1500) 81 ancient 14, 15 Byzantine 36, 37 Egyptian 18 Etruscan 32, 33 flared-sleeve (1960s) 367 Gaultier 395 Greek 24 jersey (1960s) 367 lamp shade 244 mail 68, 69 minaret or lamp shade 243 Moorish 58 Ottoman 112 Roman 34, 35 Russian-style 230 Saxon and Norman 50-1 short (Saxon) 40 side-lacing 58 split 53 straight-cut 131 sweater 250, 251 tunic shirts 372 urban-style 407 Women's Legion 300-1 turbans (1400s) 66 (1800–09) 171 (1820s) 181, 429 (1830s) 190, 191 (1909-26) 243, 244, 245 (1920s) 261, 266 (1970s) 376, 382 ancient East 30, 31 Asian-style 158, 218 Moorish 58, 59 Ottoman 112, 113, 160 Persian 59 Renaissance 80, 83 Sikh 283 Turkish style 158, 160-1 Turlington, Christy 409, 412 Turner, Jessie Franklin 274 Turquerie 160 TuTa 266 Tutamkhamun 17, 18, 223, 245 tutulus 33 tutus 395 tuxedos 224, 286, 338, 371 tweed 226, 231, 249, 264, 284–5, 286, 297, 369, 373, 380. 390 Twiggy 350, 354–5, 409 twills 210, 216, 298

umbrellas 224, 234, 265, 288, 341 underdresses (1920s) 257 (1930s) 275 understructures 86, 105, 169, 214, 247

undertunics 37, 46, 51 see also kirtles underpants 228, 252 underwear 300 years of shaping the body 432-3 brassieres 277 display of 46, 47, 51, 80, 81, 84, 85, 87, 95, 99, 109 embroidered 109 medieval linen 72 New Look 316 as outerwear 390 sanitary 214 tu-way stretch 274 "undress" 147 Ungaro, Emmanuel 329, 357, uniforms influence on fashion 288, 332 wartime men's 299 wartime women's 222, 238-9, 270, 298-9, 300-1 union suits 264 unisex styles 345, 359, 360, 366, 372, 374, 383 United States (1920s) 241 (1935-44) ready-to-wear 308-9 (1950-55) men's suits 338, 339 (1950s) couture gowns 326, 327 Charles James 324–5 exotic leisurewear 211 hippies 374–5 new generation 420 New Look 316, 317 postwar 310-11, 314 postwar evening wear 324–5 Puritans 79, 128 teenagers 344-5 World War I 239 World War II 270, 298, 299 unwearable designs 411 upper stocks 100 US Vogue 165, 310, 354, 386 Usher, Frank 327 Utility Clothing Scheme 304, 305, 310 vair 61, 73 Valentina 308 Valentino 199, 362, 363 Valois, Isabel de 99 vambrace 68 van de Velde, Henry 236 van der Weyden, Rogier 75 van Dyck, Anthony 125, 126, 219 van Eyck, Jan 73, 74 van Hulle, Anselmus 129 van Loo, Charles André 160-1 van Noten, Dries 411 Van Riper, Kenneth B. 260 van Tilborgh, Gillis 135 Vanderbilt, Gloria 373 vandyking 174, 179, 188, 190, 191, 218 Varden, Dolly 167, 219 Varon, Jean 354, 356 veils (1820s) 181 (1856–69) 196 (1870s) 200 (1901–16) 230 (1960s) 320 (2010s) 413 Baroque and Rococo 159 Byzantine 36, 37, 59 cocktail hats (1950s) 322 medieval 48, 49, 52, 53, 56, 64, 65, 74, 75 Renaissance 80, 81, 94, 111 riding 187 Velázquez, Diego 329 velours de Lyon 327 velvet 45, 66, 106, 382 Vendôme 327 Venice carnival 108, 158

Lido 260

Renaissance 81, 82-3, 87, 95, 112 trade 58 vents, slashed 71 Ver Luisant (Glow worm) dress (1928) 257 Vernon, 7th Lord 217 Veronese, Paolo 107 Versace, Donatella 387 Versace, Gianni 387, 392, 393, 409, 417, 420 Versailles 116, 132 vests (see waistcoats) vestas 83 vests, sport 216 Victoria, Queen of Great Britain 187, 193 Victorian era 192-3, 196-7, 200-19 influence on fashion 293, 364, 376, 377, 401, 405 Victoriana 364 Vienna 236, 237 Vietnam War 350, 374 Vignon, Madame 197 Vikings 44, 46, 47 vintage fashions 412–13 vinvl 360 Vionnet, Madeleine 26, 243, 267, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278-9, 292, 293 visiting outfit (mid-1900s) 197 visor, Perspex 360 Vogue 294, 304, 315, 325, 354, 409 Voss dress (McQueen) 419 Votre Mode 334 Vreeland, Diana 354 Vrel, Jacobus 128 Vuitton, Louis 431 W

WAAF (Women's Auxiliary Air Force) 298 Wainwright, Janice 372 waist cinchers 316 waistcoats (vests) (1660-85) 131, 135 (1685–1720) 136 (1720-70) 150, 151 (1770-89) 153, 154, 157 (1790-1839) 184, 185 (1840-1900) 210 (1920s) 262, 263 (1950s) 238, 340 (1960s) 367, 369 cropped 338 double-breasted 216 embroidered 210 fake fur 367 knit 412 padded chest 184, 211 plus fours suit (1930s) 285 Regency 182 Renaissance 99, 110 slips 224 white 262, 263 women's (1890s) 207 waistline asymmetrical 291, 416 cinched 20, 319, 344, 377, 398 draped 274, 277 dropped 132, 258 dropped, sloping 326 dropped V at back 321 Egyptian 16, 18 empire 170–1, 222, 243, 361, 362 high 16, 18, 121, 124, 126, 169, 170–1, 174, 175, 176, 229, 233, 236, 292, 380 low 240, 246, 252, 253, 255, 256, 261 lower at back 247 narrow 188, 190, 192, 193, 208 natural 98, 99, 188, 246, 326 nipped 64, 185, 186, 214, 310, 311, 316, 317, 320, 330, 331

tabbed 99

wasp 206-7, 215, 234, 316

wide waistband 335

Walker, Catherine 393 walking dresses/suits 175, 179, 189, 197, 200, 204, 214, 215 walking sticks 157, 265 Wall Street Crash 270, 272 Wang, Alexander 420 Wang, Vera 387, 416 Warhol, Andy 352, 394 warriors see armor; military dress Watanabe, Junya 400 watch chains 224, 340 Waterloo, Battle of 164, 174 waterproofing 187, 216, 297 Watteau, Jean-Antoine 117, 195, 390 Waugh, Evelyn 23 weaponry medieval 68, 69 Renaissance 92, 93 Weatherbee 356 weaving 20, 25, 41, 44, 46, 58, 72, 80, 128 wedding dresses/gowns (1830s) 189 (1850s) 193 (1870s) 200 (1960s) 320–1, 360 (2011) 413 French Renaissance 99 medieval 60-1, 74 New Look 317 Venetian Renaissance 94 wedding suits, 1850s 211 Welch, Raquel 360 Weller, Paul 405 Welles, Orson 282 Wellington, Duke of 164 West Indian style 341 West, Mae 297 Western Han Dynasty 30, 31 Westwood, Vivienne 97, 385, 390-1, 392, 404, 407, 427 wet look 361 white, as sacred color 17 The Who 366 wide boys 302, 303 widgies 344 Wiener Werkstätte 236, 237 wigs bag 151, 152, 153 Baroque and Rococo 131, 136, 137, 150, 151, 152, 153 bob 150 campaign 137, 150 costume 219 double peak 137 Dutch boy (1960s) 361 Egyptian 16, 17 Nubian 15 powdered 152, 219 Roman 34 The Wild One (movie) 315, 342-3, 344 Wilde, Oscar 167, 205, 213 William IV, King of Great Britain 188 William, Prince 419 William of Malmesbury 51 Williams, Pharrell 425 Williamson, Matthew 412 Wilson's of London 251 Wimmer-Wisgrill, Eduard Josef 237 wimples 53, 60, 158 Windsor, Duchess of see Simpson, Wallis Windsor, Duke of see Edward VIII Winterhalter, Franz Xaver 194–5, 198, 292, 293 Winterwerber, Elisabeth 237 Wintour, Anna 386 woad 39, 56 wolf fur 73 The Women (movie) 306-7 Women's League of Health and Beauty 281

Women's Legion 300-1

women's lib 372 wool 20, 46, 110, 128, 184

machine-knitted 226, 250-1 weaves 197 work wear deconstructed 401 as fashion 314 modernism 266 women's 330, 396-9 World War I 222, 223, 255 women's wear 238–9, 300–1 World War II 270, 314 women's wear 298-9 Worth, Charles Frederick 182, 195, 198-9 Worth, Gaston-Lucien 199, 243 Worth, Jean-Philippe 199, 244 Wranglers 345 wrap tops (1920s) 261 wraps, fur 383 WRENS (Women's Royal Naval Service) 298 WRINS (Women's Royal Indian Naval Service) 299 wristbands 413 Wu, Jason 420 Wulshaube 80

XYZ Xuanzang 30 xystis 24 yachting wear 230, 280 Yamamoto, Kansai 351, 400 Yamamoto, Yohji 400 Yasuhito, Prince Chichibu of Japan 263 Yauch, Adam 406 Yazz & the Plastic Population 407 yellow dyes 38, 56 Yingpan Man 30

Yonekura, Tyoko 397 York, George, Duke of (later George V) 218 York, Mary of Teck, Duchess of 218 youth revolution 302, 342-3, 344-5, 350 YSL 371, 372, 373 Zazous 302 zibellino 106, 107 ziponi 83 zippers 223, 297

zoot suits 271, 340, 341, 407

Zurbarán, Francisco de 121, 329

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The original image sources are listed here by page number. The publisher would like to thank the following for their kind permission to reproduce their photographs: (Key: a-above; b-below/bottom; c-center; f-far; l-left; r-right; t-top)

2-3 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive. 4 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs (I). Getty Images: Votive relief with Artemis before god. Kephisos or Cephisus, river god, and three nymphs / DEA / G. Nimatallah (r). 5 akgimages: Sultane (Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, Madame de Pompadour) by Charles André van Loo Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris (r). Corbis: Detail of Bayeux Tapestry—fortification construction underway at Hastings, Musée de la Tapisserie Bayeux / Gianni Dagli Orti (I). Getty Images: Ball at the court of King Henri III of France or ball of the Duke of Alencon, French School, Louvre, Paris / The Bridgeman Art Library (c). 6 Blandford Fashion Museum (tl). Corbis: Empress Eugenie of France with ladies of her court by Franz Xaver Winterhalter, Château de Compiègne / The Art Archive (I); Condé Nast Archive (c). The Kobal Collection: MGM (r). 7 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (I). Rex Features: Paul Massey (r). TopFoto.co.uk: Colin Jones (c). 8-9 Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast. 10 Getty Images: Empress Theodora with her court of two ministers and seven women, detail San Vitale, Ravenna, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library, London 12-14 Getty Images: Datacraft (t). 12-13 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 12 Alamy Images: The Art Archive (cra). Corbis: Nathan Benn (cr); Frans Lemmens (bc). 13 Alamy Images: Men worshipping barebreasted goddess, Minoan fresco, Heraklion Museum, Crete / The Art Archive (c). Dorling Kindersley: The Trustees of the British Museum (cra, br). Getty Images: Detail from Etruscan blackfigure amphora depicting the Judgment of Paris, Staatliche Antikensammlung, Munich, Germany / DEA / C. Moessner (crb); Detail of antechamber fresco, Queen Nefertari playing Senet, Tomb of Nefertari, Egypt / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (bl). 14 akg-images: Scythian rider, detail, carpet found at Pasyryk, Kurgan 5 tomb, Ostaltai Mountain / State Hermitage, St. Petersburg / Erich Lessing (bc). Dorling Kindersley: The Trustees of the British Museum (bl). Getty Images: Bronze statuette of tribe chief wearing a cloak, with a sword and a stick, from Mount Arcosu, Uta, Museo Archeologico Nazionale, Sardinia / DEA / M. Carrieri (r). 15 Alamy Images: Scythian Persian archer and trumpet by Psiax, detail / Ancient Art & Architecture Collection Ltd (tc). The Bridgeman Art Library: Dancer of goddess Demeter, Scythian, made of gold / Boltin Picture Library (tl). Corbis: Detail of the Stele of Ur-Nammu showing King Ur-Nammu making an offering to the moon god Nannar / Bettmann (bl); Terracotta warrior with color still remaining, Emperor Qin Shihuangdi's Tomb, Xian, Shaanxi, China / Keren Su (bc). Getty Images: Gold Iunula, found by Ross C. Westmeath, Eire, National Museum of Ireland, Dublin / The Bridgeman Art Library, London (br); DEA / A. Dagli Orti (tr). 16 The Bridgeman Art Library: Beadnet dress, from Tomb G 2342 D (now G 5520 D) Giza, Old Kingdom (faience), Museum of Fine Arts Boston, Mass. Harvard University, Museum of Fine Arts Expedition (bl). Corbis: Small standing statuette of a priest found in Saqqara in 1872, Egypt / Sandro Vannini (br). Getty Images: Wood sculpture of female offering bearer from Thebes, Egypt / DEA / A. Jemolo (t); Detail of antechamber fresco, Queen Nefertari playing Senet, Tomb of Nefertari, Egypt / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (bc). 17 Corbis: Detail of fresco, scribe offering flowers to the god of the west. Egypt / Gianni Dagli Orti (bl). Dorling Kindersley: The Trustees of the British Museum (crb, cr). Getty Images: Tutankhamen and wife Ankhesenamon protected by solar disk on throne, from Treasure of Tutankhamen, Egypt / DEA / S. Vannini (tl); Detail of the Book of the Dead of Heruben, Egypt / DEA / A. Dagli Orti (bc); Mural of prince and wife at Tomb of Senneferi detail, Shaykh Abd al-Qurnah, Ancient Thebes, Egypt / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (cra). 18 Blandford Fashion Museum (br). Getty Images: Bust of Queen Nefertiti of Egypt, Neues Museum, Berlin 2011 / AFP (cl); Female torso, probably Queen Nefertiti, Louvre, Paris / The Bridgeman Art Library, London (c), 19 Corbis: Relief of a royal couple in the Armana style, Agyptisches Museum und Papyrussammlung. 20 Corbis: Sarcophagus of Hagia Triada: libation and ritual offerings to the deceased, detail / Gianni Dagli Orti

(br); Faience figurine of the "Snake Goddess, found Knossos, Heraklion Archeological Museum, Crete / Scott Smith (tr); Fresco from Thira, National Archaeological Museum, Athens, detail / Jean-Pierre Lescourret (bc). Getty Images: Minoan ear pendant, Greece / Danita Delimont (bl). 21 Alamy Images: Men worshipping bare-breasted goddess, Minoan fresco, Heraklion Museum, Crete / The Art Archive (tl). Corbis: Gianni Dagli Orti (bl); Fresco of a Minoan Priest King at Knossos / National Geographic Society / Maynard Owen Williams (br); Faience figurine of the "Snake Goddess," found Knossos, Heraklion Archeological Museum, Crete / Scott Smith (tr). 22-23 Corbis: Minoan fresco of The Blue Ladies, found Palace of Knossos / Wolfgang Kaehler. 23 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs (r). 24 Corbis: The Charioteer of Delphi by Pythagoras of Samos / Ruggero Vanni (br). Getty Images: Red-figure pottery, skyphos by Hieron the potter, detail with the capture of Briseis / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (bl) 25 Corbis: Greek statue of woman from Tanagra / Araldo de Luca (bl). Getty Images: Redfigure pottery, Epinetron by Eretria painter depicting woman at her toilet, detail / De Agostini (cr): Attic amphora black-figure pottery, detail from Vulci, Italy / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (tl, br); The Charioteer of Delphi by Pythagoras of Samos, detail, National Archaeological Museum, Athens / Leemage / Universal Images Group (bc); Statue of a lady, Kore, Acropolis Museum, Athens / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (tl, br). 26 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs (I). 26-27 Getty Images: Votive relief with Artemis before and Kephisos or Cephisus, river god, and three nymphs / DEA / G. Nimatallah. 28 Brendan Donovan: Terracotta soldier, Heraklion Museum of Archaeology, Crete (r). Getty Images: Feathered fabric headdress, Peru, Chimu culture, Museo Preistorico Etnografico Pigorini, Rome / DEA / G. Nimatallah (bl); Small bronze votive statue, National Archaeological Museum, Florence / DEA / M. Carrieri (bc). 29 Alamy Images: Helmet fragment from Sutton Hoo Treasure, British Museum / The Art Gallery Collection (bc): Gundestrup Cauldron Danish National Museum, Copenhagen, detail / David Levenson (tc); Scottish stone warrior, gravestone West Highlands of Scotland / UK / Alan King (br). Corbis: Side view of west pediment sculpture from Temple of Aphaia / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (tl). Dorling Kindersley: The Trustees of the British Museum (cra). Getty Images: Etruscan-Corinthian alabastron depicting a warrior figure, painted by the Pescia romana Painter, British ım London / DEA Picture Library (bl). 30 Corbis: Western Han Dynasty oil lamp with kneeling servant girl / Asian Art & Archaeology Inc. (bl); Xuanzang returning from his pilgrimage to India to recover Buddhist texts / Lebrecht Music & Arts (bc); Masked Caucasoid mummy from Tarim Basin, Xinjiang, Uygur utonomous region, Bureau of Cultural Heritage, China (br). Getty Images: detail from transporting ceramics (painted silk), Topkapi Palace Museum, Istanbul / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr). 31 Alamy Images: TAO Images Limited (c). Corbis: Asian Art & Archaeology Inc. (tr); Tibor Bognar (bl. br.): Sassanian bas-reliefs, Tag-é Bostan Kermanshah, Iran, detail / Tibor Bognar (bl, br). Getty Images: detail from transporting ceramics (painted silk), Topkapi Palace Museum, Istanbul / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl). 32 Corbis: Mural painting on the wall of an Etruscan tomb in Tarquinia, Rome, detail / Charles & Josette Lenars (tc); Detail of a woman from Tomb of the Jugglers fresco cycle, Tarquinia, Rome / Charles Lenars (bc). Getty Images: DEA / G. Nimatallah (clb); DEA / G. Dagli Orti (bl). 33 Corbis: Detail of Tomb of the Augurs at Tarquinii, Italy / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (bc); Detail from an Etruscan vase, Etruscan Museum, Rome, 2005 / Reuters (bl); Statuette of the Etruscan Goddess Turan / Gianni Dagli Orti (r). Getty Images: Detail showing crowned Dionysus and Ariadne, red-figure pottery, Krater, from Civita Castellana, ancient Falerii, Rome province, Italy / DEA / G. Nimatallah (tc). 34 Alamy Images: Detail of marble statue of a woman of imperial period from Aptera, Archaeological Museum Istanbul / The Art Archive (cla). Corbis: Portrait of Aulus Gabinius from Herculaneum / Bettmann (bl); Detail of fresco painting in House of the Vettii, Pompeii / Steven Vidler / Eurasia Press (br). 35 Alamy Images: Hunting mosaic Villa Romana del Casale, Piazza Armerina, Sicily / Peter Barritt (bl). Corbis: Detail from fresco depicting Artemis sending a deer to spare the sacrifice of Iphigenia, House of Tragic Poet, Pompeii, National Archaeological Museum, Naples / Peter Barritt (bc br); Detail from fresco depicting Argos watching over the nymph Io, House of Meleager, Pompeii, National Archaeological Museum, Naples / Peter Barritt (bc, br). Getty Images: Altrendo (tl); Fresco portraying Jason and Pelias, Pompeii / DEA / A. Dagli Orti (tr). 36 Corbis: Byzantine diptych panel depicting the Empress Ariadne / Alinari Archives (r); Melvyn Longhurst (bc). Getty Images: Empress Theodora with her court of two ministers and seven women, detail, San Vitale, Ravenna, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library, London (bl). 37 Alamy Images: Detail from mosaic depicting holy virgins bearing offerings to the Virgin, Basilica di Sant Apollinare Nuovo, Ravenna, Italy / Adam Eastland Italy (bl). Corbis: Detail from mosaic of Saint Paul, depicting his flight from Damascus, Cappella Palatina, Palazzo dei Normanni, Palermo, Sicily / Melvyn Longhurst (tc). Getty Images: Detail from mosaic depicting Emperor Justinian I and his retinue of officials, guards and clergy, San Vitale, Ravenna, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: Detail from mosaic of The Samaritan Woman at the Well, Church of Sant' Apollinare Nuovo, Ravenna, Italy / Ministero Beni e Att. Culturali (tl). 38 Corbis: Painted reproduction of the statue of Paris the archer, National Archaeological Museum, Athens / Reuters (bl); Detail of mummy mask of a woman wearing a flower garland, Meir, Egypt / Sandro Vannini (br). Getty Images: Detail from Etruscan black-figure amphora depicting the Judgment of Paris, Staatliche Antikensammlung, Munich, Germany / DEA / C. Moessner (tr). 39 Alamy Images: Detail of wall painting depicting Semite women from Beni Hasan. Egypt / www.BibleLandPictures.com (bc). Corbis: Gianni Dagli Orti (tc); Detail from fresco in the House of Marcus Lucretius Fronto, Pompeii / Mimmo Jodice (tl); Detail from fresco representing the initiation into the cult of Dionysus, Villa of the Mysteries, Pompeii / Frederic Soltan (br). Getty Images: Detail from transporting ceramics (painted silk) Tonkani Palace Museum, Istanbul / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl). 40 The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from Cott Tib B V f.5 peasants tending sheep / British Library (ca). 41 Getty Images: Detail from marble bas-relief of Ludovis throne depicting the birth of Aphrodite, Museo Nazionale Romano, Rome / Leemage / Universal Images Group (br). 42-43 Corbis: Brookly Museum. 44-45 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 44 The Bridgeman Art Library: From mosaic depicting Christ Crowning King Roger II of Sicily, La Martorana, Palermo, Sicily / Seat Alinari (br). Corbis: Bettmann (bc); Stapleton Collection (c). Getty Images: De Agostini (cra). 45 Alamy Images: Detail of The Depiction of Christ in the Temple, Hans Holbein the Elder / The Art Gallery Collection (cr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Roman du Roy Meliadus de Leonnovs, Ms Add 12228 f.202v, Merlin tutoring Arthur / British Library (c). Courtesy of the Portable Antiquities Scheme: (cla). 46 Alamy Images: Detail from painting showing the peoples of the world adoring Otto III, from the Gospels of Otto III / World History Archive (br). Corbis: Brooklyn Museum (bl). Getty Images: Detail from Ms Cim.4453 f.42r, Holy Roman Emperor Otto III Enthroned, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich, Germany / The Bridgeman Art Library (bc). 47 Alamy Images: Detail from manuscript "Codex Legum Longobardorum" depicting Frankish King and Emperor Ludovic / The Art Archive (tr); Detail from The Sacramentary of Metz: a Frankish prince between two ecclesiastics, Snark Archives, France / Photos 12 (c). The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from Lord and vassal, from "Liber Feodorum Major" / Archivo de la Corona de Aragon, Barcelona, Spain (bl). Corbis: Wooden carving from Hylestad stave church, Norway, showing scene from the story of Sigurd Regin the Smith reforges the broken sword, Universitetets Oldsaksamling, Oslo / Heritage Images (tl). 48 The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from manuscript Cott Tib C VI f.30v, David playing his harp, from the Tiberius Psalter, Winchester / British Library (tr, br); Detail from manuscript Aa 21 fol.2v, dedication of the book to Christ, from the Gospel of Countess Judith / Landes Bibliothek, Filda (tc); Detail from manuscript Add 33241 f.1v-2 from Encomium of Queen Emma or Gesta Cnutonis, author offering his book to Queen Emma / British Library (tr, br). Corbis: Detail from De Rerum Naturis: man buying a goose / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (bl, fbl); Detail from De Rerum Naturis: woman drawing water from a well / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art

Archive (bl, fbl). Getty Images: Detail from an illustration of King Canute and his Queen Aelfgifu, taken from the register of Hyde Abbey / Hulton Archive (bc). 49 Alamy Images: Detail from Bayeux Tapestry, depicting English soldier defending a hill at Battle of Hastings, Musée de la Tapisserie Bayeux / The Art Archive (bl). The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from Ms Lat 1118, illustration of a dancer from the Tropary of St. Martial / Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris, France (tl); Detail from Ms 250 fol.43v, St. Radegund on a throne, from the Life of St. Radegund, Bibliotheque Municipale, Poitiers / Giraudon (r); Collection of Anglo-Saxon and Celtic jewelry including gilt bronze mounts, saucer and cruciform brooches and a Merovingian pendant / private collection, photo @ Bonhams, London, UK (br). 50-51 Corbis: Detail of Bayeux Tapestry fortification construction underway at Hastings, Musée de la Tapisserie Bayeux / Gianni Dagli Orti 51 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 52 The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from MS Hunter 229 f.4v, Virgo, from the Hunterian Psalter / Glasgow University Library, Scotland (br); Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Mass., USA (bl). Corbis: Detail from Moralia in Job by Pope Gregory the Great, historiated initial 'R' depicting a knight fighting a dragon / The Gallery Collection (r). 53 The Bridgeman Art Library: Detail from Moralia in Job by Pope Gregory the Great / Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris, France (br); Detail from a wedding chest depicting a musician and a dancer / Vannes Cathedral France (tc): From "Passionale" f. 218v, detail of an inhabited intial 'T depicting a man playing a rebec / British Library (tr); From Hunterian Psalter, Ms Hunter 229 f.8r. depicting expulsion from paradise / Glasgow University Library, Scotland (bc). Getty Images: Detail from Liber Feudorum: marriage scene, Archivo de la Corona de Aragon, Barcelona, Spain / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl, bl); From panel door, depicting an exorcism, Church of San Zeno Maggiore, Verona, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl, bl). 54 The Bridgeman Art Library: From fresco royal cortege, Isabella of Angoulême and Eleanor of Aquitaine, Chapel of St. Radegund, Chinon, France / De Agostini Picture Library. 55 akg-images: (cr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From window at Basilique Saint-Denis, France, depicting Moses saved from the water / Giraudon (c, br); Detail from a wedding chest depicting a musician and a dancer / Vannes Cathedral, France (bl); From St. Clotilda and Clovis I, Church Notre-Dame of Corbeil, Musée des Monuments Francais, Paris / Giraudon (c. br.) 56 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Add 42130 f.163v, Luttrell Psalter, women bearing vessels / British Library (tr); From "Liber notabilium Philippi Septimi, francorum regis, a libris Galieni extractus," by Guy of Pavia, Ms 334/569 fig.18, doctor taking the pulse of a patient, Musée Conde, Chantilly / Giraudon (bc). Corbis: From Apse Mosaic of San Clemente, Rome / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (tc): From manuscript depicting dyers immersing bolt of cloth in vat of dye placed over a fire, British Museum, London /Heritage Images (bl). Getty Images: From "Historia Naturalis," depicting Pliny the Elder, detail of frontispiece to Book I, Biblioteca Marciana, Venice / The Bridgeman Art Library (br). 57 Alamy Images: From Moralia in Job by Saint Gregory, Saint Gregory offering his book to Bishop Leander, folio 5R, Bibliothèque Municipale, Dijon / The Art Archive (br). The Bridgeman Art Library: From fresco in Palazzo Pubblico, Siena, effects of good government in the countryside / Alinari (c); From fresco in San Giacomo, Castelaz, Termeno, St. James entering a house during a meal, from the Story of St. James / Seat Alinari (bl). Corbis: From Breviaire d'Amour, French Breviary Illumination of the month of March / Gianni Dagli Orti (tl); David Lees (tr). 58 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Ms Grec 2144 Apocauchus, Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris / Archives Charmet (bl); Miniature in a book of music from the Cantigas of Alfonso X the Wise, 124-0633321/1, A Moor and a Christian playing the lute, Monasterio de El Escorial, El Escorial / Index (r). 59 akg-images: Coronation robe of Roger II, detail showing lion's head, Treasure Chamber, Palermo / Erich Lessing (br). The Bridgeman Art Library: From The Book of Kalila and Dimna from "The Fables of Bidpay," Fol.101, A woman beseeching the Sultan, Egyptian National Library, Cairo / Giraudon (bl); From "Book of Games, Chess, Dice and Boards," Alfonso X The Wise, King of Leon and Castile playing a game of chess, Biblioteca Monasterio del Escorial / Index (tl): From fresco in the King's Church, depicting the presentation of the virgin in the temple / Krakjeva Crkva, Studenica Monastery, Serbia (tc): From mosaic depicting Christ crowning King Roger II of Sicily, La Martorana, Palermo, Sicily / Seat Alinari (tr); From Birds' Head Haggadah / The Israel Museum, Jerusalem, Israel (bc). 60 The Bridgeman Art Library: From De Arte Venandi cum Avibus, Pal Lat 1071 Frederick II, two horsemen with falcons / Vatican Library, Rome (b). 60-61 Getty Images: Miniature from the Decretals, compiled by Giovanni d'Andrea under the direction of Pope Gregory IX, Bibliothèque Municipale, Laon, France / Leemage / Universal Images Group (tc).

61 akg-images: Pellote de Infanta don Fernando de la Cerda, Burgos / Album / Oronoz (tr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From a miniature from Tristan, by Gottfried von Strassburg, King Mark exiles Tristan and Isolde and King Mark finds Tristan and Isolde sleeping in a cave, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich / De Agostini Picture Library (bl); Pierpont Morgan Library, New York (br). Corbis: From Book of Games by Alfonso X King of Spain, detail depicting two ladies playing chess / Gianni Dagli Orti (bc). 64 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Luttrell Psalter, Add 42130 fol.76v. a King and Lady seated in a garden playing a board game resembling backgammon / British Library (tc, tr, br); From Golden Haggadah, Barcelona, Add 27210 f.15r, preparations for the Passover / British Library (tc, tr, br); From Le Roman de la Rose, le testament, by Jean de Meung, Ms 482/665 f.1, the lover sleeping, dressing, sewing his sleeve and standing at the house of love's pleasure, Musée Condé, Chantilly / Giraudon (bl); From Dream of the Orchard Keeper, Roy 19 C IV f.298. Charles V enthroned in the garden with crown and sceptre / British Library (tc, tr, br). Getty Images: Detail of two falconers, from the Stag Room, Palais des Papes, Avignon / The Bridgeman Art Library (bc). 65 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Roman du Roy Meliadus de Leonnoys, Ms Add 12228 f.202v, Merlin tutoring Arthur / British Library (bl, r); From Ms Fr 1584 f.D, the author receiving Love who brings to him sweet thoughts, pleasure and hope, Bibliothèque nationale de France, Paris / Giraudon (tl); From St. Alban's Chronicle, Cotton Nero D VIII fol 7 Queen Matilda holding a charter / British Library (bl, r). Getty Images: Medieval leather shoes, Museum of London / The Bridgeman Art Library (br). 66-67 Corbis: April from Les Trés Riches Heures du Duc de Berry, Musée Condé Chantilly / Heritage Images. 66 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs (I). 68 Alamy Images: From Bayeux Tapestry, Norman archer at the Battle of Hastings, Musée de la Tapisserie Bayeux / The Art Archive (bc, tr); From Manesse Codex, Walther von Klingen and Ulrich von Liechstenstein, noble German knights, jousting in a tournament University Library Heidelberg / The Art Archive (bc, tr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Cotton Nero D VI fol.31, Edward III granting the Black Prince the principality of Aquitaine / British Library (br). 69 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Westminster Psalter, Roy 2 A XXII f.220, kneeling crusader with his horse behind him / British Library (tc). Corbis: Manuscript illustration of a joust between Jean Chalons, an Englishman, and Loys de Beul of France at Tours, Royal Armouries Museum, Leeds / Heritage Images (br). Getty Images: From The Temple Pyx, Burrell Collection, Glasgow / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl, tr); From tomb plaque of Geoffrey Plantagenet from the Cathedral of St. Julien, Musée de Tessé, Le Mans / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl, tr); From Capodilista Codex, knight with green and white shields on red horse, Biblioteca Civica, Padua / SuperStock (bc). 72 The Bridgeman Art Library: From fresco The Fountain of Life, detail of people arriving and bathing in the fountain, Castello della Manta, Saluzzo / Alinari (tr); Paul Freeman (bl); From Tacuinum Sanitatis, Nouv Acq Lat 1673 fol.18, Harvesting Lemons, Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris / Archives Charmet (c); From Roman de la Rose, Ms Fr 12595 fol.27v, Bel Accueil Smelling a Rose, Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris / Flammarion (br). 73 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Roman de la Rose Ms Fr 12595 fol.17, The God of Love Returns the Golden Key / Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris, France (br): From Tacuinum Sanitatis, Nova 2644 fol.96v. Fencing / Osterreichische Nationalbibliothek, Vienna (tl); Love Scene, detail of panelling from the Penafiel Castle, Valladolid, workshop of Claustro de Silo / Museo Episcopal de Vic, Osona, Spain (tc); Arnolfini Portrait by Jan van Eyck / National Gallery London (bc). Corbis: Renaissance manuscript illumination of textile merchants, from "Book of Statutes of the Tailors' Guild" /Gianni Dagli Orti (tr). 74 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Harl 4431 fol.183, Nine Muses Bathing, from the Collected Works of Christine de Pisan / British Library (bc); Arnolfini Portrait by Jan van Eyck / National Gallery London (bl); From the Virgin Mary with her classmates showing needlework samplers to their teacher detail from the Altarpiece of the Virgin and St. George, San Francesco, Vilafranca Penedes, Spain / Index (tc); Effigy of Beatrice Fitzalan, wife of the 5th Earl of Arundel, Fitzalan Chapel / His Grace The Duke of Norfolk, Arundel Castle (tr). Getty Images: From Roman du Chevalier Tristan, by the Master of Charles of Maine, Isolde with her ladies in waiting, Musée Condé, Chantilly / Leemage / Universal Images Group (br). 75 The Bridgeman Art Library: From fresco The Nine Worthies and the Nine Worthy Women, Castello della Manta, Saluzzo, Italy / Alinari (tr); From April, Les Très Riches Heures du Duc de Berry Ms 65/1284 f.4v, courtly figures in the castle grounds, Musée Condé, Chantilly / Giraudon (br). Corbis: From The Descent from the Cross by Rogier van der Weyden, Museo del Prado, Madrid / The Gallery Collection (tl). SuperStock: The Magdalen Reading, detail by Rogier van der Weyden, National Gallery, London / Fine Art Images (c). 76-77 Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matthews Collection, Chertsey Museum. 78 Alamy Images: Zuma Wire Service (cb). The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of a man in red, Flemish School / The Royal Collection © 2011 Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II (cra). Getty Images: Man Holding an Apple by Raphael, Galleria degli Uffizi Florence / The Bridgeman Art Library (cla); Lady with brocade dress, from "The Book of the Tailor," plate 94 / De Agostini (bc). 79 Alamy Images: Cultivation of cochineal insects on prickly pear, Codex Kingsborough, illustrated manuscript, Mexico / The Art Archive (cla, ca); Laughing Cavalier by Frans Hals, Wallace Collection, London / Superstock (br); Pope Pius V at prayer, artist unknown, Santa Corona church Vicenza / The Art Archive (cla, ca). Getty Images: Portrait of gentlewoman by unknown Venetian artist / DEA / A. Dagli Orti (cl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl). 80 Alamy Images: Engraving The III Assorted Couple by Albrecht Dürer, Victoria & Albert Museum, London / V&A Images (tr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Devotionary of Queen Juana the Mad, Ms 604/1339 f.30v, Queen Isabella of Castile / Musée Condé, Chantilly (br). Corbis: From Portrait of a Lady by workshop of Rogier van der Weyden, National Gallery London / The Gallery Collection (c). Getty Images: Portrait of a Lady in Red, Anon, National Gallery, London / The Bridgeman Art Library (cl, bc); From Roman du Saint Graal Ms 527 fol.1r, court ball, Bibliothèque Municipale, Dijon, France / The Bridgeman Art Library (cl, bc). 81 Alamy Images: The Print Collector (tl). Corbis: Detail of Birth of the Virgin by Domenico Ghirlandaio, Santa Maria Novella, Florence, Italy / Alinari Archives (tc); From couple talking in their bedroom, folio 17R of 1475 French manuscript book of miniatures, Musée Condé, Chantilly / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (tr); Courtly Life or "La Vie Seigneuriale," Musée National du Moyen Age et des Thermes de Cluny, Paris / Francis G. Mayer (bl); Manuscript illumination depicting author dedicating French translation of book to unknown woman by Giovanni Boccaccio / Historical Picture Archive (br). 82-83 The Bridgeman Art Library: The Miracle of the Relic of the True Cross on the Rialto Bridge by Vittore Carpaccio, Galleria dell' Accademia, Venice / Giraudon. 83 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 84 The Bridgeman Art Library: From the Coronation of Richard II to 1387 Vol III by Jean de Batard Wavrin Roy, 14 E IV f.244v, Duke of Lancaster dines with the King of Portugal / British Library (bl). Corbis: Woodcut print showing medieval medica practioners with an injured patient, detail / Stapleton Collection (br); Courtly Life or "La Vie Seigneuriale," The Departure for the Hunt, Musée National du Moyen Age et des Thermes de Cluny, Paris / Francis G. Mayer (c, tr); From The Miracle of Saint Quentin: a thief steals the horse from a priest's stable, MR R 825 Louvre, Departement des Objets d'Art, Paris / Francis G. Mayer (c, tr). 85 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Guild Book of the Barber Surgeons of York, Eg 2572 f.51v, The Four Humours / British Library (bl); From Hainaut Chronicles, Ms 9242, Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, presented with the translation of the Chronicles by Jean Vauquelin, Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, Brussels / Giraudon (tl); Frontal from the Adimari Cassone depicting a wedding scene in front of the Baptistry, detail of four men, Giovanni di Ser Giovanni Scheggia / Galleria dell' Accademia, Florence (tc); Portrait of Juan II of Portugal / Hospital Tavera, Toledo, Spain (bc). Corbis: Types of liberality from a French renaissance manuscript / Gianni Dagl Orti (br). Getty Images: Lorenzo de' Medici the Magnificent as one of the Three Kings, detail from the Journey of the Magi cycle in the chapel, Benozzo di Lese di Sandro Gozzoli, Palazzo Medici-Riccardi, Florence / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr) 86 The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of Mette (Mathildis) von Munchhausen, by Ludger Tom Ring the Younger / Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg, Germany (t); From La Coche ou le Debat d'Amour Ms 522/1878 fol.11, Marguerite de Valois presenting her book to Anne de Pisseleu Duchesse d'Etampes / Musée Condé, Chantilly (bc). Corbis: Jane Seymour by Hans Holbein the Younger, Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna / The Gallery Collection (br). Getty Images: Portrait of Catherine Parr by Hans the Younger Holbein / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl). 87 The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of a Lady by Giovanni Battista Moroni / National Gallery London (tc); The Miracle of the Speech of the Newborn Child by Titian / Scuola del Santo, Padua, Italy (tr); Portrait of the Empress Isabella of Portugal by Titian / Prado, Madrid (br). Corbis: Flemish Tapestry Tournament / Bass Museum of Art (tl). Getty Images: Philip II and Mary I by Hans Eworth or Ewoutsz, Trustees of the Bedford Estate, Woburn Abbey / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl): From Emperor Maximilian II, his wife Maria of Spain and children Anna, Rudolf and Ernst by Giuseppe Arcimboldo, Portraitgalerie Schloss Ambras, Innsbruck, Austria / Hulton Archive (bc) 88 Corbis: Singers, engraving by Marcantonio Raimondi / Historical Picture Archive (bl). Getty Images: The Ambassadors by Hans Holbein the Younger, National Gallery London / The Bridgemar Art Library (r). 89 The Bridgeman Art Library:Portrait of a man in red, Flemish School / The Royal Collection © 2011 Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II (tr); Henry, Duke of Saxony by Lucas Cranach the Elder, Gemaeldegalerie Alte Meister, Dresden, Germany / Staatliche Kunstsammlungen Dresden (tl). Corbis: Portrait of King Henry II, French School, Musée Condé Chantilly / Alfredo Dagli Orti / The Art Archive (bc); Archduke Karl II of Austria Kunsthistorisches Museum / Austrian Archives (br). Getty Images: Archduke Ferdinand of Tirol, son of the Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand I by Jakob Seisenegger, Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna The Bridgeman Art Library (tc). 90 © Abegg-Stiftung, CH-3132 Riggisberg: Rüstkammer, Staatliche Kunstsammlungen Dresden, inv. no. i.1, photo: Christoph von Viràg (bl, cb, bc, r). 91 © Abegg-Stiftung, CH-3132 Riggisberg: Rüstkammer, Staatliche Kunstsammlungen Dresden, inv. no. i.1, photo: Christoph von Viràg (I, crb, tr, cra. cr. br). 92 akg-images: From Charles V. Holy Roman Empire process through Bologna after the coronation of the Emperor by Hans Burgkmair (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (br). 93 Alamy Images: Interfoto (tl). Corbis: Robert Radcliffe, Earl of Sussex by Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger, Royal Armouries / Heritage Images (br); Alessandro de Medici by Giorgio Vasari, Uffizi Gallery, Firenze / Summerfield Press (tc). Getty Images: Philip II (1527-98) of Spain by Sir Anthonis van Dashorst Mor, Prado, Madrid / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl). 94 Corbis: Laura da Pola by Lorenzo Lotto, Pinacoteca di Brera, Milan / Alinari Archives (bl). Getty Images: Anna of Austria, Queen consort of Spain and Portugal / DEA / G. Nimatallah (r). 95 The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of an unknown lady by Alonso Sanchez Coello / Chatsworth House Derbyshire, UK (bl). Corbis: Princess Elizabeth, Daughter of James I attributed to Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger / The Gallery Collection (br). Getty Images: Ann of Denmark, the wife of the Prince elector August of Saxony by Lucas Cranach the Young, Vienne Kunsthistorisches Museum Austria / Leemage / Universal Images Group (tc).

96 The Bridgeman Art Library: Queen Elizabeth
I—The Pelican Portrait by Nicholas Hilliard / Walker Art Gallery, National Museums Liverpool. 97 Corbis: Queen Elizabeth I of England, copy of "Rainbow" portrait attributed to M. Gheeraerts or Isaac Oliver at Hatfield House, Musée du Château de Versailles / The Art Archive (cr): Oueen Elizabeth I in Coronation Robes, National Portrait Gallery London / The Gallery Collection (bc); English gold pound coin with portrait of Queen Elizabeth I / Hoberman Collection (br). Rex Features: SIPA (c) 98 Corbis: Self-portrait with Wife, Isabella Brandt by Peter Paul Rubens, Alte Pinakothek, Munich / The Gallery Collection (bl, bc); Anne of Denmark attributed to Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger Woburn Abbey / The Gallery Collection (bl, bc). 99 akg-images: Isabel de Valois by Anthonis Mor, Private Collection, Madrid / Album / Oronoz (tr). The Bridgeman Art Library: Frances Howard, Countess of Hertford by Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger / Cowdray Park, Sussex, UK (bl); Infanta Isabella Clara Eugenia, daughter of King Philip II of Spain by Anguissola, Sofonisba / Prado, Madrid (tl);

Elizabeth Vernon, Countess of Southampton, English School / Fitzwiliam Museum, University of Cambridge (tc); Mrs. Penobscot in the manner of Daniel Mytens, The Vyne Hampshire UK / National Trust Photographic Library (bc); Portrait presumed to be Henrietta Maria of France, French School, Château de Versailles France / Giraudon (br) 100 Corbis: Philip II of Spain by Titian and Workshop, Palazzo Pitti, Florence / Arte & Immagini slr (tr). Getty Images: Don Carlos son of King Philip Il of Spain by Alonso Sanches Coello, Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna / The Bridgeman Art Library (c, br); From fresco Invitation to the Dance, by Giovanni Antonio Fasolo, Villa Caldogno-Nordera, Caldogna, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library (c, br). 101 Corbis: Charles IX of France by Francois Clouet, Musée Condé Chantilly France / Burstein Collection (bl). Getty Images: Gian Gerolamo Grumelli by Giovanni Battista Moroni, collection of Count Antonio Moroni Bergamo, Italy / The Bridgeman Art Library (r); Prince elector, August I of Saxony, called the pious by Lucas Cranach the Young, Vienne Kunsthistorisches Museum, Austria / Leemage / Universal Images Group (tc). 102-103
Getty Images: Ball at the court of King Henri III of France or ball of the Duke of Alencon, French School, Louvre, Paris / The Bridgeman Art Library. 103 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 104 Corbis: The Sutherland Portrait of James VI of Scotland by John de Critz the Elder / Fine Art Photographic Library (tr); Edward Sackville, 4th Earl of Dorset by William Larkin, Ranger's House, Blackheath, UK / The Gallery Collection (c). 105 The Bridgeman Art Library: Edward Somerset, 4th Earl of Worcester from Queen Elizabeth I Being Carried in Procession (Eliza Triumphans) by Robert Peake / private collection (bl). Corbis: Portrait of a Man (The Tailor) by Giovanni Battista Moroni, National Gallery London / The Gallery Collection (br). Getty Images: A Young Man Leaning Against a Tree Among Roses by Nicholas Hilliard, Victoria & Albert Museum London / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr); King Henri III of France by Francois Quesnel, Portraitgalerie Schloss Ambras Innsbruck Austria / Hulton Archive (tl) World Digital Library (WDL): Tailor's pattern from Juan de Alcega, Libro de geometria, practica y traça ("Book on Geometry, Practice and Patterns") c1580 Publ Guillermo Drouy, Madrid, http://www.wdl.org/ en/item/7333/ (bc). 106 The Bridgeman Art Library: Giuseppe da Porto and his Son Adriano by Veronese (Paolo Caliari) / Galleria Degli Uffizi, Florence (tr); Elizabeth I, "The Hampden Portrait," Anglo-Flemish School / private collection / photo © Philip Mould Ltd, London (c). Getty Images: From the tapestry The Lady and the Unicorn: "Smell," Musée National du Moyen Age et des Thermes de Cluny, Paris / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl, br); Portrait of a Young Girl by Adriaen van der Linde, private collection / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl, br). 107 Bayerische Staatsbibliothek: Kostümbuch—Kopie nach dem Trachtenbuch des Christoph Weiditz—BSB Cod.icon. 342 (tc). The Bridgeman Art Library: Duchess Katharina of Mecklenburg by Lucas Cranach the Elder. Gemaeldegalerie Alte Meister, Dresden / Staatliche Kunstsammlungen Dresden (tr); Portrait of Countess Livia da Porto Thiene and her Daughter, Portia by Veronese / Walters Art Museum, Baltimore, USA (I). Getty Images: Detail from a portrait of Anne Boleyn, English School, Loseley Park, Guildford Surrey, UK / The Bridgeman Art Library (br). 108 The Bridgeman Art Library: Kippell's costume book by Niclauss Kippell, MS W. 477 fol. 16 / Walters Art Museum, Baltimore, USA (bc). Corbis: Hand colored engraving by Theodor de Bry After Pictish Woman Warrior by John White / The Mariners' Museum (tr). Getty Images: Leo X, Cardinal Luigi de Rossi and Giulio de Medici by Raphael, Galleria degli Uffizi, Florence / The Bridgeman Art Library (bl): From Saint Catherine and Saint Marguerite Flemish School, Louvre, Paris / SuperStock (br). 109 Alamy Images: An unknown lady in fancy dress also known as The Persian Lady by Marcus Gheeraerts the Younger, Hampton Court Palace, UK / The Art Gallery Collection (tr); Queen Elizabeth I by studio of Nicholas Hilliard, Hardwick Hall, The Devonshire Collection / The National Trust Photo Library (tc). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Jane Seymour by Hans Holbein the Younger / Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna (br); Richard Sackville, 3rd Earl of Dorset by Isaac Oliver / Victoria & Albert Museum, London (l). 110 Corbis: From The Path of Life from The Haywain by Hieronymous Bosch, Museo del Prado / The Gallery Collection (br). Getty Images: From Rustic Wedding, detail of people dancing by Pieter the Younger Brueghel, Museum voor Schone Kunsten, Ghent / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr, bl); Leather jerkin, Museum of London, UK / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr, bl). 111 Alamy Images: French peasant carrying cheeses and poultry engraving from Habitus praecipuorum popularum, Biblioteca Nacional Madrid / The Art Archive (tl). The Bridgeman Art Library: Young English Woman by Hans Holbein the Younger / Ashmolean Museum (r); Detail from Envy, a part of the Table of the Seven Deadly Sins and the Four Last Things by Hieronymus Bosch, Prado Madrid / Giraudon (tc). Getty Images: Spanish peasant woman from Habitus praecipuorum popularum by Jost Amman / DEA / G. Dagli Orti (bl) 112 Alamy Images: Robe belonging to Ottoman Sultan Beyazid II, Topkapi Museum Istanbul / The Art Archive (br). Corbis: A Turkish artist attributed to Gentile Bellini / Burstein Collection (bl). Getty Images: Selim II 11th Sultan of the Ottoman Empire by Nigari Reis Haydar a.k.a Nakkep, Topkapi Sarayi Museum Library Istanbul / Leemage / Universal Images Group (tc). 113 The Bridgeman Art Library: Nicolas de Respaigne by Peter Paul Rubens, Gemaeldegalerie Alte Meister, Kassel, Germany / Museumslandschaft Hessen Kassel (I): Hand colored engraving from Omnium Poene Gentium Imagines by Abraham de Bruyn, Cologne / private collection (br). 114 The Shoe Museum: W17+sD30. 116-117 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 116 Banbury Museum: (tl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (cr); Universal Images Group (ca). 117 Alamy Images: Old Paper Studios (cl). Banbury Museum: (tl). Corbis: Madame de Pompadour by François Boucher / Stapleton Collection (bl). Getty Images: The Bridgeman Art Library (c); Universal Images Group (cr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (cla, br). 118 Getty Images: From Willem Van Heythuyzen by Frans Hals, Alte Pinakothek, Munich, Germany / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr). 119 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Sir John Ashburnham by Daniel Mytens, National Gallery of Victoria, Melbourne / Everard Studley Miller Bequest (tl); From Sir Alexander Carew by John Hammond, Antony House Cornwall UK / National Trust Photographic Library (c). Corbis: From Charles I of Great Britain and Ireland by Daniel Mytens the Elder, National Portrait Gallery London / Heritage Images (bl). 120 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Portrait of a Lady by Gerrit van Donck / © Bonhams, London, UK (bl). Getty Images: From presumed portrait of Marchesa Geromina (Spinola-Doria of Genoa) by Sir Anthony van Dyck / SuperStock (r). 121 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Saint Margaret of Antioch by Francisco de Zurbaran, National Gallery, London, UK (bl, bc); From Portrait of a Woman, by Sir Anthony van Dyck, The Royal Collection © 2011 Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II (bl. bc): From Christian Bruce Countess of Devonshire and Her Children by Daniel Mytens / © Devonshire Collection, Chatsworth, reproduced by permission of Chatsworth Settlement Trustees (tc); From Dancing Party by Pieter Codde / private collection, Wassenaar, Netherlands (tr). Getty Images: English School gold pendant, Museum of London UK / The Bridgeman Art Library (crb). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Life-size dummy board depicting woman holding a mirror, East Sutton Park Kent, UK (tl). 122 Alamy Images: V&A Images (I). The Bridgeman Art Library: A Cavalier by Edward Bower, Dunster Castle Somerset, UK / National Trust Photographic Library (c). 123 Getty Images: King Charles I of England out hunting by Sir Anthony van Dyck, Louvre, Paris / The Bridgeman Art Library (c); DEA / A. Dagli Orti (tr). 124 Alamy Images: From Marguerite of Lorraine, Duchess of Orleans by Anthony Van Dyck, Galleria degli Uffizi Florence / The Art Archive (tc). 125 Alamy Images: From Anne Kirke by Anthony van Dyck, Flemish Belgian, Belgium / Peter Horree (c). Corbis: From Anne Countess of Clanbrassil by Anthony van Dyck / Geoffrey Clements (bl). 126 akg-images: From Henrietta Maria of England—Portrait with Lute and Dog by Cornelius Johnson and Gerard Houckgeest, Sotheby's 8 March 1989, Lot 24 (br); Henrietta Maria of France, Queen Consort of England by Anthony van Dyck / Memphis Brooks Museum of Art (cl). Corbis: Henrietta of France, Queen of England by Anthony van Dyck / Alinari Archives (c); From Queen Henrietta Maria and Her Dwarf, Sir Jeffrey Hudson by Anthony van Dyck / The Gallery Collection (bl). 127 The Bridgeman Art Library: Queen Henrietta Maria by Sir Anthony van Dyck / Wallace Collection, London. 128 Alamy Images: From An English Man and Two Women of the Mid-17th Century by Malcolm, from an old source, in his Anecdotes of the Manners and Customs of London. page 404 / Mary Evans Picture Library (tr). The Bridgeman Art Library: From The Virtuous Woman by Nicolaes Maes, © Wallace Collection, London, UK (bc); From A Conversation in the Street by Jacobus Vrel or Frel private collection / Johnny

Van Haeften Ltd., London (bl). Getty Images: From painted image of family in Delft by Pieter de Hooch, Vienna, Austria / DEA / G. Nimatallah (br). 129 Banbury Museum: (br). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Prince Octavio Piccolomini, 1st Duke of Amalfi as a delegate of the Nuremberg peace congress by Anselmus van Hulle, Deutsches Historisches Museum, Berlin, Germany (r); Habit of an Oliverian, English School, private collection / The Stapleton Collection (tl). Getty Images: From The Courtyard of a House in Delft by Pieter de Hooch / Universal Images Group (bl). 131 Getty Images: Portrait of King Charles II by Sir Peter Lely, © Royal Hospital Chelsea, London, LJK / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr). 132 The Bridgeman Art Library: From A Lady at Her Toilet by Gerard Terborch, Detroit Institute of Arts, USA / Founders Society Purchase (tc). Getty Images: From Portrait of Marie-Therese of Austria by Charles Beaubrun, Chateau de Versailles, France / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr). 133 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Anne Hyde, Duchess of York by Sir Peter Lely, Scottish National Portrait Gallery, Edinburgh, Scotland (tl). 134-135 The Bridgeman Art Library: The Tichborne Dole by Gillis van Tilborgh / Tichborne House, Hampshire UK. 135 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 136 Alamy Images: The Old Cloak and Hat Seller, engraving by Marcellus Laroon or Lauron from the Cryes and Habits of the City of London" / Timewatch Images (bl). 137 Corbis: From Charles VI of Habsburg, Holy Roman Empire, Charles III of Austria by Martin Mytens the Younger, Galleria degli Uffizi Florence / The Art Archive / @ Alfredo Dagli Orti (bl). Getty Images: From The Duke of Marlborough in Garter Robes by Sir Godfrey Kneller, Blenheim Palace Oxfordshire UK / The Bridgeman Art Library (br); From Portrait of Marin Marais playing a 7-string viola by Andre Bouys, Opera Museum of Paris, France / Leemage (tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (c). 138 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Louise de Keroualle by Sir Godfrey Kneller (r). Photo SCALA, Florence: Marie Adelaide de Savoie Duchesse de Bourgogne Dauphine of France, Musée du Château de Versailles / White Images (bc). 139 The Bridgeman Art Library: Thought to be Flizabeth Duchess of Reaufort by Michael Dahl private collection / Philip Mould Ltd, London (bl). 140 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). 142 Banbury Museum: (bl). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Portrait of Miss Elizabeth Hemyng by Arthur Devis, © Geffrye Museum, London, UK (c). The Shoe Museum: W17sD3, W17+sD13, W17sD1, W17+sD30 (br). 143 Alamy Images V&A Images (tl, bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br, tr); (tc, bc). 144-145 Blandford Fashion Museum. 146 Alamy Images: From Woman with Clasped Hands by Leclerc and Dupin, Bibliothèque des Arts Décoratifs Paris / The Art Archive (bc, tr); From Woman Reading Letter, wearing dress à la polonaise (Polish style) of painted fabric by Leclerc and Dupin, Bibliothèque des Arts Décoratifs Paris / The Art Archive (bc. tr). Corbis: From costume print of lady's ball gown by Desrais and Le Clerc / Historical Picture Archive (br); Miss Calash by George Paston, illustration from "Social Caricature in the Eighteenth Century" / The Print Collector (bl). Getty Images: From Fashionable Clothes by Leclerc and Dupin Paris, France / De Agostin (tc). 147 Corbis: From lady's simple promenade gown by Palas / Historical Picture Archive (I. br. tr): From lady's ball gown by Le Clerc / Historical Picture Archive (I, br, tr); From a lady's golden gown with a tight bodice and hooped skirt edged with pink gathered frill by Le Clerc / Historical Picture Archive (I, br, tr). Getty Images: From a young woman in a peignoir with her hairdresser, plate 31 from "Galerie des Modes et Costumes Francais" by Dupin / The Bridgeman Art Library (tc) 148 Corbis: Marie Antoinette by Elisabeth Vigee-Lebrun, Château de Versailles / Gallery Collection. 149 Alamy Images: Marie Antoinette and her four children by Elisabeth Louise Vigee-Lebrun, Château de Versailles / The Art Gallery Collection (br). Corbis: Archduchess Marie Antoinette Habsburg-Lotharingen by Martin Mytens the Younger, Schloss Schonbrunn, Vienna / The Gallery Collection (cr). Getty Images: Queen Marie Antoinette of France in a fashion plate; / Hulton Archive (c). Mary Evans Picture Library: Queen Marie Antoinette of France in hunting dress by Joseph Krazinger, Schoenbrunn Castle / Interfoto / Sammlung Rauch (bl). 150 The Bridgeman Art Library: From Andrew Drummond by Johann Zoffany, private collection (bl); From Viscount Tyrconnel with his family by Philippe Mercier, private collection / Mark Fiennes (tr); From Portrait of Charles John Crowle of Crowle Park by Pompeo

Girolamo Batoni, Louvre, Paris, France / Giraudon

(br). Corbis: From Nobleman's Dress by Le Clerc / Historical Picture Archive (c). 151 Banbury Museum: (tr, cr, crb). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Thomas Graham, Baron Lynedoch by David Allan, Yale Center for British Art, Paul Mellon Collection, USA (bc): From Portrait of William Perry with the Colosseum beyond by David Antonio, private collection / © Christie's Images (tl); From Louis-Antoine-Auguste Comte de Chabot and Duc de Rohan by Carmontelle, Musee Conde, Chantilly, France / Giraudon (bl); The Salon of Philippe Egalite Duc d'Orleans by Carmontelle/ private collection / Archives Charmet (tc). 152 Alamy Images: Portrait by unknown illustration from Social Caricature in the Eighteenth Century with over two hundred illustrations by George Paston, pseudonym of Emily Morse Symonds, London / The Print Collector (r). The Bridgeman Art Library: From "And Catch the Living Manners as they Rise," published by Hannah Humphrey, by James Gillray, © courtesy of the Warden and Scholars of New College, Oxford (tc). Getty Images: From The Triumph of Ridicule from an engraving by Almanacby Basset / DEA / De Agostini (bl). 153 The Art Archive: "Welladay! is this my son Tom?," satirical cartoon of a conservative father shocked by his son's new wig (bl). The Bridgeman Art Library: Street Walkers, etched by B. Smith, pub. by S.W. Fores, English School / © City of Westminster Archive Centre, London, UK (br); L'Agiateur du Palais Royal, engraved by Baguoi, plate no.282 from "Galeries des Modes et Costumes Francais" 99: clothing; traditional dress; traditional costume; fashion; illustration; c18th; fashionable; clothes; male; striped waistcoat; dandy; hat; scalloped coat; Watteau by Francois Louis Joseph / private collection / The Stapleton Collection (c). Peter Kennedy: Turf macaroni etching by Matthew Darly (tl). Photo SCALA, Florence: The St. James's Macaroni by James Bretherton, Guildhall Library & Art Gallery Heritage Images (tr). 154-155 Museum of London. 156 Alamy Images: From Mrs. Richard Brinsley Sheridan by Thomas Gainsborough / The Art Gallery Collection (br). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Rose Milles by George Romney, Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino, CA USA / © The Huntington Library, Art Collections & Botanical Gardens (c). Corbis: From Edwin from Dr. Beattie's by Joseph Wright of Derby / Christie's Images (tr). Getty Images: From George Drummond by Thomas Gainsborough, Ashmolean Museum of Art, University of Oxford, Oxfordshire, England / Peter Barritt (bl). 157 Alamy Images: From Mr. and Mrs. William Hallett ("The Morning Walk") by Thomas Gainsborough / Lebrecht Music and Arts Photo Library (bl). The Bridgeman Art Library: From Watkin E. Wynne by William Parry, National Museum Wales (tl) Corbis: From Gentleman in Walking Dress by Le Clerc and Loysard / Historical Picture Archive (tr); From Goethe in the Roman Campagna by Johann H.W. Tischbein, Stadel Museum, Frankfurt, Germany (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc) 158 The Art Archive: From Meeting at a Ball Bibliothèque des Arts Décoratifs Paris / Dagli Orti (br). Corbis: From The Charlatan by Pietro Longhi / Gustavo Tomsich (bl). Getty Images: From The Masque / Hulton Archive (tr). 159 The Art Archive: Bal de l'opera, or Opera Ball by Jean François Bosio (bc). The Bridgeman Art Library: From The Fair Nun Unmasked by Henry Robert Morland, Leeds Museums and Art Galleries (Temple Newsam House), UK (br). Getty Images: From The Costume Ball / The Bridgeman Art Library (tr); From The Masque / Hulton Archive (I, tc). 160-161 akgimages: Sultane (Jeanne Antoinette Poisson, Madame de Pompadour) by Charles André van Loo, Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris. 160 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 162 Alamy Images: From Racket Player, from The Venetians by Grevenbroeck, Museo Correr Venice / The Art Archive (bl). Corbis: From fulllength portrait of William St. Clair by George Chalmers / Bettmann (r). 163 Alamy Images: From Mr. and Mrs. Andrews by Thomas Gainsborough / The Art Gallery Collection (tl); From Resting While Out Hunting, from the Esterhazy Palace in Budapest, Hungary, artist unknown, National Gallery Budapest / The Art Archive (bl, tc); The Bridgeman Art Library: From The Boy with a Bat by Walter Hawkesworth Fawkes, Breamore House, Hampshire, UK (bc, tr); From Cricket Match Played by the Countess of Derby and Other Ladies, Marylebone Cricket Club, London, UK (bc, tr). Getty Images: From John Ward of Squerrie by Arthur Devis / The Bridgeman Art Library (br). 164-165 Blandford Fashion Museum. 166 Banbury Museum: (crb). The Bridgeman Art Library: George "Beau" Brummell by Robert Dighton / private collection (c). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl); Popperfoto

(cra); Time & Life Pictures (br). 166-167 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 167 Alamy Images: Playbill poster Sarah Bernhardt in Gismonda Théâtre de la Renaissance by Alphonse Mucha (Alfons Maria) Archivart (crb). Corbis: Sean Sexton Collection (c). Getty Images: Science & Society Picture Library (cr). 169 The Shoe Museum: W17+sD2! W17+sD2, W17+sD32 (br). 172-173 Getty Images: The Cloakroom, Clifton Assembly Rooms by Rolinda Sharples, Bristol City Museum and Art Gallery / The Bridgeman Art Library, 173 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 174 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr) 175 Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Sylvie Spectrum (cr). 176-177 Blandford Fashion Museum. 179 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). 182 Alamy Images: George "Beau" Brummell, illustration from Jesse's Life / Mary Evans Picture Library (br). The Bridgeman Art Library: George "Beau" Brummell by Robert Dighton / private collection (c). Corbis: George Brummel after a miniature by John Cook / Bettmann (cl). 183 Alamy Images: Beau Brummell. A young man asks "who's your fat friend?" engraving after J. Godwin, "The Wits and Beaux of Society" / Mary Evans Picture Library 184 Banbury Museum: (bl) 189 Banbury Museum: (bl). Blandford Fashion Museum: (br, cb, bra). 193 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br, bra). 194-195 Corbis: Empress Eugenie of France with ladies of her court by Franz Xaver Winterhalter, Château de Compiègne / The Art Archive. 195 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 196 Getty Images: Roger-Viollet (cl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Dr. and Mrs. Edward N. Goldstein, 1983 (2009.300.1000a, b) / Art Resource (br). 197 V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br). 197 Banbury Museum: (bc) Blandford Fashion Museum: (bl. tr). 198 Corbis: Elizabeth of Bavaria Empress of Austria by Franz Xavier Winterhalter, Bundesmobiliensammlung, Vienna / The Gallery Collection. 199 The Bridgeman Art Library: Visiting card of Charles Frederick Worth in fancy dress, Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris / Archives Charmet (cr); Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Mass., USA (bc) Getty Images: DEA Picture Library (c). TopFoto. co.uk: Roger-Viollet (br). 200 V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by Messrs Harrods Ltd (bl). 201 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br, bra, bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Ethel M. Dixon in memory of her mother, Annie Denton Merritt, 1953 (2009.300.777a–c) / Art Resource (tc). 202-203 Blandford Fashion Museum. 204 Blandford Fashion Museum: (cl. fcl.) 205 Alamy Images: Interfoto (tr). Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). 206 Blandford Fashion Museum: (cl, fcl, clb). 207 Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (bl). 208-209 The Bridgeman Art Library: Cincinnati Art Museum, Ohio, USA, 208 The Bridgeman Art Library: Cincinnati Art Museum, Ohio, USA (tc, tr). 209 The Bridgeman Art Library: Cincinnati Art Museum, Ohio, USA (tl, ca, tc, tr). 210 Blandford Fashion Museum: (c, bl, bc). 211 Alamy Images: German Gentleman / Mary Evans Picture Library (c): Thislife pictures (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / purchase, The German Fur Federation Gift, 1981 (1981.12.4a–c) (tr). 212-213 Corbis: The Print Collector. 213 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 214 Corbis: Stapleton Collection (bl); From Empress Elizabeth of Austria and Bavaria / Hulton-Deutsch Collection (bc) Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Dick S. Ramsav Fund, 1956 (2009.300.1900a-c) / Art Resource (tr). 215 Blandford Fashion Museum: (bl). Getty Images: From Coming Back From a Morning in the Bois by Francois Courboin / Stock Montage (tl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Mr. and Mrs. Morton Sultzer, 1979 (2009.300.532a-d) / Art Resource (c. tr), V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br). 216 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bc); Science & Society Picture Library (bl); Sean Sexton (br). 217 The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of George William Henry Venables, 7th Lord Vernon / National Trust Photographic Library / John Hammond (tc). Getty Images: Alinari Archives (tr); Hulton Archive (bc); London Stereoscopic Company (br). 218 The Bridgeman Art Library: A lady in her costume worn at the Eglington Tournament by Edward Henry Corbould / private collection / ©

Mallett Gallery, London, UK (br); Illustration from "Journal of Luxury and Fashion," French School / private collection (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Royals Collection / Lafayette (bl). 219 The Bridgeman Art Library: Fancy dress costume for Mephistopheles from "L'Art du Travestissement" by Leon Salut, French School / Bibliotheque des Arts Decoratifs Paris, France / Archives Charmet (bl, c); Fancy dress costume for a female devil, from "L'Art du Travestissement" by Leon Salut, French School Bibliotheque des Arts Decoratifs, Paris, France Archives Charmet (bl, c). 222-223 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 222 Corbis: Underwood & Underwood (ca). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (br). 223 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr, cl). Corbis: Bettmann (cb, br). Getty Images: Science & Society Picture Library (ca). 224 Alamy Images: Mary Evans Picture Library (c). Corbis: The Francis Frith Collection (bl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tr, br). 225 Alamy Images: Mary Evans Picture Library (tl, bc, tc); Vintage Images (bl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (r). 226 Alamy Images: Mary Evans Picture Library (r). Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (bc). Getty Images: (bl). 227 Alamy Images: Lordprice Collection (br). Corbis: Austrian Archives (tc); Bettmann (tl); Underwood & Underwood (bl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tr); Roger-Viollet (bc). 228 Blandford Fashion Museum: (bc). Corbis: Kirn Vintage Stock (bc). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (t). 229 The Shoe Museum: W19sD142 (br); W19bD73 (crb); W19bE1 (cfrb). 230 Corbis: Bettmann (bl); Hulton-Deutsch Collection (c). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tr). 231 Corbis: Bettmann (bl, bc); Hulton-Deutsch Collection (tl) Blandford Fashion Museum: (cra). 232 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of the estate of Mrs. Arthur F. Schermerhorn, 1957 (2009.300.1250a, b) / Art Resource (br, tr, c). 233 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Rodman A. Heeren 1959 (2009 300 3196) / Art Resource (tc) V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by the House of Worth (tl). Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr). 234-235 Corbis: Bettmann. 234 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 236 akg-images: (bl). Getty Images: (c); Hulton Archive (br), Mary Evans Picture Library: Epic (tr) 237 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (I, Evans Picture Library (tc). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum 2009: Gift of Jane Mead von Salis Funtanella, 1984 (2009.300.551) / Art Resource (bc). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (br). 238 The Bridgeman Art Library: Woman's WW1 American Red Cross Motor Services uniform: coat, breeches, coat belt, belt and cap with pin, 1917 (wool & leather), American School (20th century) / Philadelphia Museum of Art, Pennsylvania, USA / Gift of Mrs. Francis John Rumpf, 1972 (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive / F. J. Mortimer (br). 239 Getty Images: Hulton Archive / Topical Press Agency (tl); Hulton Archive (bl); Cover of "The Gentlewoman," a patriotic magazine, showing "Miss 1918," a woman in uniform against an American flag background, 1918, published by WJ Thompson & Company / Archive Photos / Buyenlarge (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / purchase, Irene Lewisohn beguest, 1951 (C.I. 51.97.26a–c) (tr); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Jane Darlington Irwin, 1981 (1981.523.4a–d) (c). 240 Corbis: (c). 241 Corbis: Amanaimages (tc); PoodlesRock (bc). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. Dail Wolkowitz, 1982 (2009.300.540a-c) / Art Resource (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl). 242 The Bridgeman Art Library: Archives Charmet, 243 Corbis: (cr). Photo SCALA Florence: Metropolitan Museum of Art Brooklyn Museum Costume (c); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Purchase Friends of The Costume Institute Gifts, 2005 (2005.199) (bl); White Images (br). 244 Corbis: (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by Lord and Lady Cowdray (tr). 245 The Bridgeman Art Library: Bibliothèque des Arts Décoratifs, Paris / Archives Charmet (tl). Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matthews Collection, Chertsey Museum (tr), Corbis: Philadelphia Museum of Art

(bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (c); Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mary Cheney Platt, 1966 (2009.300.23a, b) / Art Resource (br). 246 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (bc); Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. V. D. Crisp, 1963 (2009.300.3248) / Art Resource (br). 247 Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art. Gift. of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. Norman W. Wassman, 1956 (2009.300.2802) / Art Resource (tc, tr); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. George Henry O'Neil, 1968 (C.I.68.48a–e) (bc); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (bl). Blandford Fashion Museum (br). 248 Getty Images. 249 Alamy Images: Pictorial Press Ltd (cr), Corbis: DPA (c) Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / purchase, Friends of The Costume Institute Gifts 2005 (2005 114a h) (bl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. John Chambers Hughes, 1958 (C.I.58.34.18a–c) (bc). 250 Alamy Images: Amoret Tanner (c). Corbis: Bettmann (tr); Condé Nast Archive (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / purchase, The New York Historical Society, by exchange, 1984 (1984.28a- c) (br). 251 Alamy Images: Lordprice Collection (br); Mary Evans Picture Library (tc). Blandford Fashion Museum (bc). Corbis: Bettmann (tl). Gettv Images: Hulton Archive (bl, tr). 252 Banbury Museum (fbl, bl). Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (br); Minnesota Historical Society (tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bc). 253 Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (tl); National Geographic Society / Clifton R. Adams (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. Egbert J. Sormani, 1966 (2009.300.400a-c) / Art Resource (b) tr) The Shoe Museum: IW19sD99 (cra) 254-255 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive. 255 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 256 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). Museum of London: (bc). Photo SCALA. Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw, 1960 (2009.300.1276) / Art Resource (bl). The Shoe Museum: LW19sE31 (crb): LW19sE29 (br). 257 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl, tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by Lord and Lady Cowdray (tc) 258-259 Museum of London. 260 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (c). Blandford Fashion Museum: (bl, clb). Corbis: Bettmann (br, tr, r). 261 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). Corbis: National Geographic Society / Clifton R. Adams (bc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tc, tr). 262 Corbis: (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Albert Moss, 1967 (2009 300 906a-f) / Art Resource (bc) V&A Images Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (r). 263 Corbis: Bettmann (tl, bc); John Springer Collection (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tc); Science & Society Picture Library (bl, br). 264 Corbis: Bettmann (bl); Underwood & Underwood (bc). 265 Blandford Fashion Museum: (cra, cr, fcr). Corbis: Bettmann (bc); The Francis Frith Collection (tl) Hulton-Deutsch Collection (tc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl). The Shoe Museum: LW19sD19 (crb); LM19sD18 (bra); LM19sD6 (br). 266 Corbis: John Springer Collection (c). Photo SCALA, Florence: Modello di Tuta (model of overalls) Michehelles Ernesto Thayaht, Michehelles Collection (bl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (bc). 267 akg-images: Les Arts Décoratifs, Paris / Jean Tholance (tc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Arturo and Paul Peralta-Ramos, 1955 (2009.300.2423a, b) / Art Resource (tl); (bl). 270 Alamy Images: Pictorial Press Ltd (bc). Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). Corbis: Bettmann (bl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (br). 270-271 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 271 Alamy Images: MPVHistory (ca). Banbury Museum: (cr). Getty Images: AFP (bl); (cl); Hulton Archive (bc). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Arturo and

Paul Peralta-Ramos, 1954 (2009.300.2785a, b) (br). 273 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr, tcr, tl, tcl, bcr). The Shoe Museum: W19sD157 (br); W19sD126 (crb). 274 Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art / gift of Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, Jr / Art Resource (bl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Madame Madeleine Vionnet, 1952 (C.I.52.18.4) (bc); Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art. Gift of the estate of Mary / Art Resource (r). 275 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tc). Corbis: Bettmann (br). Photo SCALA. Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of Mrs. Hollis K. Thayer / Art Resource (tl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (bl, bc, tr). 276 Getty Images: George Marks (tr); Roger Viollet (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Bettina Ballard, 1952 (2009.300.1174) / Art Resource (c, br). 277 Banbury Museum: (cr) Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (tc). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Madame Eta Hentz, 1946 (2009.300.119) / Art Resource (bc); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource Brenner Couture Inc. Fund, 1978 (1978.278.4) (tr): The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. Harrison Williams, 1948 (C.I.48.15.3a, b) (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl). 278-279 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive. 278 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 279 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (ca). 280 The Bridgeman Art Library: private collection (c). Corbis: Bettmann (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (br). The Shoe Museum: Point of sale board for Clarks shoes (bl). 281 Blandford Fashion Museum: (cra). Getty Images: Gamma-Keystone (br); Science & Society Picture Library (I); Hulton Archive (bc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by Margaret, Duchess of Argyll and worn by her while she was Mrs. Charles Sweeny (tc). 282 Corbis: Bettmann (br); Hulton-Deutsch Collection (c). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl): Science & Society Picture Library (tr). 283 Alamy Images: Amoret Tanner (br). Corbis: Bettmann (bc); Hulton-Deutsch Collection (bl). Getty Images: Science & Society Picture Library (tl, tc, tr). 284-285 Museum of London. 286 The Bridgeman Art Library: Edward, Prince of Wales by Sir William Orpen / Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrew's, Scotland (c) Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (br): Hulton-Deutsch Collection (cl, bl). 287 Corbis: Bettmann. 288 Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (bc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl): Roger-Viollet (br) TopFoto.co.uk: (tr). 289 Corbis: Bettmann (r); Hulton-Deutsch Collection (bl). Getty Images:Hulton Archive (tl); (tc). 290 akg-images: Ullstein bild (bl, tc). Getty Images: Gamma-Keystone (c); Hulton Archive (br). 291 akg-images: (tl, tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl, br). 292 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. Anthony Wilson, 1963 (2009,300,2522a, b) / Art Resource (br); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. John Chambers Hughes 1958 (C.I.58.34.19a, b) (bl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. Harrison Williams, 1948 (C.I.48.15.1a-c) (bc). 293 Corbis: Bettmann (tr). Getty Images: Time & Life Pictures (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Millicent Huttleston Rogers, 1949 (2009.300.2754) / Art Resource (br): The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Paulette Winston Zerner, 1964 (C.I.64.21.1) (tl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London; (c), 294 Corbis: Philadelphia Museum of Art (tr). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller (bl, fbl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of the estate of Elinor S. Gimbel, 1984 (2009.300.1008a–c) / Art Resource (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (c). 295 akg-images: Les Arts Décoratifs, Paris / Jean Tholance (tl). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Mrs. V. D. Crisp, 1963 (2009.300.324) / Art Resource (br); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. Lawrence W. Snell, 1973 (1973.199.1) (c); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (bl).

V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tr). 298 Banbury Museum: (br, cl). Getty Images: Eggit (tc). 299 Corbis: J. Baylor Roberts / National Geographic Society (bc). Getty Images: J. A. Hampton (I); Planet News Archive (br). 300 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). 300-301 Blandford Fashion Museum. 302 Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl); Popperfoto (bc). 303 Banbury Museum: (bc). Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). Getty Images: Michael Ochs Archives (tr): Gamma-Keystone (bl): Hulton Archive (tc). 304 Blandford Fashion Museum: (c). Getty Images: Popperfoto (br). The Shoe Museum: *W19sD165 (clb). 305 Banbury Museum: (br) Blandford Fashion Museum: (bl). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tl); (tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by the Board of Trade, through Sir Thomas Barlow, Director General of Civilian Clothing (c). 306-307 The Kobal Collection: MGM. 306 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 308 Corbis: Bettmann (tr). Getty Images: (bl). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Janet Chatfield-Taylor, 1962 (C.I.62.4.4a, b) (bc); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Claire McCardell, 1949 (C.I.49.37.15a, b) (br). 309 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). Corbis: Bettmann (tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Helen Cookman, 1957 (2009.300.240a-c) / Art Resource (tl, bl); The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Claire McCardell, 1949 (C.I.49.37.30a-d) (c). 310 Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (br); Genevieve Navlor (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bc). Mary Evans Picture Library: National Magazine Company (bl). 311 Corbis: Bettmann (bc, br) Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tc, tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (I). 314 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). 314-315 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 314 Corbis: Bettmann (c, bl); Sunset Boulevard (bc). 315 Corbis: Bettmann (cra); Sunset Boulevard (c). Getty Images: Redferns (br); Bob Thomas (bl) 316 Banbury Museum: (bc). Blandford Fashion Museum: (cl). Getty Images: Pat English (br). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (c). TopFoto.co.uk: Topham Picturepoint (tr). 317 Banbury Museum: (bl). Getty Images: Keystone (tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Claire Ramsay Roman, 1986 (2009.300.1370) / Art Resource (tl). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (c). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br) 318 Getty Images: Gamma-Keystone. 319 Corbis: Bettmann (c); Condé Nast Archive (cra); Reuters (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: Given by the Baroness Alain de Rothschild (bc). 320 Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matthews Collection, Chertsey Museum (all). 322 TopFoto.co.uk: Roger-Viollet (c). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl. tr) 323 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr, ca). TopFoto.co.uk: Roger-Viollet (tc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl, bl, bc). 324-325 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive. 325 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 326 Mary Evans Picture Library: National Magazine Company (tr). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (br). TopFoto.co.uk: Roger-Viollet (c). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl). 327 Blandford Fashion Museum: (bc). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / William Wain at Antiquarius (crb); Judith Miller / Cristobal (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of Josephine Abercrombie, 1953 (2009.300.784) / Art Resource (tc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl, tr). 328-329 Mary Evans Picture Library: National Magazine Company. 329 Alamy Images: Allstar Picture Library (br). Corbis: Ramon Manent courtesy of Museum of Textil y de la indumentaria, Barcelona (c). Getty Images: Roger-Viollet (cr). Mary Evans Picture Library: National Magazine Company (bl). 330 The Bridgeman Art Library: (tr). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009; Gift of the estate of Sophy Tepperman, 1978 (2009.300.528a, b) / Art Resource (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (c). 331 The Bridgeman Art Library: Gift of Marilyn M. Maxwell (c). Corbis: Bettmann (bl, tr).

V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum,

London: (br, tl). 332 Alamy Images: fashion, Defaka (department store) fashion catalogue, Germany 1957 title page illustration showing Petra Schuermann, Miss World of 1956, advertising men's fashion, ladies' fashion, tippet, tippets, wool, jacket, coat, hat, handbag, purse, 1950s, 50s historic, historical, skirt, elegant, elegance, Schurmann, Schuermann / Interfoto (bc). Corbis: Two Women with Prize Winning Cat / Blue Lantern Studio (bl). 333 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr) Getty Images: Art Rickerby (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: Brooklyn Museum Costume Collection at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of the Brooklyn Museum, 2009: Gift of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Zicklin, 1985 (2009.300.555) / Art Resource (c). 334 Blandford Fashion Museum: (c). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Wallis and Wallis (ca, bl): Judith Miller / Richard Gibbon (cl). 335 Blandford Fashion Museum (tr). 336 Advertising Archives: (bl). Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (br). 337 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (bc) Corbis: Bettmann (br). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Cloud Cuckoo Land (cra, crb); Judith Miller Sparkle Moore at The Girl Can't Help It (cr). Getty Images: Archivio Cameraphoto Epoche (bl): Chervl Maeder (tr). 338 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tr). Corbis: Bettmann (bc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive / Brian Challis (tc): Retrofile / George Marks (fbl); Hulton Archive / Keystone (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br). 339 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br). Getty Images: Paramount Pictures (I). 340 Corbis: Bettmann (I) Rex Features: Daily Mail (tr). TopFoto.co.uk: Ken Russell (br). 341 Blandford Fashion Museum: (crb, br). TopFoto.co.uk: Ken Russell (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum. London: (tl, c, tr). 342-343 Corbis: John Springer Collection. 343 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 344 Alamy Images: Interfoto (bc). Banbury Museum: (bl). Getty Images: Popperfoto (r). 345 Advertising Archives: (br). Corbis: William Gottlieb (tr). Getty Images: Michael Ochs Archives (bl); Keystone Features (tl); Don Cravens (bc). 346 Corbis: H. Armstrong Roberts / ClassicStock (bc); Camerique / ClassicStock (r). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bl). 347 Alamy Images: Keystone Pictures USA (bl). Corbis: Rettmann (tc): Universal / TempSport (tr) Getty Images: Orlando (br). 350 Alamy Images: B. Christopher (cr); Zuma Press Inc (c). Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (br). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bc). 351 Alamy Images: Richard Levine (crb). Corbis: Rune Hellestad (c); Neal Preston (br); Douglas Kirkland (bl, cr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tl, clb). 352 Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Freeman's (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bc). 352-383 Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller (t). 353 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (I). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Steinberg and Tolkien (tc); Judith Miller / Roxanne Stuart (crb); Judith Miller / Wallis and Wallis (bc, br) 354 Alamy Images: Interfoto (cl): Pictorial Press Ltd (bl). Getty Images: Popperfoto (c); (bc). 355 Getty Images: Popperfoto. 356 The Bridgeman Art Library: Museum Purchase (tr). Corbis: Bettmann (bl); Condé Nast Archive (bc, br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc), 357 Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (r). TopFoto.co.uk: Roger-Viollet (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl) 358-359 Mirrorpix: Julian Brown. 359 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 360 Corbis: Hulton-Deutsch Collection (tr). Getty Images: Terry O'Neill (c). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl). 361 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tl). Corbis: CinemaPhoto (bc); Condé Nast Archive (cr). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Linda Bee (tr); Judith Miller / Mary Ann's Collectible (cra); Judith Miller (ftr). 362 Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Mrs. Claus von Bülow, 1971 (1971.79.4) (r). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl, bc). 362-363 The Bridgeman Art Library: Gift of Judy Robinson. 363 Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller / Sara Covelli (bc); Judith Miller (br). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource / Gift of Baron Philippe de Rothschild, 1983 (1983.619.1a, b) (tc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl, tr). 364 Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller (br). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (cla). Mary Evans Picture Library: National Magazine Company (bc) Rex Features: David Graves (c). 365 TopFoto.co.uk. 366 Alamy Images: Pictorial Press Ltd (tr). Getty Images: Terrence Spencer (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bc, br). 367 Rex Features: (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc, l). 368 The Bridgeman Art Library: (bl). Rex Features: Pierluigi Praturlon (r). 369 Getty Images: Frederic Lewis (tr); Terrence

Spencer (br); Evening Standard (tl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc, bl). 370 Corbis: John Springer Collection, 371 Alamy Images: Interfoto (bl). Corbis: Bettmann (cra); Sygma (c). Rex Features: Evening Standard / Alex Lentati (br). 372 Blandford Fashion Museum: (br, bc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tr). 373 Advertising Archives: (cra). Getty Images: AFP (tl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (c). 374-375 TopFoto.co.uk: Colin Jones. 374 Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. 376 Blandford Fashion Museum: (bc, bl, clb). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tr, bc, br). 378-379 Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matthews Collection, Chertsey Museum (all). 380 Getty Images: Hulton Archive Frank Barralt (bc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (r). 381 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (bl, bc). Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (tr). Getty Images: Hulton Archive / Roy Jones (tl); Hulton Archive (br). 382 Blandford Fashion Museum: (fcl. cl). Corbis: Bettmann (bc): Condé Nast Archive (tr). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller (fbl, fclb). Smithsonian: National Museum of American History Costume Collection (fbr) V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl). 383 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (bl). Corbis: Steve Schapiro (bc, r). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc, tl). 384 Dorling Kindersley: Dominic Winter / Fieldings Auctioneers. 386 Alamy Images: AF archive (bc); Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Jan Butchofsky (c): Quadrillion (cra): Rune Hellestad (cr). 387 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr); Pictorial Press Ltd (cb). Corbis: Imaginechina (br); Neal Preston (I); Sygma (bc); Brooks Kraft (cra). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (tc). 389 Corbis: Bureau L.A. Collection (tc). Getty Images: Wirelmage (br). The Kobal Collection: Paramount (tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bc). 390 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (cl); WWD / Condé Nast (br). Dorling Kindersley: Dominic Winter / Fieldings Auctioneers (bc). Getty Images: Wirelmage (c). 391 Corbis: DPA. 392 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Julio Donoso / Sygma (br); Jean-François Rault / Kipa (bc); Pierre Vauthey / Sygma (tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc, l). 393 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: Pierre Vauthey / Sygma (bc). Getty Images: Princess Diana Archive (crb, cr); Tim Graham (br). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tc). 394 Corbis: Reuters. 395 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: Kipa / Eric Fougere (cr); Reuters (c). Getty Images: AFP (br). Press Association Images: (bl). 396 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Petre Buzoianu (br); Vittoriano Rastelli (bc). Getty Images: Andrea Blanch (bl). 397 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: Bettmann (tc); Condé Nast Archive (tl); Stephen Lock / I-Images / ZUMA Press (r). Getty Images: AFP / Yoshikazu Tsuno (bc); Stan Honda (bl). 398 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). 399 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). 400 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). The Bridgeman Art Library: Cape, pants, and clogs, 1973 (cotton plain weave), Yamamoto, Kansa (b.1944) / Philadelphia Museum of Art, Pennsylvania, USA / Gift of Hess's Department Store, Allentown, 1974 (tr). Corbis: William Coupon (clb). Getty Images: Daniel Simon (bc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br). 401 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (ftr). Getty Images: Gamma-Rapho (bc, r, tr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl, tc, bl). 402 Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast. 403 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast (c). Getty Images: Gamma Rapho (bc). Rex Features: Evening Standard (br); SIPA (cr). 404 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Getty Images: Manchester Daily Express / SSPL (bl); Evening Standard (tr). 405 Alamy Images: David Hoffman Photo Library (tc); Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (ftr). Corbis: Yuriko Nakao / Reuters (bc); Neal Preston (tl). Getty Images: lan Gavan (br); Dave Hogan (bl); Virginia Turbett (tr). 406 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (br, tl); Pictorial Press Ltd (tr). Corbis: Bettmann (bl). Getty Images: Oliver Morris (bc). 407 Alamy Images: AF Archive (tc); PYMCA (bc); Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (bl, tr). Fotolia: Yuri Arcurs. Getty Images: Michael Grecco (tl); Dave Hogan (r). 408-409 Rex Features: Paul Massey. 409 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). 410 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (bl); Reuters (r). Getty Images: Jeff Christensen (bc): SGranitz (tc), 411 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: Condé Nast Archive (tc). Getty Images: Antonio de Moraes Barros Filho (hc): Pierre Verdv (bl); Victor Virgile (r). Photo SCALA, Florence: The Metropolitan Museum of Art / Art Resource (tl). 412 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Mauro Carraro / Sygma (tr); Joe Giron (bl); Condé Nast Archive (tc) Getty Images: Rosie Greenway (br); J. Quinton (bc). 413 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tc). Corbis: Andrew Gombert / epa (c). Getty Images: Jeff Kravitz (bl); Joe McNally (tl); Victor Virgile (tr); Neil Mockford (br). 414-415 Getty Images: Bloomberg. 415 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). 416 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl). Corbis: Reimschuessel / Splash News (bl); Frank Trapper (tr, br). Getty Images: Steve Granitz (bc); SGranitz (tc). 417 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: Chris Farina (tl); Leonard Ortiz / Zuma Press (bl): Vincent Kessler / Reuters (c): Andrew Ross (r). 418 Corbis: Reuters. 419 Alamy Images: Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tr). Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast (c, bl, br); Condé Nast Archive (cr). 420 Alamy Images: AlamyCelebrity (tr); Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (tl) Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast (c. br) Getty Images: Samir Hussein (bl). 421 Alamy Images: Marco Mega (l, bc, br); Trinity Mirror / Mirrorpix (ftr). Corbis: WWD / Condé Nast (tl, tc, tr). 422 Banbury Museum: (fcl, cl). Blandford Fashion Museum: (fcr, br, bl). 423 Banbury Museum: (tr). Blandford Fashion Museum: (cl. bl, c). Getty Images: FilmMagic (fbr); Joe McNally (br). 424 Corbis: From Nobleman's Dress by Le Clerc / Historical Picture Archive (cl); Small standing statuette of a priest found in Saqqara in 1872, Egypt / Sandro Vannini (tc). Getty Images: Hulton Archive (bc, fbr); (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (br). 425 Getty Images: Detail of two falconers, from the Stag Room, Palais des Papes, Avignon / The Bridgeman Art Library (tl); Hulton Archive (cl, fbl); DEA Picture Library (c); Science & Society Picture Library (cr); NBC (bl); (bc); FilmMagic (br); WireImage (fbr) Museum of London (c), 426 Blandford Fashion Museum: (bc, br). The Shoe Museum: W17+sD16 (cla); W18bD9 (cra); W17+sD25 (ca); W19sD97 (cl): IW19sD99 (cr): IW19sD77 (c) W19+sD2 (bl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tr). 427 Banbury Museum: (cla). Blandford Fashion Museum: (cla, clb). Dorling Kindersley: Dominic Winter / Fieldings Auctioneers (bc). The Shoe Museum: W17sD1 (tr); W18+bD33 (ca); W18+m8 (cra); W19sE32 (c). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl). 428 Banbury Museum: (tr). Blandford Fashion Museum: (br, cla, fcla, fcra, cr, fcl, cl, fcr, bcr). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (ca, bl, bc). 429 Blandford Fashion Museum: (cr, fcl, tcl, tcr, tr, cla, cra, cl, fcr, fcla). Getty Images: AFP (br); FilmMagic (bc). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (tl, bl, cr). 430 Alamy Images: Peter Horree (bc). Blandford Fashion Museum: (fcra), 431 Blandford Fashion Museum: (tcr). Dorling Kindersley: Judith Miller (cra); Judith Miller and Wallis (cl). Getty Images: (br); MCT (bl). 432 Banbury Museum: (tr, cl). Blandford Fashion Museum: (cr). Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matthews Collection, Chertsey Museum (ca). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: (bl, bc). 433 Banbury Museum: (cr, bl). Blandford Fashion Museum: (tc, cl). The Bridgeman Art Library: Portrait of Mette (Mathildis) von Munchhausen, by Ludger Tom Ring the Younger / Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg, Germany, (ca). Photograph by John Chase: Olive Matth Collection, Chertsey Museum (cl, cra, tl). V&A Images \ Victoria and Albert Museum, London: bc). 434 Getty Images: Hola Images (t). 437 Corbis: Biserka Livaja (b); Marilyn Angel Wynn / Nativestock Pictures (t). 445 Fotolia: Franck Boston (b). 449 Alamy Images: Imagebroker (t). iStockphoto.com: Eva Serrabassa (b/Glossary) 450 Getty Images: Jupiter Images (b). 454 Getty Images: Alison Wright (t). 457 Corbis: Zulu Hunting Dance Near the Engooi Mountains, from "The Kafirs Illustrated" by George French Angas, 1849 / Stapleton Collection (t), 459 Dorling Kindersley: Bethany Dawn (br). 461 Getty Images: Imagemore Co., Ltd. (t); Runstudio (b) 462 Getty Images: Uniquely India (b). 463 Getty Images: Photodisc (t); (b).

Jacket images: Front: keepdesigning.com: ~gtsat c; Front Endpapers: Getty Images: Altrendo 0

All other images © Dorling Kindersley. For further information see: www.dkimages.com

The publisher would also like to thank the following companies, organizations, museums and individuals for their generosity in allowing Dorling Kindersley access to their exhibits and private collections for photography:

Museum of London

150 London Wall, London, EC2Y 5HN, UK www.museumoflondon.org.uk Features: Embroidered Mantua; Streamlined Court Suit: Dance Dress: Plus Fours Suit

The Blandford Fashion Museum

Lime Tree House, The Plocks, Blandford Forum, Dorset, DT11 7AA, UK www.theblandfordfashionmuseum.co.uk Assistance on photoshoots: Isobel Gilpin, Ann Bell, June Boutelle, Jean Longley, Stella Walker, Diana Foster-Williams, and Maureen Strong Features: Sack Back Dress; Regency Pelisse; Bustle Skirt; Women's Legion (see picture credits for full listing)

The Shoe Museum

C & J Clark Ltd, High Street, Street, BA16 0EQ, UK Features: Women's Shoes (see picture credits for full listing)

The Olive Matthews Collection

Chertsey Museum, 33 Windsor Street, Chertsey, Surrey KT16 8AT www.chertseymuseum.org.uk Features: Wedding Dress; Jean Muir Classic; Power Suit

Central Saint Martins College of Art and Design

Museum and Study Collection, Granary Building, 1 Granary Square, King's Cross, London, N1C 4AA, UK www.csm.arts.ac.uk

Banbury Museum

Spiceball Park Road, Banbury, OX16 2PG, UK www.banburymuseum.org

Museum Resource Centre

Cotswold Dene, Standlake, Witney, OXON, OX29 7QG, UK

Felicity J Warnes

The Old Bookshop, 36 Gordon Road, Enfield, North London, EN2 OPZ, UK www.fjwarnes.u-net.com Over 20,000 books on costume, jewelry, lace, textiles, fashion, beads, embroidery, and needlework

Angels the Costumiers & Angels Fancy Dress 1 Garrick Road, London, NW9 6AA, UK www.angels.uk.com

Sarah Thursfield

The Medieval Tailor www.sarahthursfield.com Features: Short Tunic and Peplos Style; Cote-hardie; Doublet and hose Sarah Thursfield started to sew over 50 years ago and took City and Guilds Fashion in the early 1980s, since when she has been supplying clothing to reenactors and museums. She researched and wrote The Medieval Tailor's Assistant (Ruth Bean 2001) and continues to investigate and reconstruct the methods of early tailors and seamstresses and to teach these to others.

The publisher would like to thank the following people from Smithsonian Enterprises:

Carol LeBlanc, Vice President; Brigid Ferraro, Director of Licensing; Ellen Nanney, Licensing Manager; Kealy Wilson, Product Development Coordinator

Dorling Kindersley would like to thank the following people for their help in the preparation of this book:

UK

Additional editing: Paula Regan, Sam Atkinson, Laura Wheadon, and Wendy Horobin. Additional design: Maxine Pedliham (Timelines/Reference features), Helen Spencer, and Jacqui Swan. Design assistance: Johnny Pau, Laura Roberts, and Natalie Godwin.

Production editor: Rebekah Parsons-King.

Proofreading: Caroline Hunt and Joanna Chisholm. Index: Helen Peters.

Delhi

Editorial assistance: Gaurav Joshi, Vibha Malhotra, Suparna Sengupta, Antara Moitra, and Monica Saigal. Design assistance: Jomin Johny, Priyanka Singh, and Shreya Sadhan